549. If the condition allows rescission notwithstanding any intermediate negotiation or litigation with respect to the requisition, an attempt by the vendor to comply with the same is no waiver of the right to rescind (c); but in the absence of such words a vendor who attempts to answer the unwelcome requisition may lose his right to rescind unless he answers “without prejudice” (d), or unless the right to rescind only arises on “insistence,” for that implies the necessity for an answer (e). Where the condition is so framed, the vendor can rescind at any time before final judgment (f), but after judgment has been given against him he cannot do so (g). Where, however, the vendor rescinds pending litigation, and the conduct of the purchaser has been reasonable, the court may order the vendor to pay the costs of the litigation till rescission, in addition to the costs of investigation of the title and the return of the deposit (h). If the vendor himself seeks to enforce the contract, he may be deemed to have waived his right to rescind under the condition; but he may, perhaps, revert to it, if he afterwards discontinues the proceedings, on paying the costs (i).

550. Where the contract contains a condition for rescission, and also a condition for compensation in case of error in the description of the property, and the matter objected to falls within the latter condition, the purchaser cannot insist upon compensation if the vendor chooses to rescind under the former condition (k).

Lee* (1865), 3 H. & C. 651, the condition entitled the vendor either to answer or to rescind, and negotiation was not to affect the latter right; on the ground that he had disputed, not negotiated, the vendor was not allowed to rescind; and see *M'Culloch v. Identity.

SUB-SECT. 6.—Identity.

551. It is usually provided that the purchaser shall admit the identity of the property purchased by him with that comprised in the title deeds upon the evidence afforded by comparison of the descriptions in the particulars and in the title deeds, and that no further evidence of identity shall be required (l). If the comparison affords no evidence that the property sold corresponds with that described in the abstracted documents (m), or if the descriptions in the abstracted documents differ from one another and from those in the particulars (n), even though the purchaser is precluded by this condition from calling for further evidence, yet, in the absence of satisfactory evidence of identity, the vendor's title is not established, and he cannot require the purchaser to complete; and the vendor is not relieved by the condition from pointing out the entire property sold (o).

Mixed lands of different tenures.

552. Where the lands sold are of different tenures, or are copyholds held of different manors, it is usual to provide that the vendor shall not be required to distinguish the particular lands held on each tenure or of each manor (p): in the absence of such condition the lands of each tenure or manor would have to be identified (q).

SUB-SECT. 7.—Misdescription.

Misdescription.

553. The conditions usually provide for the case of error in the description of the property, and either allow or exclude the right to compensation (r). Such a provision is intended to guard against unintentional errors, and does not therefore apply to cases of actual fraud or of misrepresentation calculated materially to mislead the purchaser (s).

[1891] 3 Ch. 405; Vowles v. Bristol etc. Building Society (1900), 44 Sol. Jo. 592. In Re Terry and White's Contract (1886), 32 Ch. D. 14, C. A., there was a condition excluding compensation, and the vendor was held entitled to rescind under a condition in that behalf against a purchaser seeking to enforce the contract with compensation. As to compensation generally, see pp. 328 et seq., post.

(l) See Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XII., p. 279; Bird v. Fox (1853), 11 Hare, 40, 48. A statutory declaration of possession or receipt of rents and profits for twelve years or other period is usually offered. The condition will require the purchaser to bear the expense of the declaration, unless it is really wanted for the establishment of the title, and then the expense should be borne by the vendor.

Compensation.

Rescission in lieu of compensation.

554. In the first form of condition it is stipulated that any error or omission in the description of the property shall not annul the sale, but shall be the subject of compensation on either side, and provision is made for settling the amount of the compensation by arbitration or otherwise (t). Under such a condition the vendor cannot insist on the purchaser taking, with compensation, a property substantially different from that which he agreed to buy (u); but, if there is no substantial difference, the purchaser must complete the purchase and accept compensation for any deficiency notwithstanding that the deficiency is considerable (v).

On this principle the purchaser is entitled to be relieved from the contract, without resorting to the condition for compensation, if the legal character or incidents of the property sold differ materially from those set out in the particulars (a), or if it is subject to rights the court that he has done all he can to avoid misunderstanding and mistake (Turquand v. Rhodes (1868), 37 L. J. (CH.) 830).

(t) See Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XII., p. 280; Leslie v. Thompson (1851) 9 Hare, 268, 273; see also title MINES, MINERALS, AND QUARRIES, Vol. XX., p. 545. As to the other form of condition, see p. 332, post. Fiduciary vendors may make use of a condition in this form; see Hobson v. Bell (1839), 2 Beav. 17; Dunn v. Flood (1885), 28 Ch. D. 586, 591, C. A.; Re Chifferiel, Chifferiel v. Watson (1888), 40 Ch. D. 45. The court does not decree specific performance with compensation against trustee-vendors who have been grossly negligent, but leaves the purchaser to his remedy at law against the trustees (White v. Cuddon (1842), 8 Cl. & Fin. 766, 787, H. L.).

(u) "Where the misdescription, although not proceeding from fraud, is in a material and substantial point so far affecting the subject-matter of the contract that it may reasonably be supposed that, but for such misdescription, the purchaser might never have entered into the contract at all, in such case the contract is avoided altogether, and the purchaser is not bound to resort to the clause of compensation. Under such a state of facts, the purchaser may be considered as not having purchased the thing that was really the subject of sale" (Flight v. Booth (1834), 1 Bing. (N. C.) 370, per TINDAL, C.J., at p. 377; see Jacobs v. Revell, [1900] 2 Ch. 858, 864; Jones v. Edney (1812), 3 Camp. 285 (sale of a public-house described as "free," but in fact tied)).

As to the case where the property is greater than was supposed, see note (e), p. 330, post.

(a) E.g., where land is sold as copyhold, being in part freehold (Ayles v. Cox (1852), 16 Beav. 23), or as freehold, but, owing to its having formerly been copyhold, the minerals are reserved to the lord of the manor (Upperton v. Nickolson (1871), 6 Ch. App. 436; Kerr v. Pauson (1858), 25 Beav. 394; see Bellamy v. Debenham, [1891] 1 Ch. 412, C. A.; but contra, if, in virtue of a composition with the lord, the copyhold tenure is hardly distinguishable from freehold (Price v. Macaulay (1852), 2 De G. M. & G. 339, C. A.), and a customary freehold descendible under the custom of borough-English (see title REAL PROPERTY AND CHATELS REAL, Vol. XXIV., p. 155) may be rightly described as freehold (Wadmore v. Toller (1889), 6 T. L. R. 58); or again, where leaseholds, though held for a long term, are sold as freehold (Drew v. Corpe (1804), 9 Ves. 368), or the length of a term is greatly overstated (Nash v. Wooderson (1884), 52 L. T. 49), or an underlease as a lease (Madeley v. Booth (1848), 2 De G. & Sm. 718; Broom v. Phillips (1896), 74 L. T. 459), or land is sold as building land, when subject in fact to a right of way (Dykes v. Blake (1838), 4 Bing. (N. C.) 463), or there is a mistake as to identity (Leach v. Mullett (1827), 3 C. & P. 115).

of third parties which materially interfere with its enjoyment (b) or value (c), or if a part of the property material to its enjoyment is missing (d), or where an error in quantity is so great as not to be a proper subject for compensation (e); and the condition does not apply to cases where it is impossible to assess the compensation (f).

555. Where the vendor has not got the interest which he has agreed to sell, the purchaser is in general entitled to take such interest as he has, subject to an abatement of the price, notwithstanding that he thus obtains an interest materially different from that which he agreed to buy. Thus the court has assessed compensation in the case of a sale in fee by a vendor who was entitled in remainder and could not get in the life estate (g), or who had only an estate pur autre vie (h); on a sale of leaseholds

(b) Such as undisclosed easements (Shackleton v. Sutcliffe (1847), 1 De G. & Sm. 609), or undisclosed restrictive covenants (Flight v. Booth (1834), 1 Bing. (N. C.) 370; Rudd v. Lascelles, [1900] 1 Ch. 815; see Cato v. Thompson (1882), 9 Q. B. D. 616, 618. C. A.; Pemsel and Wilson v. Tucker, [1907] 2 Ch. 191). A public body buying under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 18), takes free from the covenant, and pays compensation to the covenantee (Kirby v. Harrogate School Board, [1896] 1 Ch. 437, C. A.). The existence of a sewer under the garden attached to a house may be a subject for compensation (Re Brewer and Hankins's Contract (1899), 80 L. T. 127, C. A.; and see Shepherd v. Croft, [1911] 1 Ch. 521).

(c) Where, for instance, it is subject to a lease for lives at a low rent (Hughes v. Jones (1861), 3 De G. F. & J. 307, C. A.).

(d) See, e.g., Dobell v. Hutchinson (1835), 3 Ad. & El. 355 (yard described as part of the property sold, but in fact held by the vendor at a yearly rent); Brewer v. Brown (1884), 28 Ch. D. 309 (house and garden described as enclosed by rustic wall with tradesmen's entrance, though the wall did not in fact belong to the property, and the entrance was used on sufferance); Stanton v. Tattersall (1853), 1 Sm. & G. 529 (situation of house misdescribed through the particulars failing to indicate the peculiar nature of the access to the house); Peers v. Lambert (1844), 7 Beav. 546 (sale of a wharf with jetty, but the latter in fact removable at will by a third party).

(e) Durham (Earl) v. Legard (1865), 34 Beav. 611. Where there is a large error to the prejudice of the vendor, the purchaser may be able to rescind instead of paying an increased price as compensation (Price v. North (1837), 2 Y. & G. (EX.) 620); if not he must give compensation under the condition (Leslie v. Tompson (1851), 9 Hare, 268). In Orange to Wright (1885), 54 L. J. (CH.) 590, compensation was refused to the vendor; and see Bourne v. London and County Land and Building Co., [1885] W. N. 109; but the condition is intended for the benefit of each party.

(f) Sherwood v. Robins (1828), Mood. & M. 194 (contingency of not having children). This was the case where, on the sale of a timberestate, the average size of the trees was erroneously stated, but the number was not given (Brooke (Lord) v. Rounthwaite (1846), 5 Hare, 298); and where the minerals were found to belong to third parties, and the value could not be ascertained (Smithson v. Powell, Powell v. Simpson (1852), 20 L. T. (O. S.) 105); and a misstatement as to the occupation under a lease of the property may be of this description (Ridgway v. Gray (1849), 1 Mac. & G. 109); but a clerical error as to property comprised in an underlease (Grissell v. Peto (1854), 2 Sm. & G. 39), or an error in the particulars as to occupation which is corrected by information given to the purchaser (Farebrother v. Gibson (1857), 1 De G. & J. 602, C. A.), is not an objection to the title. The case of undisclosed restrictive covenants has also been referred to the difficulty of assessing compensation (Cato v. Thompson (1882), 9 Q. B. D. 616, 618, C. A.); see note (b), supra.

(g) Nelthorpe v. Holgate (1844), 1 Coll. 203; but see Thomas v. Dering (1837), 1 Keen, 729, 743.

held for a term of years, but misdescribed as carrying a right of renewal (i); and on the grant of a lease for a term beyond that for which the lessor had power to grant it (k).

556. Unless the condition for compensation is expressly limited to errors pointed out before completion, the purchaser can recover compensation for errors even after completion; and in the absence of such express limitation the court does not import into the condition a distinction between errors discovered before, and errors discovered after, execution of the conveyance (l).

A purchaser is not necessarily debarred from claiming compensation under the condition because he knew of the error before he entered into the contract (m).

557. Where the condition is framed to cover "errors in the description" of the property, it does not extend to defects in title, but only applies to misdescriptions of the corporeal property (n); and the same principle seems to apply where it provides for "any error, misstatement, or omission in the particulars" (o). The innocent omission by the vendor to disclose the service upon him of a notice by a local authority requiring him to execute certain works in respect of his property is not such an "omission in the particulars" as would entitle the purchaser to compensation under the usual condition where the expenses of the works do not become a charge on the property until after completion of the sale (p).

It is a general rule with regard to defects in title that the vendor will not be compelled to give, nor the purchaser to take, an indemnity against the defect (q).

Latent
property.

558. In the second form (r) of condition relating to misdescription it is provided that any error, misstatement, or omission shall not annul the sale, nor shall any compensation or abatement be allowed in respect thereof (s). Notwithstanding such a condition, the vendor cannot enforce specific performance of the contract with or without abatement, if the misdescription or omission is material and substantial, that is, such that the purchaser cannot get what he agreed to buy (a); and in such circumstances the purchaser is entitled to rescind and recover his deposit (b). On the other hand, the purchaser cannot enforce the contract against the vendor with compensation, though he may, of course, take the property without compensation (c).

The condition in the second form does not apply to latent defects in the property, but only to such matters as might be discovered by an inspection of the property with reasonable care (d).

SUB-SECT. 8.—Completion.

Date for completion.

559. A date is usually fixed by the conditions for the completion of the purchase (e), but, in the absence of express stipulation to that effect, or unless an intention that it should be so can be implied from the circumstances, such date is not of the essence of the contract (f).

(r) As to the effect of the first form, see pp. 329 et seq., ante.

(a) Jacobs v. Revell, [1900] 2 Ch. 858, whence it would appear that a condition excluding compensation applies to all errors, whether great or small, but only within the limit laid down in Flight v. Booth (1834), 1 Bing. (N. C.) 370, 377; Portman v. Hill (1826), 2 Russ. 570; Whittemore v. Whittemore (1869), L. R. 8 Eq. 603 (large deficiency of acreage not covered by "more or less"; see note (g), p. 307, ante); Re Arnold, Arnold v. Arnold (1880), 14 Ch. D. 270, C. A. (sale of a close described as a four-acre field, but in fact four-sevenths of a seven-acre field); Cordingley v. Cheeseborough (1862), 4 De G. F. & J. 379 (deficiency in quantity of nearly one-half). "Notwithstanding such a condition, the court will not decree specific performance at the instance of the vendor, if he has materially misled the purchaser, and it is well known that a less serious misleading is sufficient to enable a purchaser to resist specific performance than is required to enable him to rescind the contract" (Re Terry and White's Contract (1886), 32 Ch. (e) See Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XII., p. 281. The "28th day of December next" in a contract made on the 15th December refers to that December (Dawes v. Charsley, [1886] W. N. 37, 38, C. A.). The date cannot be waived and another day substituted verbally (Stowell v. Robinson (1837), 3 Bing. (N. C.) 928). Although no time is fixed, the contract is none the less enforceable (Gray v. Smith (1889), 43 Ch. D. 208, 214, C. A.), and the vendor must make out his title within a reasonable time (Simpson v. Hughes and Armstrong (1897), 76 L. T. 237, C. A.; and see Green v. Sevin (1879), 13 Ch. D. 589, 599). As to completion generally, see, further, pp. 435 et seq., post.

(f) It was otherwise at common law (Hanslip v. Padwick (1850), 5 Exch. 615; see Berry v. Young (1788), 2 Esp. 640, n.; Wilde v. Fort

Rights

Particular Conditions.

Although, however, time is not originally of the essence of the contract in this respect, it may be made so by either party giving proper notice to the other to complete within a reasonable time (g), provided that at the time of the notice there has been some default or unreasonable delay by that other (h).

560. The conditions or contract usually provide for payment of interest on the balance of the purchase-money from the date fixed for completion until the actual date of payment, if the purchase is not completed at the date fixed (i). According to the form of the condition, interest is payable if the delay arises (1) from any cause whatever (k); (2) from any cause whatever other than the wilful default of the vendor; or (3) from the default of the purchaser.

Interest on

Whether the agreement for payment of interest makes it payable in case of delay from any cause whatever (l), or from any cause other than the wilful default of the vendor (m), the effect, in either case, is the same, since even under the former words the purchaser is not bound to pay interest during delay due to the vendor's wilful default (n); and such conditions are binding and compel the purchaser to pay interest unless he can bring the delay within the exception (o). If it is framed in the third mode, the purchaser is only liable to pay interest if the delay is attributable to him, and not if it is due to the state of the vendor's title (p).

This condition will not necessarily be read into a contract for sub-purchase in the same terms (Re Keeble and Stillwell's Fletton Brick Co. (1898), 78 L. T. 383). As to the payment of interest where it is not expressly provided for, see p. 374 et seq., post. Where there was a mere agreement to pay interest from the day fixed for completion without adding "in case of delay from any cause whatever" the purchaser was allowed to avoid payment of interest by appropriating money to meet the purchase-money (Kershaw v. Kershaw (1869), L. R. 9 Eq. 56); but see Re Riley to Streatfield (1886), 34 Ch. D. 386; pp. 334, 376, post.

It is for the purchaser to show that the vendor was guilty of wilful default, and that this wilful default was the cause of the non-completion of the contract on the date fixed (q). If the vendor goes abroad for a holiday two days before the date fixed for completion (r), or neglects to obtain the concurrence of necessary parties (s), or to procure admittances to certain copyholds (t), or where, owing to his misinterpretation of the conditions of sale, he refuses to deliver an abstract of title (u), or under a mistake of law omits to obtain a conveyance from one of two trustee mortgagees (v), in each of these cases he is guilty of wilful default. On the other hand, an oversight or an honest mistake of fact is not wilful default, at least, if it is not persisted in by the vendor (a); and the vendor's repudiation of the contract, and unsuccessful resistance to the purchaser's action for specific performance, has been held not to constitute wilful default, so as to disentitle him to interest (b). Nor does delay occasioned merely by the state of the title, and not wilful on the part of the vendor, relieve the purchaser from paying interest (c).

and profits as from the day fixed for completion, and shall be liable to all outgoing as from that date, such rents, profits, and outgoing to be apportioned if necessary (e). In the absence of stipulation the time fixed for completion is not the crucial date, and if a title has not been shown by that date, then the purchaser does not become entitled to the rents and profits and bound to discharge the outgoing until a good title is shown (f).

563. The term “outgoings” is of very wide import (g), and includes not merely rates, taxes, repairs, and the ordinary expenses of cultivating or managing the property (h), but also expenses, though of a capital nature, of works executed by local authorities under their sanitary and other powers which are recoverable from the owner, and are also, in general, charged on the property (i). “Outgoings.”

Expenses incurred by and payable to a local authority in respect of work done are not apportionable, and the liability for them as between vendor and purchaser depends on whether or not they are charged on the property, and if so charged, when the charge was created. Where a charge is created (k) it usually attaches to the premises on the execution of the works, and not at the time when the apportionment is made by the local authority among the various premises affected, and the expenses must be borne by the vendor or purchaser according as the works are completed before or after the date fixed for completion (l). If the expenses are not a charge upon the premises, they fall, under the condition, upon the vendor or the purchaser according as they become payable before or after the date for completion (m). But in the absence of the condition, a purchaser who pays by reason of his liability as owner for the time being cannot recover the amount from the vendor (n), though in the case of expenses which become a charge on the property before conveyance, he can recover on the vendor's covenants for title in the conveyance (o). Frequently, however, a condition is inserted throwing upon the purchaser the expense of complying with any notices served by the local authority between the date of sale and completion (p).

SUB-SECT. 9.—Conveyance.

Conveyance.

564. Conditions of sale usually throw the cost of conveyance as far as possible on the purchaser. In the absence of conditions, the purchaser prepares the draft conveyance at his own expense, but the expense of perusal and execution by the vendor and all other necessary parties falls on the vendor (a), and the vendor bears the expense of getting in any outstanding legal estate, or of any act necessary for completing his own title (b). The conditions do not in general vary this practice as regards preparation of the draft conveyance and perusal and execution by the vendor, but they provide that the purchaser shall bear the expense of perusal on behalf of and execution by all conveying parties other than the vendor, and the expense of any assurance or act necessary for getting in an outstanding legal estate or completing the vendor's title (c).

A condition aimed merely at the getting in of an outstanding legal estate does not apply to an unsatisfied mortgage estate or term (d); but if the purchaser stipulates to bear the expense of "preparing, obtaining, making and doing every assurance and every act and thing necessary for perfecting or completing the vendor's title," he must bear the whole expense of procuring the concurrence of the vendor's mortgagees (e), or of the execution of a deed to confirm an

SUB-SECT. 10.—Title Deeds.

Title deeds.

565. Since the owner of the land is entitled to possession of the title deeds (h), the vendor must hand over all documents of title which are in his possession and relate exclusively to the property sold, and in the absence of stipulation to the contrary he must bear the cost of obtaining them if they are not in his possession (i), but, where he retains part of the land to which any documents of title relate, he is entitled to retain such documents (k). Where land is sold in lots, the purchaser whose purchase-money is the largest is entitled to the deeds relating to the several lots (l). It is the practice to provide expressly to the same effect. Thus a usual condition of sale stipulates, with respect to common title deeds, that the vendor shall retain them if any lots are unsold, and that as between different purchasers they shall go to the purchaser who pays in the aggregate the largest purchase-money, and that he shall give an acknowledgment of right to production and undertaking for safe custody to each of the other purchasers at their expense (m).

The fact that the consideration is a rentcharge does not, apparently, entitle the vendor to retain the deeds (Dart, Vendors and Purchasers, 7th ed., p. 694).

(k) Vendor and Purchaser Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 78), s. 2, r. 5. The rule refers to an "estate," but this means an estate in land, including leaseholds, so that, on a sale of land by a mortgagee whose security also includes personal property, the purchaser is, in the absence of a special condition, entitled to the mortgage deed, notwithstanding that the mortgagee retains the personal property (Re Williams and Newcastle's (Duchess) Contract, [1897] 2 Ch. 144, 148). Documents showing the extinguishment of an easement in regard to which land retained by the vendor was the servient tenement and land sold was the dominant tenement are properly retained by the vendor (Re Lehmann and Walker's Contract, [1906] 2 Ch. 640).

(m) See Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XII., p. 422; Strong v. Strong (1858), 6 W. R. 455. Under a condition that the deeds are to go to the purchaser of "the largest lot," the purchaser of the largest single lot in extent takes them, although the purchase-money paid by another purchaser may be greater (Griffiths v. Hatchard, supra), and, a fortiori, the purchaser of the largest single lot both in extent and value (Scott v. Jackman (1855), 21 Beav. 110; see Cunyngham v. Hume (1839), 1 I. Eq. R. 150). his own expense to have attested copies of them (n); and he is also entitled at his own expense (o) to a covenant for, or an acknowledgment of his right to, production, and, unless the vendor is a trustee or mortgagee, an undertaking for the safe custody of them (p). But the inability of the vendor to furnish the purchaser with a legal covenant or acknowledgment for production is not an objection to his title if the purchaser will, on completion, have an equitable right to production (q).

Stamps.

567. In the absence of express stipulation, a purchaser is entitled to have all documents forming the vendor's title properly stamped at the expense of the vendor (r), and, as regards documents executed since the 16th May, 1888, any condition excluding this right on the part of the purchaser is void (s). It is usual, however, to insert a condition throwing on the purchaser the expense of stamping any unstamped or insufficiently stamped documents executed before that date (t). A stipulation that any unstamped or insufficiently stamped document shall not be stamped at once, but that the vendor will undertake to pay the penalty if it ever becomes necessary to stamp it, seems not to be enforceable (u).

Registration.

The conditions also usually require the purchaser to bear the expense of the registration of any unregistered documents which he requires to be registered (a).

But such a condition does not absolve the vendor from showing that he has power to sell as trustee, and it only expresses the rights of the parties apart from condition, since a vendor-trustee need covenant against his own acts only, provided notice of the vendor's character is given (c). If the vendor is in fact a trustee, but notice of the trust has been kept off the title, he should not disclose his character, but should stipulate that no covenant for title shall be given except an express covenant that he has not incumbered. This is not notice of a trust (d).

It is usual to provide that the property is sold subject to the existing tenancies and to the claims of tenants (e), to rights of way and water and other easements affecting it, to rights of adjoining owners, and to all chief rents and outgoings and incidents of tenure (f). This condition does not absolve the owner from his duty to disclose to the purchaser all matters affecting the property which are within his knowledge (g), and matters of the nature in question should, as far as practicable, be stated in the particulars; but it operates as a protection to the vendor if it subsequently appears that there is some right in favour of a third party of which he was ignorant at the date of the contract (h).

But the condition only applies to rights available against the vendor; hence, where two lots are sold subject to the condition, a right of way acquired by the tenant of one lot against the tenant of the other is not by virtue of the condition perpetuated in favour of the purchaser of the former lot (Daniel v. Anderson (1862), 8 Jur. (N. S.) 328; and see Fahey v. Dwyer (1879), 4 L. R. Ir. 271; Delaparelle v. St. Martin's-in-the-Fields Vestry (1890), 34 Sol. Jo. 545).

only expresses the rule of law applicable in the case of deterioration of the property after the sale from any cause other than the vendor's wilful neglect or default (k). It is usually also provided that, subject to the consent of the office being obtained, and to payment by the purchaser of a proportionate part of the premium for the current year, the benefit of the insurance policies shall, if the contract is completed, belong to the purchaser (l). This gives the purchaser an additional right, since, in the absence of such a condition, he must pay the purchase-money notwithstanding destruction of the property by fire, and has no claim on the policy moneys (k). A purchaser should however, in general, effect his own insurance directly the contract is made (m).

SUB-SECT. 14.—Performance of Covenants in Lease.

Leaseholds.

571. It is provided by statute (n) that on a sale of leaseholds the purchaser shall, on production of the receipt for the last payment due for rent under the lease before the date of actual completion, assume, unless the contrary appears, that all the covenants of the lease have been performed and observed up to the date of actual completion (o); but it is usual to insert a condition making the receipt conclusive evidence of the performance of covenants or the effectual waiver of any breach of covenant up to completion (p).

SUB-SECT. 15.—Forfeiture of Deposit.

deposit.

572. The conditions of sale usually provide that, in case the purchaser fails to comply with the conditions, his deposit shall be forfeited, and the vendor shall be at liberty to resell the property and to recover any deficiency in price on a resale from the original purchaser, and also the costs of the resale or any attempted

(m) The chief reason for doing this is the delay and uncertainty in procuring the consent of the office; occasionally fire policies contain a clause making the policy available for purchasers (see 48 Sol. Jo. 751), and then, if the contract contains the provision in question, a separate insurance need not be effected.

(n) Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 41), s. 3 (4). A vendor who has expressly agreed to make a good title cannot give verbal evidence that the purchaser was aware of breaches of covenant existing at the time of the contract (Barnett v. Wheeler (1841), 7 M. & W. 364; see Re Allen and Driscoll's Contract, [1904] 2 Ch. 226, C. A., explaining Re Highett and Bird's Contract, [1903] 1 Ch. 287, C. A.); but in the absence of such express agreement the vendor can give evidence of the purchaser's knowledge, and then the breaches are not an objection to the title (Clarke v. Colman, [1895] W. N. 114, C. A.).

(o) Formerly the burden of proof that the covenants had been performed was on the vendor; see Ringer to Thompson (1881), 51 L. J. (CH.) 42. The statute shifts the burden of proof (Re Highett and Bird's Contract, supra), but does not preclude the purchaser from setting up breaches (Re Taunton and West of England Perpetual Benefit Building Society and Roberts' Contract, [1912] 2 Ch. 381). As to a continuing breach, see Re Martin, Ex parte Dixon v. Tucker (1912), 106 L. T. 381).

(p) See Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XII., p. 289; Bull v. Hutchens (1863), 32 Beav. 615; Lawrie v. Lees (1881), 7 App. Cas. 19, 32; but the condition does not cover breaches committed by the vendor after the contract (Howell v. Kightley (1856), 21 Beav. 331).

resale (q). Under such a condition the purchaser cannot call for an account of the surplus if a larger price is obtained on the resale (r); and the vendor, even though he does not succeed in reselling the property, can still forfeit the deposit and recover the expenses of the abortive sale (s). If the vendor seeks to recover the deficiency on the resale, he must bring into account the forfeited deposit (a).

Part IV.—Proof and Investigation of Vendor's Title.

SECT. 1.—Vendor's Obligation as to Title.

SUB-SECT. 1.—Extent of the Obligation.

573. In the absence of any express stipulation as to title (b), a contract for sale of land implies an agreement on the part of the vendor to make a good, that is, a marketable (c), title to the property sold (d). He discharges this obligation when he shows that he, or to title.

(q) See Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XII., p. 284. It has been held that the vendor has a right of resale in the absence of express stipulation (Noble v. Edwardes, Edwardes v. Noble (1877), 5 Ch. D. 378, 388, C. A.); but this has been questioned; see Williams, Vendor and Purchaser, 2nd ed., p. 51. The omission by a trustee to resell is not necessarily a breach of trust (Thomson v. Christie (1852), 1 Macq. 236, 240, H. L.). As to resale where there is default in payment of an instalment of purchase-money, see Kilmer v. British Columbia Orchard Lands, Ltd., [1913] A. C. 319, P. C.

(r) Ex parte Hunter (1801), 6 Ves. 94, 97; and words are usually added to the condition expressly providing that any increase in price shall belong to the vendor; see the form referred to in note (q), supra.

(a) See p. 400, post. After the resale he cannot sue the purchaser for the original purchase-money (Lamond v. Davall (1847), 9 Q. B. 1030). As to forfeiting the deposit apart from the condition, see p. 399, post.

(c) A marketable title is one which at all times and under all circumstances can be forced on an unwilling purchaser (Pyrke v. Waddingham (1852), 10 Hare, 1, 8); see Maconchy v. Clayton, [1898] 1 I. R. 291, C. A. A title, though not marketable, may be a good holding title, i.e., one which presents no probability of an adverse claim being made, and can usually be sold under suitable conditions as to title; see also note (s), p. 461, post.

(d) In Ogilvie v. Foljambe (1817), 3 Mer. 53, 64, the right of the purchaser to a good title was spoken of as "a right not growing out of the agreement between the parties, but which is given by law"; and in this view it is collateral to and not an implied term of the contract (Ellis v. Rogers (1885), 29 Ch. D. 661, 670, C. A.); but usually it is treated as an implied term of the contract (Flureau v. Thornhill (1776), 2 Wm. Bl. 1078; St. Albans (Dulce) v. Shore (1789), 1 Hy. Bl. 270, 280; Doe d. Gray v. Stanion (1836), 1 M. & W. 695, 701); and see note (t), p. 462, post. The vendor's obligation is the same whether the question arises in an action for specific performance or for damages for breach of contract; see Purvis v. Rayer (1821), 9 Price, 488; Souter v. Drake (1834), 5 B. & Ad. 992, 1002. But the vendor's obligation to show a title may be excluded by the circumstances as well as by special stipulation (see Turner v. Turner (1852), 2 De G. M. & G.

some person or persons whose concurrence he can require, can convey to the purchaser the whole legal and equitable interest in the land sold (e).

In general, it is sufficient if the vendor shows that he has a good title by the time fixed for completion (f), but, if it appears before that time that he has not a title, and is not in a position to obtain one, the purchaser can repudiate the contract (g).

The vendor shows his title by delivering an abstract of it to the purchaser and makes his title by proving the contents of the abstract by proper evidence (h).

574. On a sale of freehold or copyhold land, the vendor must deduce a title for a period of at least forty years preceding the sale. This has been substituted by statute (i) for the period of sixty years formerly required (k). But forty years is only the minimum period, and in fact the title must be deduced for forty years and so much longer as it is necessary to go back in order to arrive at a proper root of title (l).

A longer title than forty years can be required in cases where before the statute a title longer than sixty years could be required, 28, 46, C. A.; Richardson v. Eyton (1852), 7 De G. M. & G. 79, C. A.; and if the vendor's interest is limited and the contract shows this he need not make a title except to the limited interest (Worthington v. Warrington (1848), 5 C. B. 635); see also Re Judge and Sheridan's Contract (1907), 96 L. T. 451; Hall v. Betty (1842), 4 Man. & G. 410.

(e) See Braybrooke (Lord) v. Inskip (1803), 8 Ves. 417, 436. It is sufficient if the vendor shows that he has a good equitable title and power to get in the legal estate (Camberwell and South London Building Society v. Holloway (1879), 13 Ch. D. 754, 763); the getting in of the legal estate is a matter of conveyance, and not of title (Avarne v. Brown (1844), 14 Sim. 303; Kitchen v. Palmer (1877), 46 L. J. (Ch.) 611; see Smith v. Ellis (1850), 14 Jur. 682); contra, if it is uncertain in whom the legal estate is vested (Wynne v. Griffith (1826), 1 Russ. 283). Formerly a sale was illegal unless the vendor had been in possession within a year (stat. (1540) 32 Hen. 8, c. 9, repealed by the Land Transfer Act, 1897 (60 & 61 Vict. c. 65), s. 11); and as to "pretended titles" see Dart, Vendors and Purchasers, 7th ed., p. 265.

Lovegrove* (1857), 4 Drew. 170, 183, n.; Moulton v. Edmonds (1859), 1 De G. F. & J. 246. An earlier title than forty years may still be required in any case where, at the time of the passing of the Vendor and Purchaser Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 78), a purchaser might have required more than a sixty years' title; see the text, infra.

and as to such cases the former practice still prevails. Thus, in the case of an advowson the period is one hundred years (a); in the case of a reversionary interest the title must be carried back at least as far as the instrument creating it (b); and on the sale of a term of years more than forty years old, the creation of the term must be shown. But it is sufficient both in the case of reversions and terms of years if the immediate title is carried back for forty years (c); and it seems that the same rule applies in other cases where the title to the property depends on an original grant, such as tithe rentcharge in the hands of a lay proprietor, or property held under grant from the Crown. The original grant must be shown, but the subsequent title only for the last forty years (d).

SECT. 1.
Vendor's Obligation as to Title.

On a contract to sell a term of years, whether derived out of a freehold or leasehold estate, the purchaser cannot, in the absence of express stipulation to the contrary, call for the title to the freehold (e); and, if the lease is derived out of a leasehold estate, he cannot call for the title to the leasehold reversion (f); it is sufficient if the vendor produces the lease under which he holds and shows a title to it for at least forty years (g); and, on a sale of

on title.

(a) This is in accordance with the maximum length of the period in which the title to an advowson can be extinguished under the Real Property Limitation Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27), s. 33; see titles ECCLESIASTICAL LAW, Vol. XI., p. 589; LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, Vol. XIX., p. 153.

(b) See Dart, Vendors and Purchasers, 7th ed., p. 329. In order to avoid any question as to possession of the land when the interest falls into possession, it must be shown that it is being enjoyed at the time of the sale by the owner of the immediate estate.

(c) Williams v. Spargo, [1893] W. N. 100. The existence of a long term is frequently only known from recitals of the lease creating it contained in subsequent assignments, and production of the lease is impracticable; but this is a defect of title unless the vendor has protected himself by the contract against production being required (Frend v. Buckley (1870), L. R. 5 Q. B. 213, Ex. Ch.).

Before this enactment, if the term sold had been created within sixty years preceding the date of the contract, the lessor's title had to be deduced for such a period as, with the title to the term from its creation, made up the period of sixty years (Purvis v. Rayer (1821), 9 Price, 488; Souter v. Drake (1834), 5 B. & Ad. 992; compare White v. Foljambe (1805), 11 Ves. 337; Deverell v. Bolton (Lord) (1812), 18 Ves. 505); Fildes v. Hooker (1817), 2 Mer. 424); unless the lease had been granted by an ecclesiastical corporation; see Fane v. Spencer (1815), 2 Mer. 430, n. A similar restriction as to title is imposed in the case of a contract to grant a lease; see title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., p. 382. land formerly copyhold or customary freehold, which has been enfranchised, the purchaser cannot call for the title to make the enfranchisement (h).

But in all these cases the statutory restriction on title can be excluded by express stipulation (i), and unless it is so excluded the purchaser takes the risk of being affected by notice of what he would discover if he investigated the earlier title (k).

575. The vendor must prove by production of the proper evidence (l) the title shown by the abstract. In the absence of a contrary stipulation, recitals, statements and descriptions of facts, matters and parties contained in deeds, instruments (m), Acts of Parliament, and statutory declarations twenty years old at the date of the sale, are deemed, except so far as they can be proved to be inaccurate, sufficient evidence of the truth of such facts, matters and descriptions (n); and the purchaser must assume that recitals contained in the abstracted instruments of any deed, will, or other document forming part of the title prior to the time prescribed by law or stipulated for the commencement of title, are correct and give all the material contents of the deed, will, or other document so recited, and that every document so recited was duly executed and perfected by any necessary formalities (o).

SUB-SECT. 2.—The Abstract of Title.

Abstract of title.

576. The abstract of title is a summary of all the documents by which any dispositions of the property have been made during the period for which title has to be shown, and of all the facts, such as

(k) See Patman v. Harland (1881), 17 Ch. D. 353; title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., p. 383; and see note (s), p. 355, post.

(l) As to how far the evidence must be such as would be admissible in litigation, see note (k), p. 354, post. "I do not entirely assent to the proposition that a vendor is in every case bound to supply evidence which would be admissible in an action for ejectment" (Halkett v. Dudley (Earl), [1907] 1 Ch. 590, per PARKER, J., at p. 604); and see pp. 349 et seq., post.

(m) Copies of entries in court rolls of admittances or surrenders seem not to be instruments, since they are records of operative acts and are not operative themselves; consequently recitals in such documents are, it is believed, not within this statutory rule.

(n) Vendor and Purchaser Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 78), s. 2, r. 2. The decision of MALINS, V.-C., in Bolton v. London School Board (1878), 7 Ch. D. 766, that a recital of a seisin in fee contained in a deed twenty years old at the time of the contract was, under this provision, evidence of such seisin, except so far as it was proved inaccurate by the purchaser, and that no prior title could be required, is not law (Re Wallis and Groult's Contract, [1906] 2 Ch. 206, per SWINFEN EADY, J., at p. 210). As to the effect of conditions making recitals and statements in deeds evidence, see Gould v. White (1854), Kay, 683; Drysdale v. Mace (1854), 5 De G. M. & G. 103, C. A.; Poppleton v. Buchanan (1858), 4 C. B. (N. S.) 20; and, as to the effect of a recital of an earlier deed as evidence of that deed, see Gillett v. Abbott (1838), 7 Ad. & El. 783; Bringle v. Goodson (1839), 5 Bing. (N. C.) 738.

births, marriages, deaths, or other matters affecting the devolution of the title during the same period (p).

577. The abstract must commence with a good "root of title," that is, in the absence of contrary stipulation, with some document purporting to deal with the entire legal and equitable estate in the property sold, not depending for its validity upon any previous instrument, and containing nothing to throw any suspicion on the title of the disposing parties (a). The best root of title is a conveyance in fee on sale or by way of mortgage. A general devise by will is insufficient, as there is nothing to show that the property passed by it (b); there must also be proof of the testator's seisin at his death (c); but a specific devise is a proper root of title (d). An instrument, the effect of which depends on some earlier instrument, is primâ facie an insufficient root of title, and it is necessary to go back to the earlier instrument; for example, a title depending on an appointment under a power or on a disentailing deed must be carried back to the instrument creating the power or the entail (e). If, however, it has been expressly agreed that such an instrument shall form the root of title, the purchaser cannot require the production, nor an abstract, of the document creating the power, nor, it seems, the entail, unless the documents as abstracted throw doubt on the earlier title, and

(a) See Re Cox and Neve's Contract, [1891] 2 Ch. 109, 118; Dart, Vendors and Purchasers, 7th ed., p. 332. It is not essential that the title should commence with a document (Parr v. Lovegrove (1857), 4 Drew. 170). In the absence of documents, such long uninterrupted possession, enjoyment, and dealing with the property must be shown as reasonably raises a presumption of an absolute title in fee simple (Ottrell v. Watkins (1839), 1 Beav. 361); and under an open contract there must be forty years' possession (Jacobs v. Revell, [1900] 2 Ch. 858, 869); mere proof, however, of forty years' possession will not avail, without showing the origin of the possession, as, e.g., an entry by the heir or by a trespasser (Hiern v. Mill (1806), 13 Ves. 114, 122; Eyton v. Dicken (1817), 4 Price, 303). Where a known defect has been cured by the Statutes of Limitation, the court compels the purchaser to accept the title; see note (g), p. 351, post. Under a suitable condition a vendor may sell a mere possession, where, for instance, a railway company sells superfluous land otherwise than in accordance with the statutory provisions (Rosenberg v. Cook (1881), 8 Q. B. D. 162, C. A.); and, as to such sales, see title COMPULSORY PURCHASE OF LAND AND COMPENSATION, Vol. VI., pp. 26 et seq.

(b) Where it is intended that the title shall commence with a general devise, this is always expressly stipulated, and the purchaser is required to assume the seisin of the testator at the time of his death; otherwise the title must commence with the conveyance to the testator, or, if there is no conveyance, with evidence of his seisin at the date of his death.

(c) As to a condition requiring seisin to be assumed, see Re Banister, Broad v. Munton (1879), 12 Ch. D. 131, C. A.

(d) This is so, it is believed, in practice, but a specific devise has been said not to be an eligible root of title (see Parr v. Lovegrove (1857), 4 Drew. 170), and it is better to specify the nature of the document in the contract; see Williams, Vendor and Purchaser, 2nd ed., p. 109.

(e) But if the deed has been lost, and the possession of the land has been for a considerable time in accordance with the estates purporting to have been created under it, the loss of the deed and the absence of evidence of its contents are not objections to the title; see Coussmaker v. Sewell (1791), cited in Sugden, Vendors and Purchasers, 14th ed., p. 366; Nouaille v. Greenwood (1822), Turn. & R. 26.

then the purchaser can resist specific performance unless the vendor abstracts the earlier document so far as is necessary to remove the doubt, and produces it (f).

A voluntary conveyance is a proper root of title under an open contract (g), but if it is made a root of a good title at a shorter period than forty years the conditions must clearly state its nature (h).

578. The document forming the root of title and all subsequent documents (i) dealing with the legal estate should be abstracted in chief in order of date (k), including mortgages, though satisfied (l), but not leases which have expired. Similarly, all material facts, such as births, deaths, intestacies, or other matters, should be stated in their order of date. Receipts and other documents showing that death duties payable within twelve years of the sale (m) have been discharged should be abstracted.

Equitable
interests.

With regard to documents affecting the equitable estate only, a purchaser for value taking the legal estate without notice of them is protected (n), and therefore they are immaterial to his title and in practice are frequently suppressed. This is always the case where the legal estate has been vested in trustees who are intended to stand towards third parties as absolute owners. In such cases the conveyance to the trustees is framed so as to keep the trusts off the title, and this object would be defeated if dealings with the beneficial interest were disclosed (o). Further, the abstract not uncommonly omits documents creating equitable charges, whether they have been paid off, or are still subsisting but are intended to be paid off on completion (p).

Where, however, the abstract shows that the legal estate is in a trustee, and does not also show that he holds on trust for sale, or with a power of sale, the concurrence or consent of the beneficiaries is necessary, and the equitable title must be abstracted.

Second mortgages framed in the same terms as legal mortgages should be abstracted (q).

579. The abstract should set out the contents of every material part of the abstracted documents according to their tenor, and not give merely a statement of the effect thereof (r).

The parcels as described in the first abstracted deed should be set out verbatim: in the abstracts of subsequent deeds which repeat the same description they are referred to as the abstracted premises. Tracings of plans indorsed or annexed to the deeds, and referred to in the description of the parcels, should accompany the abstract; and where, as is usually the case, the plans form an essential part of the description of the premises, tracings of them can be insisted on (s).

580. In the case of land registered under the Land Transfer Acts, 1875 and 1897 (t), with an absolute title, the only abstract that the purchaser can require is (1) a copy of the land certificate, or office copies of the entries on the register; (2) copies or abstracts of documents expressly referred to therein; and (3) a statutory declaration as to the existence or otherwise of matters which are declared by statute not to be incumbrances (a). If the land is registered with a qualified title, then, in addition to the foregoing, an abstract must be furnished of all estates and interests excluded from the effect of registration (b). Where only a possessory title has been registered, the purchaser is entitled to the same abstract as chase-money had been suppressed, WOOD, V.-C., thought that this course was wrong, and would not have been justifiable even if the charge had no longer been subsisting. But in the practice of conveyancers this strict rule is not observed; see DART, Vendors and Purchasers, 7th ed., p. 337; WILLIAMS, Vendor and Purchaser, 2nd ed., p. 112. A vendor or his solicitor or agent who, with intent to defraud, conceals any instrument material to the title or any incumbrance, or falsifies any pedigree on which the title may or does depend, is guilty of a misdemeanour; see Law of Property Amendment Act, 1859 (22 & 23 Vict. c. 35), s. 24; and, as to concealment of incumbrances prior to the commencement of title, see Smith v. Robinson (1879), 13 Ch. D. 148.

(q) Such documents may possibly affect the legal estate; and generally any documents which, although primarily affecting equitable interests, may affect the legal estate should be abstracted; see Palmer v. Locke (1881), 18 Ch. D. 381, C. A.; and DART, Vendors and Purchasers, 7th ed., p. 336. But when a mortgagee is selling under his power of sale, dealings with the equity of redemption are no part of his title, and do not require to be abstracted, even supposing the mortgagee to be aware of them.

in the case of unregistered land down to the date of first registration and thereafter the same abstract as of land registered with an absolute title (c).

SUB-SECT. 3.—Expenses.

581. The vendor is bound to make and deliver, at his own expense, a perfect abstract (d), that is, an abstract showing such a title as the purchaser is entitled to obtain under the contract (e). If the documents of title are not in his possession, he must himself bear the cost of procuring them for the purpose of furnishing the abstract (f). Nor is the vendor relieved from the expense of delivering a proper abstract by the mere fact that the purchaser is entitled under his contract to a "free conveyance" (g).

582. On a sale of land under an open contract, the expenses of the production and inspection of all documents of title not in the vendor's possession, and the expenses of all journeys incidental to such production or inspection, fall on the purchaser (h).

Where the documents are in the vendor's possession and are produced at the proper place for inspection, that is to say, either at the vendor's residence or near the land sold or in London (i), the purchaser must pay the cost of inspecting them by his own solicitor; but, if they are produced elsewhere, the vendor must defray any extra costs occasioned thereby (k).

(c) Land Transfer Act, 1897 (60 & 61 Vict. c. 65), s. 16 (v.). A possessory title has the effect of an absolute title save that it does not prejudice adverse claims existing or capable of arising at the date of registration; see title REAL PROPERTY AND CHATELS REAL, Vol. XXIV., pp. 313, 314.

(d) Re Johnson and Tustin (1885), 30 Ch. D. 42, C. A.; Re Stamford, Spalding and Boston Banking Co. and Knight's Contract, [1900] 1 Ch. 287. In sales, however, under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 18), s. 82, the costs of the abstract are, in the absence of agreement, thrown on the purchaser.

(e) See Morley v. Cook (1842), 2 Hare, 106, 111; and see pp. 321, 341, ante.

(f) The effect of the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 41), s. 3 (6), is not in such case to throw the expense on the purchaser. "[The section] assumes that a perfect abstract has been delivered and it deals entirely with matters subsequent to that" (Re Stamford, Spalding and Boston Banking Co. and Knight's Contract, supra, per NORTH, J., at p. 291).

(g) Re Pelly and Jacob's Contract (1899), 80 L. T. 45; but it is usual to stipulate in such cases that there shall be no investigation of title.

(h) Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 41), s. 3 (6), (9). Thus, the purchaser must pay the costs of procuring the production even of a deed which is the root of the vendor's title, if it is not in the latter's possession (Re Stuart and Olivant and Seadon's Contract, [1896] 2 Ch. 328, C. A.), and of title deeds in the hands of the vendor's mortgagees (Re Willett and Argenti (1889), 60 L. T. 735). A contract for the sale of the "fee simple in possession free from incumbrances" is not the expression of a contrary intention within the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 41) (Re Willett and Argenti, supra). As to the former practice, compare Sugden, Vendors and Purchasers, 14th ed., p. 431.

(i) Dart, Vendors and Purchasers, 7th ed., p. 481.

(k) Hughes v. Wynne (1836), 8 Sim. 85. If the vendor has the option of producing them at any one of several specified places, the purchaser is entitled to reasonable notice of the place selected (Ripplinghall v. Lloyd (1833), 5 B. & Ad. 742). As a rule, a country solicitor is not allowed the cost of journeys to London for the purpose of examining title deeds

583. The expenses of searching for, procuring, making, verifying and producing all certificates, declarations, evidences and information not in the vendor's possession must, in the absence of any stipulation, be borne by the purchaser (l); and all copies or abstracts of or extracts from documents of title not in the vendor's possession, for whatever purpose required by the purchaser, must, in the absence of any agreement, be made at the expense of the purchaser (m).

584. On a sale of property in lots, the purchaser of two or more lots held wholly or in part under the same title is not entitled to more than one abstract of the common title, except at his own expense (n).

SECT. 2.—Proof of Title.

SUB-SECT. 1.—In General.

585. Abstracted documents are proved by production of the originals (o). If a document comes from the proper custody (p), and there is no cause for suspecting its authenticity, proof of due execution is not required (q), and it is presumed to have been executed or signed as appears on its face (r).

except in special circumstances (Re Tryon (1844), 7 Beav. 496), and it is immaterial that he makes the journey at the request of his client, unless he has first explained to him the usage of the profession to dispense with such attendance (Alsop v. Oxford (Lord) (1833), 1 My. & K. 564; Horlock v. Smith (1837), 2 My. & Cr. 495, 523). A London solicitor is not bound to employ a country agent, but may send his clerk to examine the deeds (Hughes v. Wynne (1836), 8 Sim. 85).

(l) Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 41), s. 3 (6), (9). Apart from statute, all the expense of procuring the evidence necessary for verifying the abstract falls on the vendor. Where lessees covenant to finish a house to the satisfaction of the lessor's surveyor, the certificate of the surveyor's approval is neither a "certificate" nor an "evidence" within this provision; it is "not like a certificate of a pre-existing fact such as a birth, a marriage or a death, but it is the fact itself and forms part of the vendors' title, which must be procured at their expense" (Re Moody and Yates' Contract (1885), 30 Ch. D. 344, C. A., per Fry, L.J., at p. 349); compare Re Edwards and Rudkin to Green (1888), 58 L. T. 789.

(m) Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 41), s. 3 (6), (9). Notwithstanding the wide language of this provision, it does not relieve the vendor from making a proper abstract and procuring the necessary documents for making it at his own expense (see case cited in note (f), p. 348, ante); nor does it affect the ordinary right of the purchaser to have the title deeds handed over on completion, and any expenses incurred in obtaining them for that purpose, if they are not in the vendor's possession, must be borne by the vendor (Re Duthy and Jesson's Contract, [1898] 1 Ch. 419).

(n) Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 41), s. 3 (7); and see Re Simmons' Contract, [1908] 1 Ch. 452.

Title.

Lost deed.

586. When a deed or other document of title has been lost or destroyed, secondary evidence of its contents and execution may be given upon proof of such loss or destruction, and, if such evidence is clear and cogent, a purchaser cannot object to a title depending on the lost document (s).

Deeds
attorney.

587. If a deed is executed by attorney, the power of attorney must be abstracted and produced (t), and, if this was executed before the 1st January, 1883, evidence must be given that the power had not been revoked by the donor or by his death, insanity, or bankruptcy before it was acted upon (u). But a power of attorney executed on or since the 1st January, 1883, and either given for valuable consideration and expressed to be irrevocable, or, although not given for valuable consideration, yet expressed to be irrevocable for a fixed time not exceeding one year, is, in favour of a purchaser, not revocable by death, insanity, or bankruptcy (v). Hence, in the case of a deed executed under such a power of attorney, proof of non-revocation, either generally or within the fixed time, is not necessary.

ments.

588. In the case of acknowledgments of deeds by married women made since the 31st December, 1882, the memorandum of acknowledgment indorsed on the deed is sufficient evidence. An acknowledgment prior to that date must be proved by an office copy of the certificate filed in the proper office of the High Court (a).

Enrolments.

589. Where deeds are required to be enrolled (b), the enrolment is usually proved by the memorandum of enrolment indorsed thereon by the proper officer, without proof of his signature or official to an explanation of any erasures which cause suspicion (Hobson v. Bell (1839), 3 Jur. 190).

F. & J. 246, 251; and if due execution is proved its due stamping will be presumed (ibid.; see title EVIDENCE, Vol. XIII., p. 506); but this presumption is rebutted by evidence showing that at a particular time the document was unstamped (Marine Investment Co. v. Haviside (1872), L. R. 5 H. L. 624); see title EVIDENCE, Vol. XIII., p. 506, note (f). (t) See Danby v. Coutts & Co. (1885), 29 Ch. D. 500; Re Airey, Airey v. Stapleton, [1897] 1 Ch. 164. In Eaton v. Sanxter (1834), 6 Sim. 517, the purchaser's objection to the title on the ground of non-production of a power of attorney was removed by the obtaining of a conveyance from the devisee of the donor of the power.

Defects in the early title, or in the evidence thereof, may sometimes be rendered immaterial by the provisions of the Real Property Limitation Acts, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27) and 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 57); see title LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, Vol. XIX., pp. 104 et seq. But these provisions do not affect the right of a purchaser under an open contract to have a forty years' title deduced (Jacobs v. Revell, [1900] 2 Ch. 858, 869); if, however, such title is deduced it will be forced on a purchaser, although it depends wholly or in part on the Acts mentioned (Games v. Bonnor (1884), 54 L. J. (CH.) 517, C. A.; Scott v. Nixon (1843), 3 Dr. & War. 388), provided the defect is a known defect capable of being cured in this manner; a purchaser is not required to take a leap in the dark (Re Nisbet and Potts' Contract, [1905] 1 Ch. 391, per FARWELL, J., at p. 402; Re Atkinson and Horsell's Contract, [1912] 2 Ch. 1, C. 593. An award of inclosure under any Act incorporating the Inclosure (Consolidation) Act, 1801 (m), is proved by a copy or extract signed by the proper officer of the court, if the award was enrolled in one of the courts of Westminster (now the High Court) or, if it was enrolled with the clerk of the peace for the county in which the lands lie, by the clerk or his deputy (n). If the award was made under the Inclosure Act, 1845 (o), it is proved by the award itself, by a copy purporting to be sealed with the seal of the Inclosure Commissioners (p), or by a copy or extract signed by the clerk of the peace of the county in which the lands lie or his deputy (q).

596. Office copies of all writs, records, pleadings and documents filed in the High Court are admissible in evidence to the same extent as the originals (w); and in many cases certified copies of proceedings are made evidence thereof by statute (x).

Litigious documents.

597. A fine (a) is proved by the chirograph (b), which it was the duty of the proper officer to deliver to the parties (c). Fines and also recoveries may be proved by exemplifications under the seal of the court (d), or examined copies (e), or, when coming from records under the charge of the Master of the Rolls, by a copy certified by the deputy keeper or an assistant keeper of the records, and purporting to be sealed with the seal of the Record Office (f).

Fines and

598. The probate of a will or an official copy is conclusive evidence of the contents and validity of a will, if it has been proved in solemn form or otherwise declared valid by the court; if not proved in solemn form or declared valid by the court, the probate or an official copy is evidence of the will and of its validity and contents, except where the validity of the will is put in issue (g).

599. Matters of pedigree are sufficiently proved as follows (h):—Birth, either by a certificate of baptism, that is, a certified copy of the entry in the parochial register, or by a certificate of birth, that is, a certified extract from the general register of births (i); marriage, by a certified extract from the parochial or general register (i); death, by a certificate of burial or by a certificate of death, that is, a certified extract from the general register of deaths (i). Evidence is not usually required of the identity of the parties named in such certificates: when it is required, it can be given by means of a statutory declaration. Matters of pedigree may also be proved by the statutory declarations of living members of the family or of other persons acquainted with the family (j). In the absence of formal evidence or of a statutory declaration, the proof of facts may sometimes be assisted by presumption, for example, that persons who have lived together as husband and wife were legally married, such presumption being supported by proof of general repute (k), or that a woman of advanced years is past child-bearing (l), and a purchaser must in suitable cases be satisfied with such proof.

Redemption of land tax

Redemption of land tax and of tithe or tithe rentcharge, to both of which land is presumed to be subject unless the contrary is stated (m), is proved, as regards land tax, by the certificate of the Land Tax Commissioners, or, since 1889, of the Board of Agriculture (n), and the receipt of the cashier of the Bank of England (o), and as regards tithe or tithe rentcharge, by the certificate of the Tithe Commissioners (p), or, since 1889, of the Board of Agriculture (n).

(p) Tithe Act, 1846 (9 & 10 Vict. c. 73), s. 12. Tithe or tithe rentcharge may be apportioned between the different portions of an estate (see Tithe Act, 1836 (6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71), s. 58), but, where one tithe is payable in respect of the land sold and of land belonging to other owners, the purchaser cannot, in the absence of any stipulation, call upon the vendor to apportion the tithe (Re Ebsworth and Tidy's Contract (1889), 42 Ch. D. 23, 35, 46, C. A.). As to whether, on the sale in lots of an estate subject to one entire tithe, a purchaser could call on a vendor to apportion the tithe, apart from any agreement, see ibid., at p. 50; title ECCLESIASTICAL LAW, Vol. XI., p. 747, note (a). SECT. 3.—Requisitions on Title.

602. On receipt of the abstract the purchaser's solicitor peruses it and then examines it with the original documents (s). This examination is directed first to the substance of the documents; secondly, to formal matters; and thirdly, to any incidental matters relevant to the title which do not appear on the abstract. As to substance, it must be ascertained that the abstract, so far as it purports to give the contents of the documents, gives them correctly and with sufficient fullness, and that no material part of any document is omitted; as to formal matters, that the documents are correctly stamped, properly executed, and duly indorsed with any necessary memoranda of acknowledgment, registration, enrolment, or other requirement; as to incidental matters, that there are no notices or memoranda with the documents, or annexed to or indorsed upon them, or any suspicious matters as regards execution or otherwise, or as regards the custody of the deeds, from which it may be inferred that the vendor's title is subject to rights of third parties (t).

Examination of deeds.

603. After thus perusing the abstract and examining the deeds, the purchaser's solicitor prepares his requisitions on the title and conveyance. The requisitions on title fall generally under the following heads (u): (1) that the abstracted documents, though efficacious, do not show the title which the purchaser is entitled to obtain, having regard to any special stipulations in the contract (v); in this case a further abstract is asked for (w); (2) that particular

The inspections referred to do not apparently include personal examination of the property (Slack v. Hancock (1912), 107 L. T. 14, 18).

(t) As to suspicions raised by the position of the receipt on a deed under the old practice, see Kennedy v. Green (1834), 3 My. & K. 699; and compare *Greenlade v. (w) A perfect abstract, in the strict sense of the term, is an abstract which shows a good title (Morley v. Cook (1842), 2 Hare, 106, 111); but for particular purposes it may mean the most perfect abstract in the documents have not the effect required in order to make out the vendor's title; (3) that there are incumbrances on the property remaining unsatisfied; (4) that the identity of the property is not shown; (5) that the documents are not in order as to stamping, execution, or other formal matters; and (6) that evidence additional to that already furnished is required as to matters of pedigree, payment of death duties (x), or otherwise.

Inquiries.

In addition to these requisitions, which are objections to the title, the purchaser usually addresses inquiries to the vendor, also in the shape of requisitions, which are intended (1) to protect himself from the possible omission of the vendor to disclose matters affecting the title; (2) to obtain information as to the property; and (3) to arrange for completion. Under the first head fall inquiries as to the existence of improvement or other charges (y), or whether, in the case of a married woman, there was any settlement made on her marriage (a); under the second head (b), inquiries as to insurance, easements, tenant right, party walls, the making up of roads, notices served by local authorities, outgoings, and so forth; and, under the third head, inquiries as to documents to be handed over, the steps to be taken in respect of increment value or other duty, and payments to be made by either side on completion. The requisition on the last point can conveniently take the form of a draft completion statement filled up so far as practicable by the purchaser. This forms the basis of the final statement upon which completion will take place.

Requisitions as to the conveyance.

The purchaser may also make requisitions as to the conveyance (c). These assume that the vendor has shown that he can either alone or jointly with other persons whose concurrence he can require make a title to the property, and the only question is as to the persons to make the conveyance and the form which it is to take (d).

604. Occasionally conditions of sale give the vendor the right to vendor's possession, actual or constructive, at the time of his delivering it (Morley v. Cook (1842), 2 Hare, 106, 112); compare Blackburn v. Smith (1848), 2 Exch. 783; Want v. Stallibrass (1873), L. R. 8 Exch. 175, 179; Gray v. Fowler (1873), L. R. 8 Exch. 249, 279, Ex. Ch. ("full and sufficient abstract"). The abstract is not perfect if it does not show the true state of the title (Steer v. Crowley (1863), 14 C. B. (N. S.) 337, 359).

(a) It is the duty of the vendor's solicitor to place on the abstract all matters which affect the title so far as a purchaser is concerned (see pp. 297 et seq., 344, ante), and the vendor is not bound to answer a requisition whether he or his solicitor is aware of any settlement, deed, fact, omission, or incumbrance affecting the property not disclosed by the abstract (Re Ford and Hill (1879), 10 Ch. D. 365, C. A.; Taylor v. London and County Banking Co., London and County Banking Co. v. Nixon, [1901] 2 Ch. 231, 258, C. A.), but such a requisition is frequently made with useful results. It directs the attention of the vendor's solicitor to possible omissions and acts as an additional security to the purchaser.

(b) On the sale of a rentcharge the purchaser may, it seems, be precluded by the conditions from objecting that it has not been paid for twelve years (Hanks v. Pulling (1856), 6 E. & B. 659).

(c) As to the distinction between requisitions as to title and requisitions as to conveyance, see p. 325, ante.

(d) As to the parties to make the conveyance and its form, see pp. 415 et seq., 421 et seq., post.

rescind the contract in the event of any requisition or objection being made which he is unable or unwilling to comply with, and it is then necessary for the purchaser to take care that he does not, by making a requisition not really essential, run the risk of losing the purchase (e). But more usually the right of rescission is made to arise only when a requisition is persisted in, and the purchaser runs no such risk in making the requisition in the first instance (e). Requisitions should, however, never be frivolous or unnecessary. They should either call attention to a real or apprehended defect in the title, or ask for relevant information.

SECT. 4.—Searches and Inquiries.

605. Certain matters affecting land, though not disclosed by the abstract, may be ascertained by search in registers or other records accessible to the public, and these searches are, in the case of unregistered land (f), an essential step in the investigation of title (g).

which searches
made.

Such matters are (1) writs or orders affecting land (h); (2) lis pendens (i); (3) annuities (i); (4) bankruptcies (j); (5) deeds of arrangement (j); (6) land charges (j); (7) registration under the Land Transfer Acts, 1875 and 1897 (k); (8) registration in the Middlesex and Yorkshire registries (l); (9) entries on the court rolls affecting copyhold lands (m); (10) disentailing assurances (n); and (11) acknowledgments of deeds by married women (o).

Strictly searches should be made against every person appearing by the abstract to have been owner of the land or to have had power to dispose of it; but in practice searches are confined to the period since the last preceding sale or mortgage (p).

search.

(e) As to conditions entitling a vendor to rescind, see pp. 324 et seq., ante.

(f) As to registered land, see pp. 362, 363, post; as to unregistered land in an area where registration is compulsory, see p. 361, post.

(g) The searches that should generally be made are:—at the Land Registry, for writs and orders affecting the land, lis pendens, annuities or rentcharges, deeds of arrangement and land charges, an official certificate being obtained of “full search,” which covers each case; at the Bankruptcy Court, for bankruptcies. For the search in bankruptcy it is not uncommon to rely on a search in the London Gazette, made through one of the various inquiry agencies. See, further, pp. 358 et seq., post. The periods over which, and the persons against whom, the various searches should be made are dealt with under their respective heads. Whether any other searches should be made depends upon the title shown to the land. The search for lis pendens is, as a rule, the only search requiring to be made against trustees. As to costs where the searches are, in the circumstances, needless, see Langford (Lady) v. Mahony (1845), 3 Jo. & Lat. 97.

SECT. 4.
Searches
and Inquiries.

Writs and orders.

Where the vendor is a registered company (q), the purchaser should search the register kept by the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies of mortgages and charges created after the year 1900 (r) by the company, and, if possible, the register of mortgages kept by the company itself (s).

606. Every writ or order affecting land, issued or made by any court for the purpose of enforcing a judgment, whether obtained on behalf of the Crown or otherwise, every order appointing a receiver or sequestrator of land, and every delivery in execution or other proceeding taken in pursuance of such writ or order, is void as against a purchaser for value of the land, unless the writ or order is registered for the time being in the name of the person whose land is affected in the Office of Land Registry (t). The registration requires to be renewed every five years (u). Hence a purchaser should search at the Office of Land Registry (v) for writs and orders affecting land which have been registered or re-registered within the last five years in the names of owners during the period of search (w). An official search may be obtained (a).

Lis pendens.

607. In the absence of express notice, a purchaser is not affected by a lis pendens unless it is registered and re-registered every five years (b). Search should be made accordingly in the lis pendens

(w) That is, since the last sale or mortgage. Prior to the Land Charges Registration and Searches Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 51), it was necessary to search for judgments and Crown debts; but that Act made it unnecessary to search for private judgments, and general provision rendering it also unnecessary to search for Crown judgments and debts was made by the Land Charges Act, 1900 (63 & 64 Vict. c. 26). Under ibid., s. 2 (1), no judgment or recognisance, whether obtained or entered into on behalf of the Crown or otherwise, whatever its date, can now operate as a charge upon land or any interest in land, or upon the unpaid purchase-money for any land, unless or until a writ or order for enforcing it is registered under the Land Charges Registration and Searches Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 51), s. 5, and the Land Charges Act, 1900, (63 & 64 Vict. c. 26), s. 2 (2), extends this provision to Crown debts. "Judgment" includes any order or decree having the effect of a judgment, except an order made by a court having jurisdiction in bankruptcy in the exercise of that jurisdiction (Land Charges Registration and Searches Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 51), s. 4). register at the Office of Land Registry (c) for the last five years, and it must be made against trustees (d) and mortgagees as well as against beneficial owners. An official search may be obtained (e). If the question involved in the litigation in respect of which the lis pendens is registered does not affect the title to the land, the lis pendens will be no bar to completion of the purchase (f).

608. Annuities or rentcharges granted on or after the 26th April, 1855, otherwise than by will or marriage settlement, for a life or lives or for any term of years or greater estate determinable on a life or lives, do not affect the lands charged therewith as against purchasers, mortgagees, or creditors, unless they are registered against the name of the person whose land is to be affected in the Office of Land Registry (g). Search should be made against owners of the land during the period of search (h). An official search can be obtained (i). Annuities.

609. Unless rendered unnecessary by the known financial position of the vendor or his predecessors in title, search must be made in the registers of the Bankruptcy Court in order to ascertain that the title of the vendor or his predecessors has not been divested by bankruptcy proceedings or by a composition or scheme of arrangement under the sanction of the court (k). The search should in strictness extend over a period of twelve years, after which the title of the trustee would be extinguished (l), but in practice a five years' search is considered sufficient (m). No official search can be obtained. Bankruptcy.

Originally the registration was in the Court of Common Pleas, then at the Central Office of the Supreme Court, and now at the Land Registry (note (l), p. 357, ante). SECT. 4.

Searches
and
arrangement.

610. Deeds of arrangement (n) affecting land may be registered at the Office of Land Registry (o) in the name of the debtor, either on the application of a trustee thereof or a creditor, and unless or until they are registered they are void as against purchasers for value of any land comprised in or affected by them (p). No re-registration is necessary. Hence the search must be made against each owner during the period of search from the time when he became entitled (q). An official search can be required (r).

Land charges.

611. Land charges which fall within the definition of that term in the Land Charges Registration and Searches Act, 1888 (s), and have been executed after the 1st January, 1889, are void as against a purchaser of the land charged therewith or of any interest in such land, unless and until such land charges have been registered in the register of land charges in the Office of Land Registry (t); and land charges existing at the above date are similarly void, unless they are registered within one year from their first assignment by act inter vivos occurring after that date (a). Search should accordingly be made at the Office of Land Registry (b) for such charges (c). An official search can be obtained (d).

(n) Under the Deeds of Arrangement Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 57), ss. 5, 8, deeds of arrangement are void unless they are registered in the Bills of Sale Department of the Central Office. As to what instruments are included under the term "deeds of arrangement," see ibid., s. 4. Unless they are executed for the benefit of creditors generally, they do not come within the purview of the Act (Re Saumarez, Ex parte Salaman, [1907] 2 K. B. 170, C. A.; Re Hobbins, Ex parte Official Receiver (1899), 6 Mans. 212); see, generally, title BANKRUPTCY AND INSOLVENCY, Vol. II., pp. 329 et seq.

(p) Land Charges Registration and Searches Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 51), ss. 7—9; see title BANKRUPTCY AND INSOLVENCY, Vol. XII., pp. 329, 330. The Act applies to deeds of arrangement whether made before or after its commencement (1st January, 1889), but only as regards purchasers after that date (ibid., s. 9). Where the deed of arrangement was made before the Act it had to be registered within one year from the commencement of the Act (ibid.).

(s) "Land charge" means any "rent or annuity or principal moneys payable by instalments, or otherwise, with or without interest charged, otherwise than by deed, upon land, under the provisions of any Act of Parliament, for securing to any person either the moneys spent by him, or the costs, charges, and expenses incurred by him, under such Act, or the moneys advanced by him for repaying the moneys spent, or the costs, charges, and expenses incurred by another person under the authority of an Act of Parliament," but does not include a rate or scot (Land Charges Registration and Searches Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 51), s. 4); see titles AGRICULTURE, Vol. I., pp. 266, 267; LAND IMPROVEMENT, Vol. XVIII., pp. 296, 297, 301, 304, 305; LAND TAX, Vol. XVIII., pp. 324, 325; RENTCHARGES AND ANNUITIES, Vol. XXIV., p. 478, note (g); compare title LAND IMPROVEMENT, Vol. XVIII., pp. 297, 298; and see p. 361, post.

The charges requiring registration are improvement charges created at the instance of the owner (e); they do not include charges created under the Public Health Act, 1875 (f), or other charges created without reference to the wish of the owner (g). As to these a requisition should be made (h).

SECT. 4.
Searches
and Inquiries.

612. On a sale of unregistered land situated in an area where registration of title is compulsory, search should be made at the Office of Land Registry, by an inspection of the Index Map and the list of pending applications for, and cautions against, first registration kept there, in order to ascertain that the title has not been nor is about to be registered, inasmuch as the effect of registration with an absolute title is to enable the first registered proprietor by a registered transfer for value to extinguish the previous title (i).

Registration
under Land Transfer Acts.

613. On a sale of land situated in Middlesex or in Yorkshire, search should be made in the registries established for those counties (k). An official search can be obtained in the Middlesex registry at the Office of Land Registry, and in the Yorkshire registries (l).

Middlesex and Yorkshire

614. On a sale of copyhold or customary freehold land, search should be made in the court rolls of the manor of which the land forms part in order to ascertain that all incumbrances and matters affecting the land are disclosed by the abstract (m).

case it should be during the period of the abstract. In the case of freehold land, the search should be against the persons beneficially entitled in possession to freehold interests; in the case of copyhold, against the tenants on the rolls (Land Charges Registration and Searches Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 51), s. 10).

616. When title is made through a married woman not entitled either by statute or otherwise to her separate use, and there is ground for suspecting that she has made a conveyance of it which is not disclosed by the abstract, search should be made at the Central Office in the index of certificates of acknowledgments of deeds by married women (b). An official search can be obtained (a).

617. Official searches may be requisitioned to be made at the Office of Land Registry for writs and orders affecting land, lis pendens, life annuities, deeds of arrangement and land charges (c) ; and in the Central Office for disentailing assurances and certificates of acknowledgments of deeds by married women (d). The official certificate of the result of the search is, according to its tenor, conclusive, affirmatively or negatively as the case may be, in favour of a purchaser as against persons interested under or in respect of the matters or documents registered, and also protects solicitors, and trustees, executors, and other persons in a fiduciary position, whether acting through solicitors or not, against any loss that may arise from any error in the certificate (e). The right of making private searches is not affected by reason of the power to requisition an official search (f).

Official searches can also be obtained in the Middlesex and Yorkshire registries, but while the official certificate protects solicitors, trustees, and other persons in a fiduciary position, it is not conclusive in favour of purchasers (g).

An official search in bankruptcy cannot be obtained.

if the purchaser has entered into possession under an express condition in the contract enabling him to do so before completion (r) or where the vendor has consented to his doing so without prejudice to his right to require a good title; nor where the purchaser was already in possession at the time of the sale, unless he has remained for a long time without raising objections as to title (s).

622. In whatever manner an acceptance of title has taken place, it is an acceptance only of the title shown by the abstract, and does not preclude the purchaser from taking objections, not precluded by the contract, by reason of defects not disclosed by the abstract which he subsequently discovers (t). Such acceptance does not operate as a waiver of the purchaser's right to have the abstract verified (u), nor does it preclude objections to matters which are matters of conveyance rather than of title, such as the existence of charges upon the property which are removable by the vendor (v). If a purchaser is willing to accept the title upon a specific objection being removed, and to waive all other objections, such waiver is conditional only on the removal of that specific objection (x).

623. An agreement for the sale of land, of which specific performance can be ordered, operates as an alienation by the vendor of his beneficial proprietary interest in the property (a). As from the date of the contract, his beneficial interest is transferred from the land to the purchase-money, and if his interest was of the nature of real estate, it is, as from that date, converted into personalty (b). As regards the land, he becomes constructively a trustee for the purchaser (c), with the right as trustee to be indemnified by the purchaser against the liabilities of the trust property (d); and the purchaser becomes beneficial owner, with the right to dispose of the property by sale, mortgage, or otherwise, and to devise it by will (e), while on his death intestate it devolves on his legal personal representatives, who hold it, subject to the requirements of administration, if the interest purchased is real estate, for the heir-at-law, and if personal estate, for the next of kin (f).

But the vendor is not a mere trustee. Until payment he retains a personal and substantial interest in the property, a right to protect that interest, and an active right to assert it if anything in derogation of it should be done, and the relation of trustee and cestui que trust is subject to the paramount right of the trustee to protect his own interest as vendor of the property (g). There is, in fact, only a qualified trusteeship until the price is paid and nothing remains to be done by either party except the execution of the deed of conveyance; when, however, that stage has been reached, the full relation of trustee and cestui que trust thereby established relates back to the formation of the contract (h).

The trusteeship of the vendor and the beneficial ownership of the purchaser are, however, conditional upon the performance of the contract (i). If the contract is rescinded, or if, from want of title on the part of the vendor (k) or otherwise, the contract is such that specific performance could not be obtained, and the defect is not waived by the purchaser, the position is the same as regards the interests in the property as though the relation of vendor and purchaser had never arisen. The vendor is treated as if he had never been trustee, and the purchaser as if he had never been equitable owner (l).

Until the contract is completed by conveyance of the legal estate to the purchaser, the vendor continues to be the proper person to enforce any rights in respect of the property which depend on the possession of the legal estate; but, subject to ultimate completion, the purchaser's interest ranks as against third parties like any other equitable interest, and it is subject to equities prior in date and has priority over subsequent equitable and legal interests, except a legal interest taken for value and without notice of the contract (m). The purchaser, however, is not, in general, entitled to enforce his interest against third parties until he has completed his title by conveyance (n); but, if he pays his purchase-money and takes a conveyance of the legal estate without notice of an existing equity, he gains priority over it (o).

624. Pending the completion of the contract, the rights of the vendor consist generally in (1) the right to retain possession until the purchase-money has been paid (p); (2) a lien on the property for the amount of the unpaid purchase-money (q); (3) a

Fowler*, [1904] 1 Ch. 658, 662; affirmed on other grounds, [1904] 2 Ch. 93, C. A. (m) See title EQUIT, Vol. XIII., p. 79.

(n) See Tasker v. Small (1837), 3 My. & Cr. 63, per Lord COTTENHAM, L.C., at pp. 70, 71: "This rule"—namely, that, by a contract of purchase, the purchaser becomes in equity the owner of the property—"applies only as between the parties to the contract, and cannot be extended so as to affect the interests of others. If it could, a contract for the purchase of an equitable estate would be equivalent to a conveyance of it. Before the contract is carried into effect, the purchaser cannot, against a stranger to the contract, enforce equities attaching to the property." But perhaps this statement is too wide. A purchaser of an equity of redemption before completion may be entitled to redeem, though not to call for a conveyance from the mortgagee (Pearce v. Morris (1869), 5 Ch. App. 227); and it seems that the material point as regards third parties is not whether or not there has been a conveyance to the purchaser, but whether he has an immediate right to call for a conveyance; and he has such right when he has accepted the vendor's title and has paid or tendered the purchase-money. The completion of the contract is then no longer in doubt and the purchaser's equitable title has ceased to be in suspense: in such a case, if he is purchasing an equitable interest, conveyance seems not to be essential to vest in him the full equitable title.

(o) Where the conveyance and the payment of the purchase-money are not simultaneous, the material date as regards notice is the date of payment; if the purchaser takes an assignment without notice of an existing equity, and afterwards pays with notice, he is not protected (Tildesley v. Lodge (1857), 3 Sm. & G. 543); if he pays without notice and takes a conveyance with notice, it would seem that he is protected; see title EQUIT, Vol. XIII., p. 76, note (q); but see, contra, Wigg v. Wigg (1739), 1 Atk. 382. If the purchaser has notice of an equitable mortgage, he must ascertain for himself that it has been discharged. His acquisition of the legal estate is no protection if a receipt tendered by the vendor is a forgery (Jared v. Clements, [1903] 1 Ch. 428, C. A.).

right until the proper time for completion to receive the rents and profits for his own benefit (r); and (4) a right after the proper time for completion to interest at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum on the purchase-money till payment (s); but he must preserve the property from deterioration and must pay the current outgoings (t). The property, however, is at the risk of the purchaser (a), and from the proper time for completion the purchaser is entitled to be credited with rents and profits, and is liable to be charged with outgoings (b). If he has paid the purchase-money, or any part of it, and the purchase ultimately goes off without his default, he is entitled to a lien on the land for the amount which he has paid (c).

625. In regard to the completion of the contract three dates are material—the date, if any, fixed by the contract for completion; the date when the vendor shows and verifies such a title as the purchaser can require; and the date of actual completion. In the ordinary course, completion consists in the purchaser paying the purchase-money, and the vendor at the same time executing a conveyance and delivering possession to the purchaser; when these incidents are separated, the date of payment of the purchase-money may be regarded as the date of completion (d).

completion :

The completion of the contract is conditional on the vendor making out his title (e). Until the vendor makes out his title, the purchaser is not safe in paying the purchase-money and taking possession (f). Hence the date when the vendor makes out his title is the earliest date at which completion should take place, and it is the proper date for completion (g) if no date is fixed by the contract (h).

vendor must make out his title by that date; otherwise the purchaser cannot be required to complete either then or subsequently (l). If it is not of the essence of the contract, and the title has not then been made out, the purchaser can be required to complete as soon as the title has been made out. But in case of undue delay either party may fix a reasonable time for completion, and this time then becomes of the essence of the contract (m).

The right of the vendor to receive the purchase-money is secured, first, by a lien upon the property (n), and, secondly, by his right, in the absence of express stipulation as to the time of delivering possession, to retain possession until the purchase-money is paid (o).

The contract may contain express provision showing that possession is to be given at a fixed date, although the sale is not then otherwise completed (p). Under such a provision the vendor may be required to give possession before the purchase-money is paid (q), or the purchaser to take possession before the vendor has made out his title (r). Otherwise either party can insist on delivery of possession being treated as part of the completion of the contract, and, in particular, the vendor is entitled to the actual possession of the property or the actual receipt of rents and profits until the whole of the purchase-money has been paid (s).

SUB-SECT. 3.—Maintenance of the Property.

626. Inasmuch as the vendor, while remaining in possession, is in a sense a trustee for the purchaser (t), he is bound to take reasonable care that the property does not become deteriorated between the date of the contract and the time when possession is delivered to the purchaser (a); and, although the delay in completion is due to the purchaser, this duty remains binding on the vendor so long as he treats his possession as a security for the purchase-money (b).

Subject to this duty on the part of the vendor, the property is, from the date of the contract, at the purchaser's risk as regards loss or deterioration (c), and he is entitled to any accretion to its value (d).

627. The accidental destruction of the property by fire or otherwise is a loss which falls upon the purchaser (e); and, where the vendor has an insurance existing on the property, the contract does not, in the absence of special stipulation (f), confer on the purchaser any direct interest in the policy moneys, so as to entitle him to recover from the vendor, or to deduct from the purchase-money, the amount received by the vendor under the policy (g). Nor is the vendor bound to maintain the policy, or to inform the purchaser that it has lapsed (h), unless the contract expressly or impliedly imposes such liability; where, for instance, it provides that the purchaser shall have the benefit of the insurance (i). But on a sale of leaseholds the omission of the vendor to observe a covenant to insure is a defect in his title (k), and under a condition that the vendor shall pay outgoings up to the day fixed for completion, he must, if under a covenant to insure, bear insurance premiums (l).

Where an accident to the premises brings with it legal obligation, which must be immediately satisfied, where, for instance, the premises fall down and injure adjoining property, the case falls within the same principle, and the expense must be borne by the purchaser (Robertson v. Skelton (1849), 12 Beav. 260).

(d) Thus, if an estate for lives is sold, and a life drops before completion, the loss falls on the purchaser; but, if it is the reversion that is sold, the benefit belongs to the purchaser (White v. Nutts, supra; Ex parte Manning (1727), 2 P. Wms. 410). "If after the contract the estate is improved in the interval, or if the value be lessened by the failure of tenants or otherwise, and no fault on either side, the vendee has the benefit or sustains the loss" (Harford v. Purrier, supra, at p. 539). Similarly, the purchaser has the benefit of any unexpected diminution in the value of the consideration, where, for instance, part of the consideration is an annuity for the life of the vendor, and the vendor dies immediately after the contract (Mortimer v. Capper (1782), 1 Bro. C. C. 156). See also Dart, Vendors and Purchasers, 7th ed., p. 293.

It is not essential that the vendor shall have made out his title before the loss occurs; it is sufficient if he makes it out afterwards within the time which he can properly claim for that purpose; and, if the purchaser has waived objections before the loss, he is bound to complete (Paine v. Meller, supra, at p. 352); see pp. 339, 340, ante.

(f) See p. 340, ante. Under a policy in the usual form, the consent of the office is necessary for an assignment of the benefit of the policy (Lynch v. Dalzell (1730), 4 Bro. Parl. Cas. 431; Sadlers' Co. v. Badcock (1743), 2 Atk. 554); and see note (m), p. 340, ante.

(g) Poole v. Adams, supra; Rayner v. Preston (1881), 18 Ch. D. 1, C. A. But since the contract of insurance is a contract of indemnity, the vendor cannot profit by it so as to be paid twice over; and if he receives both the policy moneys and the purchase-money, he must refund the policy moneys to the office (Castellain v. Preston (1883), 11 Q. B. D. 380, C. A.); see title INSURANCE, Vol. XVII., pp. 520, 521.

Although the purchaser has no direct interest in the vendor's policy of insurance, yet he is a person "interested in or entitled unto" the property within the Fires Prevention (Metropolis) Act, 1774 (m), and he can require the insurance company to lay out the policy moneys in rebuilding or reinstating the premises, provided that, at the time of his request, they have not already paid the moneys to the vendor (n).

628. In pursuance of his duty to preserve the property from deterioration, the vendor must act in regard to it as a provident beneficial owner (o). He must keep it in repair so far as this can be done by ordinary expenditure (p); he must prevent its being damaged by trespassers (q); and, in the case of agricultural land, he must maintain it in a proper state of management and cultivation (r), and if the tenancy determines before completion he must relet the land on a yearly tenancy, so as to keep it full (s). If damage is caused by the vendor's failure to perform his duty in this respect, the purchaser is entitled to have the amount of the loss deducted from the purchase-money (t); or, if he has completed the purchase, he can recover the amount by way of damages (a).

The maintenance of the property is a current expense which should be paid out of the rents and profits, and it is borne by the vendor so long as he is entitled to receive the rents and profits for his own benefit (b). After that time it must be borne by the purchaser (c).

Where an extraordinary outlay in permanent repairs is necessary for the preservation of the property, the vendor is, apparently, entitled to be allowed as against the purchaser the amount so expended (d). But the vendor's duty in respect of the property does not extend to making improvements; for instance, in expending money in building, or in obtaining a renewal of a lease; and he cannot recover from the purchaser money so spent (e).

Where the property is leasehold, the vendor must perform all the covenants of the lease up to the time when the purchaser should take possession (f).

SUB-SECT. 4.—Rents and Profits.

629. Although the vendor is entitled to possession or to receipt of rents and profits until payment of the purchase-money, his beneficial title does not extend beyond the time when completion ought to take place; that is, if no day is fixed for completion, the time when he first makes out his title, or, if a day is fixed for completion, then the day so fixed (g). Until the proper time for completion, he occupies the property or receives the rents and profits for his own benefit (h); after that time they belong to the purchaser (i), and the vendor receives them until actual completion as trustee for the purchaser and must account to him accordingly (k). If the vendor is in occupation, he may be charged with an occupation rent (l).

For the purpose of the above rule the rents and profits of the land include the rents of the land, and also all the profits accruing from the use or working of the land in the state in which it exists at the date of the contract. Thus, if it is agricultural land, the vendor, as long as he is entitled to the profits, can get in and dispose of the crops in a due course of husbandry and retain the proceeds for his own benefit (m). If the land has an open mine or quarry upon it, the vendor, if the mine is let, takes the rents and royalties accruing due during the same period, notwithstanding that they represent part of the substance of the land, and, if it is not let, but is being worked, he takes, apparently, for his own benefit the proceeds of working (n). On the sale of a manor the vendor takes fines accruing due on admittances before the proper day for completion (o).

The vendor is not, however, entitled to take under the guise of profits what is in fact part of the inheritance, and the purchaser may obtain an injunction to prevent him doing anything likely to destroy or depreciate the property sold or to prevent the property being assured to the purchaser (p); though, where the vendor disputes the existence of an enforceable contract for sale, such an injunction will not be granted unless the balance of convenience requires it (q).

amount of depreciation threatened leaves the vendor with an adequate security for the amount unpaid, he may obtain an injunction to restrain such acts (b).

631. Under the ordinary judgment requiring a vendor to account for rents and profits from the proper time for completion he is chargeable only with rents and profits actually received by him or by other persons for his use (c); but, if it is proved that rents and profits have not been received owing to neglect or improper conduct on his part, the order is that he shall account for rents and profits received or which, but for his wilful neglect or default, might have been received by him (d).

If it is alleged that he has been in occupation of the property, a direction may be given that he shall, if such appears to be the fact, be charged with an occupation rent (e).

(b) See Humphreys v. Harrison (1820), 1 Jac. & W. 581; Hippesley v. Spencer (1820), 5 Madd. 422; King v. Smith (1843), 2 Hare, 239; these cases were all between mortgagee and mortgagor in possession. See also title MORTGAGE, Vol. XXI., pp. 158, 160.

(c) See form of judgment in 3 Seton, Judgments and Orders, 7th ed., p. 2170. This is the usual form in cases of account of rents and profits except as against a mortgagee in possession, who is always charged on the footing of wilful default (see title MORTGAGE, Vol. XXI., p. 199), and a trustee against whom a breach of trust is proved (see title TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES; Howell v. Howell (1837), 2 My. & Cr. 478, 486). An unpaid vendor, since he has a lien on the land, is in a position analogous to that of a mortgagee in possession, but he is not, merely on that ground, chargeable on the footing of wilful default (Sherwin v. Shakspear (1854), 5 De G. M. & G. 517, 531, 532, C. A.; Regent's Canal Co. v. Ware (1857), 23 Beav. 575, 588). In Phillips v. Silvester (1872), 8 Ch. App. 173, which seems to lay down a contrary rule, there was in fact wilful default; see, further, title EQUITY, Vol. XIII., p. 99, note (h). A vendor of a farm is charged with the proceeds of crops actually realised, subject to deduction of expenses of realisation, but under the ordinary judgment he is not allowed losses incurred in farming (Bennett v. Stone, [1902] 1 Ch. 226; affirmed, [1903] 1 Ch. 509, C. A.).

(d) See 3 Seton, Judgments and Orders, 7th ed., p. 2173. This is done, for instance, where the vendor has, by his neglect, allowed the rents to fall into arrear (Wilson v. Clapham (1819), 1 Jac. & W. 36; see Acland v. Cuming, Gaisford v. Acland (1816), 2 Madd. 28, where the account was specifically directed to arrears of rent), or, apparently, where he omits, without the purchaser's assent, to relet on a yearly tenancy agricultural land which falls vacant before completion; see Egmont (Earl) v. Smith, Smith v. Egmont (Earl) (1877), 6 Ch. D. 469. But the fact that the vendor, in common with other landowners in the neighbourhood, has reduced the rents, there being nothing to show that this was not done in the ordinary course of management by a prudent owner, is not a ground for an order to account on the footing of wilful default (Sherwin v. Shakspear, supra); nor is it wilful default to allow a tenant to continue at a low rent, when the purchaser has not required him to be turned out (Crosse v. Beaufort (Duke) (1851), 5 De G. & Sm. 7).

(e) See 3 Seton, Judgments and Orders, 7th ed., p. 2178; Dyer v. Hargrave, Hargrave v. Dyer (1805), 10 Ves. 505, 511. In order to charge the vendor with an occupation rent the judgment must be specially framed; see Bennett v. Stone, supra, where it was stated ([1902] 1 Ch. at p. 237) that an occupation rent might be charged under a decree on the footing of wilful default; but this term is not appropriate to the case of a vendor continuing SECT. 1. An occupation rent usually is allowed if the possession has been beneficial to the vendor (f), but not if the vendor has against his own wish been compelled to remain in possession of business premises (g).

Rights and Duties with Respect to the Property.
Outgoings.

SUB-SECT. 5.—Outgoings.

632. In a formal contract it is usually provided that the vendor shall pay all the outgoings until the day fixed for completion, and that for this purpose all necessary apportionments shall be made (h). In the absence of any such stipulation the vendor must, for the period during which he is entitled to take the rents and profits for his own benefit—that is, till the proper date for completion—bear all outgoings (i), and as to such as are current at the end of the period and are legally apportionable he bears the part attributable to the period.

SUB-SECT. 6.—Interest.

Vendor's right to interest.

633. As a general rule, as soon as the vendor ceases to be entitled to receive the rents and profits for his own benefit, he becomes entitled to interest on the unpaid purchase-money until actual payment (k). The right to interest may be either an implied or an express term of the contract (l).

When time for completion not fixed.

634. Where the contract is silent as to the time for completion and payment of interest, interest is payable at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum (m) from the time when the vendor has made out his title so that the purchaser could safely take possession (n). When the title is proved in an action for specific performance, interest runs from the date of the master's certificate that a good title has been made out (o). The purchaser, however, pays interest on purchase-money which he retains to meet incumbrances (Hughes v. Kearney (1803), 1 Sch. & Lef. 132, 134).

Consolidation Act, 1845 (p), the same rule applies, and interest is payable from the date when the vendor makes out his title (q), but not before the purchase-money has been ascertained (r).

If the purchaser is let into possession, either immediately at the date of the contract or subsequently, interest begins to run on the unpaid purchase-money from the time of possession, unless otherwise agreed (s). If he is already in possession as tenant, it runs from the date of the contract, and he is from that date entitled to the rents and profits (a).

635. When the contract fixes a time for completion, but is silent as to payment of interest, interest at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum (b) is as a general rule payable as from the date so fixed (c); but, if the delay in completion is caused by the vendor, he is not allowed to profit by his own default, and, if the interest exceeds the rents and profits, he takes the rents and profits, and interest does not run until he is ready to give a good title to the purchaser, or until the purchaser may first safely take possession (d). If the contract, though silent as to interest, gives the vendor the rents

The contract for purchase does not effect a surrender of the tenancy, since completion is conditional on a good title being made (see title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., p. 550), although in equity the tenant has the ordinary rights of a purchaser (Daniels v. Davison, supra; see Raffety v. Schofield, [1897] 1 Ch. 937). But a mere tenancy at will is determined by the contract (Daniels v. Davison, supra, at p. 252). A purchaser who obtains possession before completion without the consent of the vendor, and without any provision in the contract authorising him to do so, is a mere trespasser (Crockford v. Alexander (1808), 15 Ves. 138).

Where under a stipulation in the contract a vendor elects to take interest in lieu of rents, he is not at liberty, as against the purchaser, to allocate any part of such rents to arrears of rents due to himself from tenants either at the date of the contract or subsequently before the day fixed for completion (Plews v. Samuel [1904] 1 Ch. 464).

636. Where there is no express agreement for payment of interest (f), the purchaser, if he is not responsible for the delay, can avoid payment of interest by appropriating money to meet the purchase-money and giving notice of the appropriation to the vendor (g). The money should either be placed on deposit (h), or otherwise kept available at the purchaser's bank (i). This does not interfere with the right of the purchaser to the rents and profits (k), but any interest which is actually made by the money belongs to the vendor (l).

SECT. 2.—Assignment by Either Party before Completion.

SUB-SECT. 1.—Assignment of the Property.

Disposition
by purchaser.

Disposition
by vendor.

637. Upon the making of an enforceable contract for sale the purchaser becomes the owner of the land in equity (a), and can dispose of his equitable interest to a third party (b).

But the vendor, since he becomes a trustee for the purchaser (a), is not entitled to dispose of the property to any person other than the purchaser. Where there is a clear contract for sale, any such intended disposition entitles the purchaser to obtain an injunction to prevent the disposition from being carried into effect (c), and if it has been carried into effect the purchaser can forthwith sue the vendor for damages on the ground that he has incapacitated himself from performing the contract (d).

Norris* (1784), 1 Cox, Eq. Cas. 59 (where the purchaser was allowed compensation in respect of the time down to which the purchase-money was unproductive); see also Bennett v. Stone, [1903] 1 Ch. 509, 524, C. A. The effect of the appropriation is only to stop interest; the money remains at the risk of the purchaser (Roberts v. Massey (1807), 13 Ves. 561). But if the vendor is in default interest does not run (see pp. 333, 375, ante), so that appropriation seems only to be necessary where there is delay for which neither vendor nor purchaser are to blame. As to appropriation where the payment of interest is provided for, see p. 334, ante.

638. Where the alienee from the vendor gets in the legal estate or acquires the best right to call for it (e), and can avail himself of the plea that he is a purchaser for value without notice of the contract, his title then prevails over the equitable interest of the purchaser (f), and the purchaser's only remedy is in damages. But where the alienee does not take for valuable consideration (g), or acquires only an equitable interest (h), or takes with notice of the purchaser's interest (i), he takes subject to the purchaser's prior equity, and may be made a defendant in the purchaser's suit for specific performance and be ordered to convey to the plaintiff (k). The alienee is protected against the original purchaser if he pays or performs the consideration before he has notice of the prior contract; and, if he has paid the purchase-money before notice, he can protect himself by getting in the legal estate after notice (l). If, however, when he receives notice, he has paid part only of the purchase-money, he cannot safely pay the balance, even though the vendor conveyed the property to him before he had notice (m); but he is entitled to a charge on the property for the amount already paid (n).

The assignee may sue in his own name if the other party has recognised the assignment so as to effect a novation of the contract (r), or if the assignment is of the entire contract (s), and fulfils certain statutory requirements (t), but otherwise he must either sue in the name of the assignor or make the assignor a party (a); and the assignor remains liable to be sued on the contract unless by novation the assignee has been substituted in his place (b). In exercising the power under the Land Transfer Act, 1897 (60 & 61 Vict. c. 65), it is sufficient if the executors to whom probate is granted join in the sale (Conveyancing Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 37), s. 12; overriding Re Pawley and London and Provincial Bank, [1900] 1 Ch. 58; see title EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, Vol. XIV., p. 238). to his devisee or customary heir, according as the vendor dies testate or intestate in respect thereof (m). Thus, where the land was included in a general or specific devise in the vendor's will, it passes to the devisee subject to the contract (n); and, where the title has been accepted in the vendor's lifetime, so that he has become an absolute, and not merely a provisional, trustee for the purchaser, the property passes under a devise of his trust estates (o).

643. On the death of the purchaser before completion, his equitable interest in the property vests in the first instance in his legal personal representatives for the purposes of administration (p); but, subject thereto, the right to the property devolves, if the interest purchased is freehold or copyhold of inheritance, on the devisee or the general or customary heir-at-law, and if it is leasehold, on the legatee or next of kin, according as it is disposed of by the purchaser's will or not (q). But the persons beneficially entitled to the land take it subject to any lien which the vendor may have thereon for the purchase price (r), and a specific devisee of the purchaser's interest in the land cannot, except where the purchaser by his will or by deed or other document has signified a contrary intention (s), claim to have the purchase-money paid out of any other part of the deceased purchaser's estate (t). This liability of the land to bear the purchase-money does not, however, deprive the vendor of his right to enforce payment of the purchase-money out of the purchaser's personal estate or otherwise (u).

(where the interest agreed to be purchased was a rentcharge issuing out of leasehold land, i.e., a chattel real passing to the next of kin). Formerly the specific devisee could claim to have the purchase-money paid out of the purchaser's personal estate, provided there was an enforceable contract existing at the purchaser's death; see *Broome v. the purchaser, and an action by the vendor upon the contract, whether at law to recover damages for breach of contract or in equity for specific performance, should be brought against the personal representatives. Before the 1st January, 1898 (v), the heir or devisee was also a necessary party, since he was interested in the title being properly investigated (w), but since that date he should only be made a party by special order (x). An action against the vendor for damages for breach of the contract should be brought by the personal representatives, and until the interest of the purchaser has vested in the heir or other beneficiary by conveyance from the personal representatives or by assent, the personal representatives are proper plaintiffs in an action for specific performance. Moreover, the equitable interest of the beneficial owner supports an action by him, and in such action the legal personal representatives should be parties, since they are liable for the purchase-money (a).

SUB-SECT. 2.—Bankruptcy.

645. Upon the vendor under an uncompleted contract being adjudicated bankrupt, the legal estate in the property agreed to be sold vests, as a rule, in his trustee in bankruptcy, subject, nevertheless, to the equitable title of the purchaser to have the estate conveyed to him on payment of the purchase price (b); and this is so if the purchase-money is still unpaid, so that the vendor has a lien on the land for the amount (c), or if he has otherwise any beneficial interest in the property or the possibility of a beneficial interest (d).

property would not be assets in the bankruptcy at all, and would not pass to the trustee in bankruptcy (f).

646. The remedy of the purchaser is either in damages at law for breach of the contract or for specific performance in equity. The former is a claim provable in the vendor's bankruptcy (g), and after the making of the receiving order the purchaser cannot commence an action for the breach without the leave of the court (h). Unless such leave is obtained he must prove in the bankruptcy; otherwise the vendor's liability is extinguished by the discharge of the bankrupt, or by the acceptance by the creditors and approval by the court of a composition or scheme under the Bankruptcy Acts (i). The purchaser's claim for specific performance of the contract is not provable in the bankruptcy (k), and may be enforced against the trustee either by action or by claim in the bankruptcy (l), and if not enforced during the bankruptcy is not extinguished by the discharge of the vendor or by a composition (m).

647. The trustee can disclaim the property on the ground that it is burdened with onerous covenants, and he can disclaim the contract for sale on the ground that it is unprofitable (n), where, for instance, it binds the vendor to spend money on the property (o); but he cannot disclaim the contract and at the same time retain the property (p). He must either perform the contract and convey the property, thereby entitling himself to receive the purchase-money from the purchaser, or he must disclaim the contract and thereby cease to have any right to enforce it against the purchaser. In the latter case, though he is no longer bound to perform any onerous obligations, he has no right to receive the purchase-money (q); but this does not prejudice the purchaser's interest in the property.

Similarly the purchaser's lien for his deposit, if he relies on this only, is outside the bankruptcy (Levy v. Stogdon, [1898] 1 Ch. 478, 486; affirmed on another point, [1899] 1 Ch. 5, C. A.).

No disclaimer can take away the equitable interest which the purchaser has acquired in the property under his contract, or affect his right either to call upon the trustee to convey the land to him (v), or to apply for an order vesting the property in himself (s).

648. If at the date of completion a receiving order has been made, and adjudication of bankruptcy follows, the purchaser is not protected, even though he completes without notice of the act of bankruptcy or the adjudication (t).

649. Where a purchaser, after the making of the contract, has notice of an act of bankruptcy committed by the vendor, he cannot safely proceed to complete the contract until three months have elapsed from the act of bankruptcy without a petition being presented against the vendor (a); for, in case the vendor should be adjudicated bankrupt on a petition presented within that period, any conveyance made to the purchaser within the period would be void, and though the purchaser had paid his purchase-money to the vendor, he would have to pay it again to the trustee in bankruptcy in order to obtain an effective conveyance from him (b).

Accordingly, a vendor who has committed an act of bankruptcy is not in a position to obtain specific performance of the contract for sale until the three months have elapsed (c); and a purchaser who receives notice of an act of bankruptcy by the vendor which prevents the vendor being in a position to complete on the date fixed for completion can, if time is of the essence of the contract, immediately claim to treat the contract as broken and recover any deposit he has paid (d).

Where time is not made of the essence of the contract, either originally or by notice given subsequently (e), the purchaser may object to the title on the ground of the act of bankruptcy (f); but if, when the proper time for completion arrives, the act of bankruptcy is no longer available, or the vendor has been adjudicated bankrupt, the vendor or his trustee, as the case may be, can enforce the contract against the purchaser (g).

reasonable time to pay the purchase price and complete the contract (h), or may disclaim the contract as unprofitable (i).

651. The vendor cannot obtain specific performance against the purchaser's trustee in bankruptcy (k). He can apply in writing to the trustee requiring him to decide whether he will disclaim or not (l), or he can apply for an order rescinding the contract on such terms as to payment of damages (which would be provable as a debt in the bankruptcy) or otherwise as may seem equitable to the court (m).

652. A vendor who completes without notice of an act of bankruptcy committed by the purchaser, and before the date of the receiving order, is protected by statute (n). Where the vendor before completion has notice of such an act of bankruptcy, he is liable, if he completes, to refund the purchase-money to the purchaser's trustee if the purchaser should be adjudicated bankrupt on that act of bankruptcy (o); and, accordingly, the purchaser cannot obtain specific performance so long as the act of bankruptcy is available against him (a); and if at the proper time for completion the purchaser is not in such a position that the vendor can safely accept the purchase-money from him, the vendor may claim to treat the contract as broken and retain any deposit in his hands (b). If, however, at the time for completion there is not any act of bankruptcy available against the purchaser, and the contract has not then been validly repudiated, the purchaser has the same right as a vendor in similar circumstances (c) to enforce specific performance of the contract.

653. Where the purchaser is an undischarged bankrupt, the vendor cannot safely complete unless the purchaser can show to his satisfaction that the purchase-money has been acquired by the SUB-SECT. 3.—Winding-up.

Effect of

654. In the case of a winding-up by the court, every disposition of the property of the company made after the commencement of the winding-up is void unless the court otherwise orders (e). Hence a contract for the purchase of land from a company cannot be safely completed after the presentation of the petition, since it involves the disposition of the land of the company; nor can a contract for the sale of land to a company, since it involves the disposition of the money of the company (f).

655. After the winding-up order has been made, the completion of a pending contract rests with the liquidator, subject to the control of the court (g); and the liquidator, in the exercise of his power to realise the assets of the company (h), can adopt and carry into effect a contract of sale. But apart from this, it is the duty of the liquidator, if the contract is specifically enforceable, to complete the title of the purchaser by affixing the company's common seal to a conveyance of the legal estate and to receive the purchase-money (i). In the case of a contract for purchase, he can, with the concurrence of the vendor, resell the land and pay the vendor pro tanto out of the proceeds, leaving the vendor to prove in the winding-up for any deficiency in the price (k).

(f) If the contract is for sale by the company and is specifically enforceable, the equitable interest is already in the purchaser, and the company on completion only disposes of the legal interest, and the court, if the transaction is bonâ fide, will probably validate the disposition. If the contract is for purchase by the company, the payment of the purchase-money by the company involves more risk; see Re Civil Service and General Store, Ltd. (1887), 57 L. J. (CH.) 119. In either case completion should be postponed till the petition has been dealt with. The court will validate transactions entered into in the ordinary course of business and completed before the winding-up order (Re Wiltshire Iron Co., Ex parte Pearson (1868), 3 Ch. App. 443, 447; see title COMPANIES, Vol. V., p. 486), but this rule would only in exceptional cases apply to a sale or purchase of land.

practice, on the passing of the resolution for winding-up, since the liquidator is usually appointed at the same time; and after this date completion with the company cannot take place. But the liquidator has the same power to carry the contract into effect as in the case of a winding-up by the court(m), and he ought to complete a contract for sale which is specifically enforceable(n). If he is in doubt as to what is beneficial for the company, he can apply to the court for directions(o), or submit the matter to a general meeting(p).

complete.

657. If the liquidator under a compulsory or voluntary winding-up declines to complete the contract, the other party can either prove in the winding-up for any loss which he has sustained(q), or bring an action for specific performance(a). Where judgment is given for specific performance and the company is the vendor, completion will follow by conveyance by the company and payment of the purchase-money to the liquidator(b); if the company is the purchaser, the vendor's claim, as the result of specific performance, is a money claim in the winding-up for the deficiency in the purchase-money left after resale of the land and payment of the proceeds to the vendor(c).

658. Where the other party to the contract refuses to complete, the liquidator can bring an action in the name of the company either for breach of contract or for specific performance(d).

(q) Or, if the claim or the amount of damages is likely to be disputed, he can bring an action for breach of contract (see Currie v. Consolidated Kent Collieries Corporation, Ltd., [1906] 1 K. B. 134, C. A.), and then prove for the damages. Where the other party is the purchaser his claim is for his deposit with interest and his costs of investigating title and damages, if recoverable, for breach of contract; see pp. 411, 412, post.

SECT. 3.

Change in Position of Parties.Execution on party's interest in land.

659. Neither a vendor nor a purchaser of land is concerned with a writ of execution or order affecting the interest of the other party in the land unless the writ or order is registered (e). As regards the vendor's interest in the land, an execution creditor of the vendor, whose writ of execution is duly registered, acquires a chattel interest in the land and also a charge upon the vendor's interest therein (f), the interest of the judgment creditor being subject to the purchaser's equitable interest in the land under the contract for sale (g). Consequently, though the right of the purchaser to completion of the contract by conveyance is unaffected, he cannot safely pay his purchase-money without either satisfying the judgment creditor so far as possible thereout or obtaining his consent to payment of the whole amount to the vendor (h), and the creditor should join in the conveyance. Where execution is not levied until after the whole of the purchase-money has been paid, so that the vendor has no longer any beneficial interest in the land, an execution by a creditor of the vendor will not, it seems, affect the land sold (i); but, in such circumstances, a judgment creditor of the purchaser can obtain a charge on his interest in the land (k).

660. The appointment of a receiver of the vendor's interest in unpaid purchase-money, or of the purchaser's interest in the land, is ineffectual if for any reason the contract is not completed, so that the money or land, as the case may be, does not come into the hands of the debtor (l).

Equitable execution.SUB-SECT. 5.—Lunacy.

661. A contract for sale of land made between parties capable of contracting at the time is not avoided by the fact that either party becomes lunatic or of unsound mind before completion (m).

SUB-SECT. 6.—Marriage.

663. The power of a single woman who has contracted to sell or buy land to complete the contract is not affected by her marriage pending completion (p). But where the other party to the contract has notice of the marriage, he should inquire whether any settlement or agreement for settlement has been made affecting the property or the interest of the married woman under the contract.

664. A person against whom judgment of death or of penal servitude has been pronounced or recorded by any court of competent jurisdiction in England, Wales, or Ireland, upon any charge of treason or felony, is incapable of alienating any property so long as he is subject to the operation of the Forfeiture Act, 1870 (a); but, where the convict has entered into a contract for sale of land, the administrator of his property has power to complete the contract (b).

In cases where this procedure is available it must be adopted in preference to bringing an action (f).

667. An application under the statute puts the parties in the same position in chambers in which they would have been, and with all the rights which they would have had, under a judgment for specific performance. Hence, whatever could be done in chambers upon a reference as to title under such a judgment, where the contract has been established, can be done on a vendor and purchaser summons (g). But the procedure was not intended to enable the court to try summarily disputed questions of fact (h),

The Vendor and Purchaser Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 78), s. 9, provides for application to a judge of the Court of Chancery, and came into operation on the 7th August, 1874; the Judicature Act, 1873 (36 & 37 Vict. c. 66), did not come into operation until the 2nd November, 1874; see ibid., s. 2. See also title PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE, Vol. XXIII., pp. 189, 191.

(f) See King v. Chamberlayn, [1887] W. N. 158, where NORTH, J., at p. 159, said that if the plaintiff had deliberately adopted the more expensive mode of proceeding by action, he would not have allowed any more costs than the costs of a summons. The jurisdiction has been exercised in respect of contracts to create, as well as contracts to assign, leasehold interests (see Re Lander and Bagley's Contract, [1892] 3 Ch. 41; Re Stephenson and Cox's Contract (1892), 36 Sol. Jo. 287, C. A.; Re Anderton and Milner's Contract (1890), 45 Ch. D. 476), and the Vendor and Purchaser Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 78), s. 9, has even been applied to a voluntary grant, on counsel for both sides admitting a contract for a nominal consideration (Re Salisbury (Marquis) (1875), 23 W. R. 824). Where the vendor's title depends upon a question of construction involving real difficulty, the proper mode of settling that question is not by this procedure, but by originating summons (Re Nichols' and Von Joel's Contract, [1910] 1 Ch. 43, C. A.). A vendor in such a case who nevertheless proceeds under the Vendor and Purchaser Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 78), may, even though successful, be ordered to pay costs (Re Nichols' and Von Joel's Contract, supra). But such questions have sometimes been decided under the Act (Re Hill to Chapman (1885), 54 L. J. (CH.) 595, C. A.; Re Bishop and Richardson's Contract, [1899] 1 I. R. 71; Re Guyton and Rosenberg's Contract, [1901] 2 Ch. 591). As to determination by a judge of the King's Bench Division sitting in Bankruptcy of a point which would ordinarily be decided on a vendor and purchaser summons, see also Re Martin, Ex parte Dixon v. Tucker (1912), 106 L. T. 381.

(g) Re Burroughs, Lynn and Sexton (1877), 5 Ch. D. 601, C. A., per JAMES, L.J., at p. 604. The particular point in that case was that affidavit evidence could be admitted and the deponents cross-examined.

SECT. 1.
Vendor and and a vendor and purchaser summons cannot be treated as if it were an action for specific performance, or for rescission, or for any other purpose (i). It enables either party to the contract to obtain a decision upon some isolated point without having recourse to an action for specific performance (k), such as whether a requisition has been sufficiently answered, or whether a requisition is precluded by the conditions (l), or any short point of law or construction arising on the abstract, contract, or requisitions (m).

Consequential relief.

668. The jurisdiction to make such order as appears just enables the judge to give relief which is the ordinary consequence of the decision of the point submitted to him (n). Thus, when the decision of the point raised necessarily involves a determination that the vendor has not made a good title, an order may be made for the return of the deposit with interest, and payment by the vendor of the purchaser's costs of investigating title, whether the summons was taken out by the vendor or the purchaser (o). But an order for payment of unliquidated damages as compensation for a vendor's delay, or of any sum which entails an inquiry, and is not merely a matter for computation or taxation, cannot be made on a vendor and purchaser summons (p), as such an application cannot be treated as an action for damages (q).

title.

669. Whether the point raised is decided against the purchaser or not, the judge may declare the title too doubtful to be forced on the purchaser (r).

670. Owing to the express exclusion of the decision on such a summons of questions affecting the existence or validity of the contract (s), the question whether the contract is fraudulent cannot be decided on a vendor and purchaser summons (t); but the exception relates to the existence or validity of the contract in its inception, and does not preclude the court from deciding upon a summons the validity of a vendor's notice to rescind the contract (a). The fact that the existence or validity of the contract, or the right of one party or the other to rescind it, is or may be the subject of dispute between the parties, does not preclude the court from deciding a point properly raised by summons (b).

672. The summons should be entitled in the matter of the contract, stating shortly the date, parties and subject-matter, and in the matter of the Vendor and Purchaser Act, 1874 (l).

(8) title deeds.
Title.
Parties.

673. The party to the summons who is the applicant makes the other party respondent (m), and, generally speaking, these are the only parties as between whom a decision on the summons is binding (n); other parties may appear and agree to be bound by the decision on the summons (o), but parties not before the court in either of these ways are not affected by the decision of any question raised on the summons (p); and, though a question has been decided, the same point may be raised on another summons when the purchaser resells (q). Where the question at issue primarily concerns other parties than the purchaser—where, for instance, the vendor's title depends on the construction of a will—the vendor should not raise this by a vendor and purchaser summons, but should have it determined on an originating summons for the construction of the will, so that all persons interested in the property may be bound (r).

674. The summons may be adjourned from chambers into court and from court to chambers (s). Hearing.

Any evidence required may be given by affidavit (t).

(m) Technically, the summons is not inter partes, i.e., the parties are not mentioned in the title as plaintiffs and defendants; but the respondent must enter an appearance, and beyond the title there is no substantial difference between an originating summons in the general form and one not inter partes; see also title PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE, Vol. XXIII., pp. 186 et seq.

SECT. 4.

SECT. 4.—*The Order.*The Order.

Order.

675. Such order may be made on the summons as the judge thinks just, and he can also order how and by whom all or any of the costs of and incident to the application are to be borne and paid (a).

Costs.

676. As a general rule, the costs of the application are ordered to be paid by the party whose contention has not been upheld by the court (b); and, if it is decided that the title is good, the purchaser must pay the costs, although it is not such as a conveyancer would advise a purchaser to accept without a decision of the court upon it (c). A vendor who does not exercise his right to rescind directly the summons is issued, but does so at a later stage before the hearing, may be ordered to pay the costs of the proceedings, although the condition giving the right to rescind provides for the return of the deposit without any interest, costs of investigating title, or other compensation or payment whatsoever (d). Where a vendor is ordered to pay costs, they may be made a charge upon his interest in the property (e).

Appeal.

677. Since a vendor and purchaser summons is not an action, any appeal from an order made thereon must be brought within fourteen days (f). This period runs, in the case of an order made in chambers, from the time when the order is pronounced or the appellant first has notice of it, and in other cases from the time when the order is signed, entered, or otherwise perfected (g). It would seem that an order on a vendor and purchaser summons is in most cases not an interlocutory order, but a final order from which an appeal lies to the Court of Appeal without leave (h).

SECT. 4.
The Order.

678. Where a party has obtained an order on a vendor and purchaser summons which requires something to be done by the other party, and the other party fails to comply, it is usually proper to apply to the court for enforcement of the order, and not to commence an action for specific performance (i). Where, however, the order does not contain any direction with which a party fails to comply, but merely decides the rights of one or both parties under the contract, an action for specific performance is, it seems, the only remedy open if one party declines to complete the contract (k).

Enforcement of order.

679. In a proper case where, after an order is made, fresh matter is for the first time discovered which is material to the questions raised on the summons and could not be produced or used by the party claiming the benefit of it at the time when the order on the summons was made, the order may be reviewed, and the question decided on the summons reopened: in such circumstances, a judge of the Chancery Division has jurisdiction to review an order of the Court of Appeal (l).

order.

Part VII.—Remedies under an Uncompleted Contract.

SECT. 1.—Rescission and Resale by Vendor.

680. If the contract contains a condition entitling the vendor to rescind on the happening of certain events, the vendor may, if these events arise, rescind (m). In the absence of such a condition, the vendor can only rescind if the conduct of the purchaser is such as to amount to a repudiation of the contract (n). If the vendor, acting within his rights, rescinds the contract, he may resell the property as owner (o) and retain any excess of price obtained on such resale beyond that fixed by the contract (p); but he cannot recover damages (q), nor, if the purchaser has been in possession, occupation rent (r).

Where the vendor rescinds the contract and resells under his absolute title, the purchaser forfeits the deposit entirely whatever the result of the resale, but the vendor loses his right to claim for the deficiency in price, if any (s).

SECT. 2.—Forfeiture and Recovery of Deposit.

SUB-SECT. 1.—Forfeiture.

Deposit.

681. A deposit paid under a contract of sale serves two purposes; if the sale is carried out it goes against the purchase-money; but primarily it is a security for the performance of the contract (t), and it is usual to provide expressly that, in the event of the purchaser failing to observe the conditions of the contract, the deposit shall be forfeited to the vendor (a). Such provision, however, is not necessary, and unless the contract taken as a whole shows an intention to exclude forfeiture (b), the vendor is entitled, by virtue of the purpose of the deposit, to retain it as forfeited if the contract goes off by the default of the purchaser (c); or, if the deposit has been paid to a stakeholder, he can require it to be paid over to himself (d). But the rule as to retention by the vendor appears to Arnold* (1889), 14 App. Cas. 429, per Lord MACNAGHTEN, at p. 435; Levy v. Stogdon, [1898] 1 Ch. 478, 485; affirmed, [1899] 1 Ch. 5, C. A.; Hall v. Burnell, [1911] 2 Ch. 551. As to payment of deposits, see, further, p. 320, ante; title CONTRACT, Vol. VII., p. 482.

(b) See Palmer v. Temple (1839), 9 Ad. & El. 508 (where a provision for payment of £1,000 as liquidated damages by either party in default was held to show an intention against forfeiture of a deposit of £300). The question of forfeiture depends, it was there said, on the intention of the parties to be collected from the whole instrument (see ibid., per COTTON, L.J., cited with approval in Howe v. Smith, supra, per BOWEN, L.J., at p. 97). But in practice an exclusion of forfeiture is never intended. Either there is an express clause of forfeiture, or there is simply a payment by way of deposit, and this implies liability to forfeiture; see the text, supra.

(c) "According to the law of vendor and purchaser the inference is that such a deposit"—that is, a payment of money simply as a "deposit"—"is paid as a guarantee for the performance of the contract, and where the contract goes off by default of the purchaser, the vendor is entitled to retain the deposit" (Collins v. Stimson, supra, per POLLOCK, B., at p. 143; Howe v. Smith, supra; Levy v. Stogdon, supra; Sprague v. Booth, [1909] A. C. 576, 580, P. C.). The law as to forfeiture of deposits applies to sales by the court (Depree v. Bedborough, supra).

(d) The nature of the deposit and the implied terms on which, in the apply only to money paid as a deposit, not to instalments of purchase-money (e).

682. Where in accordance with the contract the deposit is invested between the dates of sale and completion, the vendor is entitled to any increase, and must bear the loss, if any, in the value of the securities (f).

683. Where the contract gives the vendor an express right of forfeiture on non-performance of the contract or non-observance of its conditions, the right is exercisable when such non-performance or non-observance is finally ascertained, that is, at the date for performance or observance named in the contract if time is of the essence of the contract (g). But the right cannot be exercised upon non-performance or non-observance at such date, unless time in this respect is of the essence of the contract (h).

Where the contract gives the vendor no express right of forfeiture, the right is exercisable when—there being no default on the part of the vendor—the purchaser has expressly or impliedly repudiated the contract (i). An express repudiation gives the vendor an immediate right to retain the deposit as forfeited. There is an implied repudiation if the purchaser fails to complete on the day when he is bound to complete (j). This is the day, if any, fixed by the contract for completion, if time in this respect is of the essence of the contract (k); otherwise, if the purchaser is in default, the vendor can make time of the essence of the contract by giving the purchaser notice to complete at a reasonable date and threatening forfeiture of the deposit on non-completion on that date (l).

absence of express terms, it is paid, are not affected by the fact that it is paid to a stakeholder instead of to the vendor (Hall v. Burnell, [1911] 2 Ch. 551; see Collins v. Stimson (1883), 11 Q. B. D. 142, 143; Hart v. Porthgain Harbour Co., Ltd., [1903] 1 Ch. 690, 696). As to the authority of an auctioneer to receive payment of a deposit, see title AUCTION AND AUCTIONEERS, Vol. I., p. 503. It is important that the deposit should be paid to a stakeholder, since payment to the vendor's solicitor as his agent is equivalent to payment to the vendor; see Ellis v. Goulton, [1893] 1 Q. B. 350, C. A.; see note (f), p. 320, ante. An I.O.U. given for the deposit can be sued upon in the event of the deposit being forfeited (Hinton v. Sparkes (1868), L. R. 3 C. P. 161; see Cleave v. Moors (1857), 3 Jur. (N. S.) 48; Hodgens v. Keon, [1894] 2 I. R. 657, C. A.; title AUCTION AND AUCTIONEERS, Vol. I., p. 519); see also p. 320, ante.

A deposit paid to an auctioneer is at the risk of the vendor (see title AUCTION AND AUCTIONEERS, Vol. I., p. 513); if paid to a stakeholder, it is apparently at the risk of whichever party is ultimately entitled to it; but see *Fenton v. 684. The vendor, if he becomes entitled to rescind the contract owing to the purchaser's default, can both rescind and retain the deposit (m). The contract being thus at an end, the forfeiture of the deposit is not strictly in the nature of damages for breach of contract, though it has been said to be in the nature of liquidated damages and not a penalty (n). But the purchaser is not entitled to terminate the contract by giving up the deposit. Notwithstanding the deposit the vendor can insist on the contract, and sue either for specific performance (o) or for damages beyond the deposit (p).

685. In calculating the deficiency on a resale (q) under a power contained in the contract, the purchaser is entitled to be credited with the amount of the deposit (r); but this rule only applies where the power of resale is exercised (s).

686. If the purchaser has by his default in completion after he has accepted the title given the vendor the right to rescind the contract and retain the deposit as forfeited, and such right has been exercised, the forfeiture is final, and the purchaser cannot recover the deposit on the ground that the vendor's title is subsequently discovered to be defective (t).

13 Ch. D. 589; and, as to failure by the purchaser to complete after notice, see Howe v. Smith (1884), 27 Ch. D. 89, C. A.; Soper v. Arnold (1889), 14 App. Cas. 429. It is not enough that the purchaser has, by delay or otherwise, lost the right to specific performance; his conduct must amount to repudiation of the contract on his part (Howe v. Smith, supra, per COTTON, L.J., at p. 95), involving the loss of his right to maintain an action for damages (ibid., per FRY, L.J., at p. 104); see Levy v. Stogdon, [1898] 1 Ch. 478, 485. Three weeks' notice after two years' delay by the vendors has been held unreasonably short (Green v. Sevin (1879), 13 Ch. D. 589); compare Stickney v. Keeble (1913), 57 Sol. Jo. 389, C. A.; note (a), p. 402, post.

(m) Consequently, upon the purchaser failing to complete in pursuance of a judgment for specific performance, the vendor can obtain an order for rescission of the contract and for forfeiture of the deposit (Hall v. Burnell, [1911] 2 Ch. 551, 555, 556, not following Jackson v. De Kadich, [1904] W. N. 168); see Dunn v. Vere (1870), 19 W. R. 151; Re Parnell, Ex parte Barrell (1875), 10 Ch. App. 512 (bankruptcy of purchaser); Olde v. Olde, [1904] 1 Ch. 35. Where the deposit was not made as required by the contract, the vendor recovered the amount which should have been deposited, though it exceeded his loss on resale (Dewar v. Mintoft, [1912] 2 K. B. 373).

687. Where the vendor makes such default in performing his part of the contract (a) as entitles the purchaser to rescind the contract (b), the purchaser can recover the deposit with interest at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum (c); and, although on rescission of the contract he cannot obtain damages, he is entitled to restitutio in integrum (d), and on this ground can recover the costs of investigating the title (e), and apparently other expenses incurred in consequence of entering into the agreement (f), though, perhaps, not the costs of the agreement itself (g). If, instead of rescinding, the purchaser sues for damages for breach of contract, he can under this head recover his expenses in addition to the deposit (h). The fact that the purchaser has by delay lost the right to specific performance does not prevent him from recovering the deposit (i).

688. The right of the purchaser to recover his deposit is a legal right and springs out of breach of contract by the vendor (k). Where there has been no breach of contract, the vendor is not liable to return the deposit (l), notwithstanding that he is not entitled to specific performance (m). Thus, a defect in title, which the purchaser was by the conditions precluded from objecting to (n), or mere delay (o), may prevent the vendor from obtaining specific performance without rendering him liable to return the deposit (p).

689. Where a deposit has been paid under a verbal contract for the sale of land, a vendor who resists the purchaser's action on the contract by the plea of the Statute of Frauds (q) is liable to return the deposit as money had and received to the use of the purchaser (r); but it seems that if the purchaser sets up the statute in order to escape from his contract he cannot recover the deposit (s).

SECT. 3.—Repudiation by Purchaser.

Repudiation for defect of title.

690. The purchaser has the right to repudiate the contract immediately upon the failure of the vendor to perform something which goes to the root of the contract (t). The right usually arises upon the failure of the vendor to perform his obligation to show and prove a good title (u); thus, where the vendor does not deliver a proper abstract (v), and the purchaser has given reasonable notice fixing a time for its delivery, he can repudiate the contract if the vendor is still in default on the expiration of the notice (a); and

(p) Before the Judicature Acts (see title EQUITY, Vol. XIII., p. 61), a court of equity, on dismissing the vendor's suit for specific performance, would order a return of the deposit if it was clear that the vendor had lost his legal rights under the contract, but not otherwise (Southcomb v. Exeter (Bishop), supra); and a decree might be made for specific performance even after the purchaser had recovered the deposit at law (Hoggart v. Scott (1830), 1 Russ. & M. 293 (where at the date of the contract the vendor had no title, but the purchaser did not at once repudiate, and the title was subsequently completed)).

(t) This is in accordance with the rule applicable to contracts generally (Mersey Steel and Iron Co. v. Naylor, Benzon & Co. (1884), 9 App. Cas. 434, 443); see title CONTRACT, Vol. VII., p. 439. A purchaser cannot both repudiate and insist on the contract (Smith v. Butler, [1900] 1 Q. B. 694, 698, C. A.). A document containing a repudiation of a contract may be available as a memorandum for the purpose of the Statute of Frauds (29 Car. 2, c. 3); see title CONTRACT, Vol. VII., p. 368; Dewar v. Mintoft, [1912] 2 K. B. 373. The purchaser cannot terminate the contract by giving up the deposit; see p. 400, ante.

(u) As to this obligation, see pp. 341 et seq., ante. The title to be shown by the vendor must be such as was stipulated for, i.e., it must commence with the specified document or at the specified date (Re Head's Trustees and Macdonald (1890), 45 Ch. D. 310, C. A.; Bellamy v. Debenham, [1891] 1 Ch. 412, C. A.; see p. 321, ante). As to the purchaser being bound to take a possessory title, see note (g), p. 351, ante.

Bagley*, [1892] 1 Ch. 313 (fourteen days was held a reasonable time, having regard to previous requests for the delivery of the abstract, and the nature of the property, a farm of which the purchaser was to have early possession); and see Stickney v. Keeble (1913), 57 Sol. Jo. 389, C. A. The purchaser cannot repudiate if, after such a notice, he receives the abstract and keeps it without objection (Seton v. Slade, Hunter v. Seton (1802), 7 Ves. 265).

where the vendor is neither able to convey himself, nor has the power to compel a conveyance from any other person, the purchaser, so soon as he finds this to be the case, may repudiate: he is not bound to wait to see whether the vendor can induce some third person, who has the power, to join in making a good title to the property (b).

The rule does not apply to a defect of conveyance as distinguished from a defect of title (c).

Similarly, where the property which the vendor can convey is not substantially the same as the property contracted to be sold (d), the purchaser can repudiate; but trifling defects in the property may be regarded by the court merely as matters for compensation (e).

691. Where the completion of the contract depends on the consent of a third person—where, for instance, the vendor of leasehold property requires a licence to assign (f)—the vendor is not bound to procure such consent before the date for completion; and the purchaser cannot repudiate earlier on the ground that the consent has not been obtained, unless there are special circumstances entitling him to treat the contract as at an end—if, for instance, he can prove, or the vendor has admitted, that the consent cannot be obtained by the due date (g).

692. The purchaser's right of repudiation arises so soon as the vendor's defect of title is definitely ascertained either from the abstract, or from his replies to the purchaser's requisitions (h). The defect giving a right of repudiation must be a substantial defect, and not a slight defect which can be properly met by compensation (i). The right, however, must be exercised immediately the defect is so ascertained. If the purchaser continues in negotiation as to the title, and thus treats the contract as subsisting, he cannot repudiate at any subsequent moment he may choose (k), but must give the vendor a reasonable time to remedy the defect (l).

Restrictions on repudiation.

693. The purchaser cannot repudiate if he is in the first instance informed by the vendor of the defect in the title, and that it will not be cured without some delay (m). After a judgment for specific performance the purchaser cannot repudiate the contract without the leave of the court (n). In such circumstances he should, on the discovery of the defect in title, move to be discharged from the contract (o).

repudiation.

694. Rightful repudiation by the purchaser is available as a defence to an action by the vendor for specific performance (p), and in this aspect it depends on the doctrine of mutuality in the contract (q); but it appears also to operate as a rescission of the contract at law, so as to entitle the purchaser to maintain an action for a declaration of rescission and the return of the deposit (r), and to be available as a defence to the vendor's action for breach of contract on non-completion at the proper time (s).

But this overlooks the special obligation of a vendor of land to make out his title prior to completion so as to enable the purchaser to rely on and prepare for completion, and the better opinion seems to be that the right of repudiation is a legal as well as an equitable right (see Williams, Vendor and Purchaser, 2nd ed., p. 185, note (1)).

(t) As to mere puffing statements, see p. 301, ante; title MISREPRESENTATION AND FRAUD, Vol. XX., pp. 670, 671. The following are misrepresentations of fact giving the right to repudiate:—That the property is not subject to restrictive covenants when in fact it is (Nottingham Patent Brick and Tile Co. v. Butler (1885), 15 Q. B. D. 261; affirmed (1886), 16 Q. B. D. 778, C. A.), or is subject to certain restrictive covenants less onerous than those in fact affecting the property (Flight v. Booth (1834), 1 Bing. (N. C.) 370; Phillips v. Caldwell (1868), L. R. 4 Q. B. 159); that the property is freehold when in fact it is copyhold (Ayles v. Cox (1852), 16 Beav. 23), or leasehold when held on an underlease (Madeley v. Booth (1848), 2 De G. & Sm. 718; Re Beyfus and Masters's Contract (1888), 39 Ch. D. 110, C. A.); see also Dobell v. Hutchinson (1835), 3 Ad. & El. 355; Evans v. Robins (1862), 8 Jur. (N. S.) 846; see title MISREPRESENTATION AND FRAUD, Vol. XX., pp. 742 et seq., 746 et seq. These misrepresentations may also be regarded as defects of title; see p. 302, ante. A representation that the vendor has a statutory or other power of sale is a representation of fact (Richardson v. Williamson (1871), L. R. 6 Q. B. 276; West London Commercial Bank v. Kitson (1884), 13 Q. B. D. 360, C. A.; and see Cripps v. Reade (1796), 6 Term Rep. 606), and not a misrepresentation of law; see p. 302, ante; title MISREPRESENTATION AND FRAUD, Vol. XX., pp. 668, 669. It must be of a material fact, and the misrepresentation must have been believed by the purchaser and have caused him to enter into the contract (see p. 300, ante); see, generally, title MISREPRESENTATION AND FRAUD, Vol. XX., pp. 658, 659. In sales under the direction of the court special regard is had that there should be no taint of misrepresentation in the conduct of the officers of the court (Mahomed Kala Mea v. Harperink (1908), 25 T. L. R. 180, P. C.). As to sales by order of the court, see pp. 313 et seq., ante.

with compensation.

696. Unless restitutio in integrum can substantially be made, the purchaser cannot exercise his right of rescission on the ground of the vendor's default (e); thus a lessee of mines, who continues to work the mines after warning of circumstances which would entitle him to set aside the lease, cannot exercise such right (f).

SECT. 4.—Compensation under an Open Contract (g).

697. Where there is a material defect in the quantity or quality of the property which the vendor has contracted to convey, and there is no condition giving or excluding compensation, the vendor cannot enforce the contract and compel the purchaser to accept compensation for the deficiency (h). Where, however, the error in description or the defect is trivial and innocently (i) made, the purchaser may be forced to take the property with compensation (k). A vendor cannot, it seems, enforce specific performance with compensation in his own favour (l).

698. Where the vendor has either expressly, or impliedly by his conduct, represented that he can convey a certain property and is Even where there is a condition for compensation (see p. 329, ante), the court does not compel the purchaser to take property substantially different from that which he contracted to buy (Flight v. Booth (1834), 1 Bing. (N. C.) 370, 377; Re Fawcett and Holmes' Contract (1889), 42 Ch. D. 150, C. A.). Where there is a clause excluding compensation (see p. 332, ante), the case is a stronger one in favour of the purchaser (Jacobs v. Revell, [1900] 2 Ch. 858, 864; Re Puckett and Smith's Contract, [1902] 2 Ch. 258, C. A.).

Croft*, [1911] 1 Ch. 521 (watercourse under property, where the vendor waived a condition excluding compensation); and see title SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE. entitled to a certain interest in it (m), and it appears that there is a deficiency either in the quantity or quality of the property (n) or in his interest or title (o), and that such deficiency is capable of pecuniary assessment (p), the purchaser can compel the vendor to convey what he has got and submit to a reduction of the purchase-money (q). It is immaterial that the representation is honestly believed in by the vendor or his agent, provided that it is erroneous and the purchaser relies on it (r).

SECT. 4.
Compensation under an Open Contract.

699. Specific performance with compensation is, however, not decreed at the instance of the purchaser where there is a substantial difference between the property agreed to be sold and that which the vendor can convey (s), and partial performance would inflict real hardship on the vendor (t); or where it would be unjust to

No specific performance with compensation where hardship to vendor or injustice to third parties.

(o) Where, for instance, a vendor who purports to sell the fee simple has no title to part of the land (Western v. Russell (1814), 3 Ves. & B. 187), or has title only to an undivided moiety (Mortlock v. Buller (1804), 10 Ves. 292, 315, 316; Hooper v. Smart, Bailey v. Piper (1874), L. R. 13 Eq. 683; Horrocks v. Rigby (1878), 9 Ch. D. 180; Burrow v. Scammell (1881), 19 Ch. D. 175), or is entitled only as tenant for life (Cleaton v. Gower (1674), Cas. temp. Holgate* (1844), 1 Coll. 203; Barker v. Cox (1876), 4 Ch. D. 464). The court also assesses the want of a right to renewal of a lease (Painter v. Newby (1853), 11 Hare, 26); a deficiency in the length of a term (Leslie v. Crommelin (1867), 2 I. R. Eq. 134; see Dale v. Lister (circa 1808), cited 16 Ves. 7), or in the parcels agreed to be leased (McKenzie v. Hesketh (1877), 7 Ch. D. 675); the amount of compensation payable for outstanding leases (Besant v. Richards (1830), Tambl. 509; compare Linehan v. Cotter (1844), 7 I. Eq. R. 176); or the possibility of a wife becoming entitled to dower (Wilson v. Williams (1857), 3 Jur. (N. The court cannot, it seems, as a rule assess compensation for the existence of sporting rights (Durham (Earl) v. Legard (1865), 34 Beav. 611; in Burnell v. Brown (1820), 1 Jac. & W. 168, the purchaser had waived his objection to the title on this ground); or for differences of tenure (Ayles v. Cox (1852), 16 Beav. 23, where there was a condition for compensation); but in Barnes v. Wood (1869), L. third parties (u); or where the purchaser was aware of the defect or misrepresentation when he entered into the contract (a), or did not rely on the vendor's representation (b).

SECT. 5.—Specific Performance.

700 Specific performance (c) of a contract is ordered at the discretion of the court (d) in cases where damages do not afford a complete remedy (e); and although, since a vendor's claim is, strictly speaking, merely a pecuniary demand, and damages would sufficiently compensate him, yet the court acts on the principle that the remedy must be mutual, and, therefore, specifically enforces the contract at the suit of the vendor in every case where a similar remedy is open to the purchaser (f).

The court does not specifically enforce an agreement to enter into a contract for the sale of land (g).

701. The plaintiff is not entitled to the remedy of specific performance if there has been conduct on his part—such as misrepresentation—disentitling him to the relief in equity, and the remedy may be refused if it would impose great hardship on an innocent vendor—where, for instance, he has entered into the contract under mistake, although the other party has not contributed to it (h). Moreover, the relief must be sought promptly (i).

SECT. 6.—Damages.

SECT. 6.
Damages.Action for damages.

702. Either the vendor (j) or the purchaser (k) can maintain an action for damages for breach of the contract by the other party; but for this purpose there must be a contract enforceable at law (l). The claim may be in the alternative for specific performance or damages (m).

703. Damages for breach of contract are in the nature of compensation, not of punishment (n), and, as a rule, the measure of damage is the amount of injury sustained by reason of the breach of contract (o). This principle is applicable in the case of a sale of land where the contract is broken by the purchaser (p).

Hence the vendor cannot recover the purchase-money, notwithstanding that the purchaser has been let into possession (q), unless the conveyance has been executed (r); but, on a resale at a lower price, he can recover the difference in price and the expenses of the resale (s).

recover for a breach of contract (b) by the vendor are, in general, limited to the expenses which he has incurred. This rule forms an exception to the ordinary law of contract (c). Thus, if a vendor who has not expressly undertaken to deduce a good title (d) is unable, acting in good faith (e), and without committing a breach of trust (f), to make a title, the purchaser, in an action for breach of contract, can only recover the expenses he has incurred (g), but not damages for the loss of his bargain (h). This rule applies where the vendor has made reasonable efforts to perfect his title, but not where his inability to do so is occasioned by his own default (i). The purchaser has no lien on the land for damages (k).

and the circumstances are such as to make his conduct fraudulent, the purchaser can recover damages in an action of deceit (l).

SECT. 6.
Damages.

706. The expenses which a purchaser, affirming a contract, can recover as damages, include the cost of preparing, stamping, and executing the contract (m), investigating the title (n), searching for incumbrances (o), examining deeds (p), and, if the vendor's breach took place after the title has been accepted, of preparing the conveyance (q). These conveyancing costs are recoverable whether they have actually been paid to the purchaser's solicitor or not (r).

Purchaser's expenses recoverable by way of damages.

The purchaser cannot recover expenses incurred prior to the contract of sale, such as the costs of negotiations, surveys or valuations (s), or of preparing the conveyance prior to his acceptance of the title (t), or any loss incurred in raising the purchase-money by a sale of stock (a), or the expenses of raising the purchase-money by borrowing (b), or moneys expended in repairs (c), or improvements (d), or the difference between party and party and solicitor and client costs of an action for specific performance (e), or any expenses incurred after he is aware of a definite breach of the contract on the part of the vendor (f); but, on a sale under the court, the purchaser can recover, in addition to his other expenses, all costs incurred by his having bid for and become the purchaser of the property (g).

Procedure. 708. Where there has been no conveyance, the purchase-money cannot be recovered on a writ specially indorsed, as the claim is only for damages (i), nor can damages for breach of the contract be recovered on a vendor and purchaser summons (k).

The pleadings in a vendor's action should aver that he is ready and willing to convey or assign the subject-matter of the sale (l), unless the purchaser repudiates prior to the date fixed for completion (m).

Save where time is of the essence of the contract, a purchaser seeking damages is not obliged to prove his readiness to complete on the stipulated day. He may still recover if he can prove such readiness within a reasonable time after that date (n); but, unless the vendor has failed to make a title, or has incapacitated himself from conveying, or has declined to convey, the purchaser should tender the conveyance and the purchase-money with interest if any (o).

Part VIII.—The Assurance.

SECT. 1.—Preparation.

Purchaser prepares assurance.

709. The contract is completed by payment of the purchase-money by the purchaser and execution at the same time of a conveyance by the vendor (p). In the absence of agreement to the contrary, the purchaser prepares the draft conveyance and submits it to the vendor for approval (q). The purchaser should not prepare the draft conveyance before production of the deeds (r).

(h) Since, if the purchase had been completed, he would have had to pay these himself; see Williams, Vendor and Purchaser, 2nd ed., pp. 1071, 1072; see Hopkins v. Grazebrook (1826), 6 B. & C. 31; Robinson v. Harman (1848), 1 Exch. 850; Day v. Singleton, [1899] 2 Ch. 320; compare Engel v. Fitch (1868), L. R. 3 Q. B. 314; (1869) L. R. 4 Q. (p) In strictness a conveyance may not be necessary in the case of the purchase of an equitable interest (see note (n), p. 366, ante), but it is usual to have a formal conveyance; compare Fenner v. Hepburn (1843), 2 Y. & C. Ch. Cas. 159; see Dart, Vendors and Purchasers, 7th ed., p. 529.

(q) Sugden, Vendors and Purchasers, 14th ed., pp. 240, 241. A possible exception occurs where the consideration for the purchase is a rentcharge, in which case the assurance is sometimes prepared by the vendor, but the practice seems to be unsettled; see Dart, Vendors and

710. The submission by the purchaser of the draft conveyance to the vendor for his approval does not necessarily operate as an acceptance of the title (s), but it is a circumstance from which the inference may be drawn that outstanding objections or requisitions have been waived and the title accepted (t).

711. The form of the conveyance is primarily for the purchaser to determine, and the vendor is not entitled to raise objections to the draft save as regards matters of substance affecting himself (a).

712. The purchaser of property included in a single contract may divide it into parts, apportioning the purchase-money among the parts, and may require the vendor to convey the several parts by separate deeds (b), provided that undue trouble is not thereby imposed on the vendor, and that the purchaser pays the additional costs thereby occasioned to the vendor (c). The property is frequently conveyed by separate deeds where it comprises distinct estates or lands held under different titles, as the inclusion in one deed would render future dealing with the several parts difficult or expensive (d).

713. Where a vendor contracts to sell land which is in fact incumbered, though this is not shown by the contract, the purchaser, in the absence of special stipulation, can compel the vendor at his own expense to get in the outstanding interest or incumbrance by separate deed (e). But this right is not usually insisted upon (f), and generally the property is conveyed by one deed, in which the vendor and the incumbrancers join as parties (g). Satisfied terms becoming attendant on the inheritance cease by statute (h), but when, although provision has been made for payment of the money secured by the term, the term is not satisfied, but is still outstanding, the purchaser can require it to be got in and extinguished (i).

When an existing incumbrance is paid off out of the purchase-money, the purchaser is entitled to have it kept on foot for his own protection against subsequent incumbrances (k); but if the vendor is under any personal liability he can insist on this being discharged (l).

Incumbrances

714. Where it is desired to sell incumbered land freed from incumbrances, but without joining the incumbrancers as parties, either vendor or purchaser can apply to the court to allow payment into court of a sum of money sufficient, when invested in Government securities, to satisfy the amount charged on the land, and also an additional amount to meet the contingency of further costs, expenses, and interest, and any other contingency, except depreciation of investments, not exceeding one-tenth of the original amount to be paid in, unless for special reason the court requires a larger additional amount. Thereupon the court can, either after or without notice to the incumbrancer, declare the land to be freed from the incumbrance, and make any order for conveyance, or vesting order, proper for giving effect to the sale (m).

SECT. 2.—Parties to Make the Assurance.

717. On a sale of land for an estate in fee simple all persons in whom is vested any legal or equitable estate or interest in the land must be parties to the conveyance (r), unless such estate or interest can be vested in the purchaser by the exercise of some overriding statutory (s) or other power (t). A form of conveyance in which short forms of covenants for title and production of title deeds had the effect of the common forms was authorised by the Real Property Conveyancing Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 119), now repealed, but, like the form in the Leases Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 124), it did not get into general use; see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. VII., p. 205. The former statute is repealed and replaced by the provisions for implied covenants for title and for acknowledgment of right to production of deeds contained in the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 41); see pp. 425 et seq., 429, 461 et seq., post.

Trustees.

If he is under a disability, or has a limited or special capacity, he, or some person on his behalf, may be able to convey under special statutory or other powers (b).

719. Trustees in whom the legal estate is vested, and also trustees with an equitable estate only, who are disposing of the land under their powers as trustees without the concurrence of their beneficiaries, are necessary parties (c); but intermediate trustees are not necessary parties to a conveyance by the head trustees and the beneficiaries (d), unless they have acquired a lien on the land for costs or expenses, when, it seems, a purchaser may require their concurrence to discharge the lien (e).

Sale by order of court.

720. Where a sale takes place by order of the court the persons to convey are, as a rule, the persons having the legal estate. The concurrence of persons having equitable interests only, who are parties to the action or have been served with notice of the judgment or order, is unnecessary (f).

Parties joined
purposes.

721. Persons who have no estate or interest to convey are sometimes joined in the assurance for a collateral purpose; thus, in a conveyance by trustees, selling under a statutory or other power, beneficiaries may be joined to give covenants for title (g); where the power of the trustees to sell depends on the beneficiaries not having all elected to take land, which is notionally personalty, as realty, one may be joined to show that there has been no such unanimous election (h); and, on a sale by a tenant for life under the Settled Land Acts (i), the trustees for the purposes of the Acts are usually joined in order to give a receipt for the purchase-money.

(b) See pp. 308 et seq., ante; Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XII., pp. 518—546. As to conveyance of property of a bankrupt, see pp. 381 et seq., ante.

(c) A condition requiring the purchaser to take a conveyance from a trustee implies power in the trustee to convey (Mosley v. Hide (1851), 17 Q. B. 91, 101).

(d) Grainge v. Wilberforce (1889), 5 T. L. R. 436; see Head v. Teynham (Lord) (1783), 1 Cox, Eq. Cas. 57, where it was held that the trustees of a term, who had the legal estate, and the persons having the entire beneficial interest, could sell the term without making an intermediate trustee of the equitable interest a party. Steele v. Waller (1860), 28 Beav. 466, where a purchaser of copyholds, who got the whole legal and beneficial estate, was held to be entitled to require the concurrence of trustees under a covenant to surrender is, perhaps, not reconcilable with this principle.

(g) See Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XII., pp. 671, 827, 919.

(h) This may be necessary in a case where trustees who have purchased land without power to invest the trust funds in that manner are reselling; see Re Jenkins and Randall (H. E.) & Co.'s Contract, [1903] 2 Ch. 362; title EQUITY, Vol. XIII., p. 113, note (c).

722. The vendor must obtain the concurrence of necessary parties (j), for example, trustees of the legal estate (k), but he need not obtain the concurrence of unnecessary parties unless he has expressly contracted to do so (l). Thus, on a sale by a mortgagee under a power of sale, the purchaser cannot require the vendor to obtain the concurrence of the mortgagor (m), even though the latter has in the mortgage deed agreed to join in any sale if required (n). But a mortgagor vendor, who has contracted to sell free from incumbrances, must, unless the contract otherwise provides, procure at his own expense the concurrence of the mortgagee (o).

723. Where a married woman is selling property which is her separate estate either in equity or by statute (p), the concurrence of her husband is unnecessary; and the husband is not (q) a necessary party to a conveyance by a married woman under the provisions of the Settled Land Acts (r), nor to a disposition of real or personal property held by a married woman solely or jointly with any other person as trustee or personal representative (s), nor to a conveyance by her as mortgagee, the mortgage money being her separate estate (t).

724. A married woman need not join in a conveyance by her husband for the purpose of releasing her right to dower, the conveyance of the husband being of itself sufficient to bar dower (u).

SECT. 2.

Where a husband dies intestate, without having barred his widow's right to dower, the administrator can sell his freeholds without the widow's concurrence (a); but, after the administrator has conveyed the land to the heir-at-law, the widow is a necessary party to a conveyance by the heir-at-law to a purchaser, for the purpose of releasing her right to dower (b). This necessity ceases, however, upon the dower being assigned by metes and bounds, as to any land not so assigned (c).

Conveyance
by company in liquidation.

725. Where land belonging to a company in liquidation is being conveyed, the company, in whom the legal estate remains notwithstanding the liquidation (d), is a necessary party, and the seal is affixed on its behalf by the liquidator (e). The liquidator has no estate, legal or equitable, and is not a necessary party to the conveyance (f), but he invariably joins to show his concurrence in the sale, and to covenant against incumbrances (g).

liquidator.

A liquidator, whether the winding-up is compulsory or under supervision, may, subject to any restrictions imposed by the court, sell the property of the company and exercise his powers without the sanction of the court or of the committee of inspection, just as if the liquidation was voluntary (h).

(h) See ibid., pp. 446, 505, 506, 599. It is usually proper to obtain an order sanctioning a sale by the liquidator where the winding-up is compulsory or under supervision (ibid., p. 769, note (f)); and, as to the powers of the liquidator, see pp. 385, 386, ante. to be made to a nominee (i), for such estate and interest, not exceeding the interest purchased, as he pleases (k). Where the grantee is to enter into covenants with the vendor, the purchaser cannot substitute a new covenantor for himself without the vendor's consent, and in such a case the nominee must not be a person under disability (l).

727. When the purchaser has disposed of the land before the completion of the contract, it is usual, for the purpose of saving the expense of the second conveyance and double stamp duty, to take the assurance direct to the second purchaser. The disposition may be either by assignment of the contract or resale of the land (m). Upon an assignment of the contract the original purchaser is not usually a necessary party to the conveyance (n), nor is he a necessary party where there is a resale without increase of price (o).

If the original purchaser was bound by the contract to assume a personal liability under the conveyance, the vendor is not bound to accept the liability of another person; where, for instance, the property sold is an equity of redemption so that the purchaser can be required to enter into a covenant of indemnity against the mortgage debt (p); in such a case the original purchaser is a necessary party unless the vendor consents to accept the covenant of the assignee or sub-purchaser (q). Where there is a resale of the land at an increased price, the conveyance states the increased price as the consideration and the original purchaser is joined as the party receiving the increase (r).

(i) If the purchaser provides the money on his own account, and not by way of loan to the nominee, and the nominee is a stranger, there is a resulting trust to the purchaser; see *Dyer v. But as a rule there is no resulting trust where the conveyance is taken in the name of a wife, child or other near relative; see Dyer v. Dyer, supra; titles GIFTS, Vol. XV., p. 415; TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES.

(k) See Egmont (Earl) v. Smith, Smith v. Egmont (Earl) (1877), 6 Ch. D. 469, per JESSEL, M.R., at p. 474: "An ordinary contract of sale is not only to convey to the purchaser, but to convey as the purchaser shall direct." But the vendors are not bound to accept the nominee, if the nomination discloses a breach of trust: where, for instance, they are trustees and the nominee is himself one of the trustees (Delves v. Gray, [1902] 2 Ch. 606).

The joining of the original purchaser brings on to the title the equitable interest which he obtained under the contract, and any incumbrances created by him on such interest might cause difficulty on a resale: see Dart, Vendors and Purchasers, 7th ed., p. 536; Williams, Vendor and Purchaser, 2nd ed., pp. 615 et seq. There would be the same difficulty if the original contract was recited without making the original purchaser a party (see note (n), supra). But it is believed that in practice this to partners.

728. As a rule it is convenient on a purchase of land with partnership money to make the conveyance to the partners as joint tenants at law upon trust for the partnership (s); but such a conveyance may be made to a trustee for the partnership (t), to partners as joint tenants without adding any words showing what the equitable interests are (u), or to the partners as tenants in common (a).

The devolution of the legal estate is not affected by the equities (b); and a surviving partner with the legal estate vested in him can, it seems, sell and convey the partnership property without the concurrence of the personal representatives of the deceased partner (c).

and wife.

729. Where land is conveyed to a husband and wife in terms which, but for the marriage, would have constituted them joint tenants in fee, they take as joint tenants and not, as formerly, by entireties (d).

risk is treated as negligible, and it is usual to join the original purchaser. In the case of a sub-sale, the sub-purchaser is entitled to an abstract of the original contract (Re Hucklesby and Atkinson's Contract (1910), 102 L. T. 214). As to a sub-purchaser's right to specific performance, see Shaw v. Foster (1872), L. R. 5 H. L. 321, 333, 338; title SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE. SECT. 4.—Form of the Assurance.

SUB-SECT. 1.—Freeholds.

732. The assurance of freehold property to the purchaser is effected by deed (l), the form of which is settled by him (m). It should be framed so that at a future date it may form a good root of title (n).

Conveyance
by deed.

733. The conveyance usually commences with recitals (o). These are intended either to explain the operation of the deed or to make evidence of matters of fact. Under the former head recitals are introduced to show the interests of the various parties, and the purpose and effect of their concurrence (p).

Recitals.

Where the vendor is absolutely entitled to the whole estate in freehold property his seisin in fee is recited (q), or recitals may be omitted altogether (r). Where he is not an absolute owner, the recitals show how he is entitled to make the assurance (s).

(n) As to what constitutes a good root of title, see p. 345, ante.

(o) A vendor is not bound to admit into the deed recitals at variance with the truth, nor can he insist on the insertion of recitals explaining the title of other parties to the deed if, in fact, all necessary persons are parties (Hartley v. Burton (1865), 3 Ch. App. 365). Recitals can frequently be avoided or shortened by making the deed supplemental to a previous deed. The deed then takes effect as if it were indorsed on the previous deed, or contained a full recital of it (Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 41), s. 53; see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XII., p. 834). No document or matters which are irrelevant, or which cast doubts on the validity of the title, or which might be difficult or impossible to explain or produce on a future sale, should be recited (t), nor should the preliminary contract be recited as a document (a) save under special circumstances, where, for instance, the contract is in pursuance of an order for sale by the court (b), or one of the parties has died before completion (c).

power.

736. Where a conveyance is made in exercise of a power, the recitals should show how the power was created, how it has become exercisable, and that all necessary consents have been obtained. If possible, the consenting parties should join in the deed (f).

Consideration.

737. The consideration for the conveyance must be specified in order to prevent a resulting use (g), to prevent the conveyance being deemed voluntary (h) and to comply with the statutory provisions as to stamps (i).

SECT. 4.

Form of the Assurance.

Operative words.

Verbal description, and plan.

738. The word “grant” has been described as one of the largest and most beneficial to the purchaser that can be used (k), but it is not necessary to use it in order to convey tenements or hereditaments, corporeal or incorporeal (l), and the word “convey” is frequently used (m).

739. It is usual to describe the property conveyed both by words and by reference to a plan (n). It is imprudent to rely upon a plan as the sole description, since slight errors in the drawing may have serious consequences (o). A description which is sufficient without reference to a plan may be enough (p), but the purchaser, at any rate in simple cases (q), can insist on a plan in order to supplement the general description in the conveyance, if the latter is not sufficiently precise. The attaching of a plan to a conveyance does not necessarily warrant its accuracy (r).

(k) Co. Litt. 301 b. See Real Property Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 106), s. 2, making the word “grant” appropriate, but not essential, to pass all hereditaments, corporeal and incorporeal; and see title REAL PROPERTY AND CHATELS REAL, Vol. XXIV., p. 294.

(n) Where a plan is used, a substantive description of the property should be included in the body of the deed or in a schedule, so that the plan should merely assist the description. It is usual and proper to refer to the plan as being by way of identity only, and not as operating to enlarge or restrict the verbal description; see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. IX., p. 125. Where property is contracted to be bought by a plan, the plan determines the extent of property sold, notwithstanding that particulars subsequently given, purporting to be particulars of the property shown on the plan, are erroneous (Gordon-Cumming v. Houldsworth, [1910] A. C. 537 (a Scottish case). As to the admissibility of plans and maps generally, see title EVIDENCE, Vol. XIII., pp. 563, 564.

should correspond with the description in the contract for sale (t); but, if the language used in the contract does not describe the land with sufficient distinctness, the purchaser is entitled to frame a new description, either by means of a plan or otherwise, so that there can be no doubt as to the effect of the conveyance (u). The purchaser can insist on an appropriate description of the property as at the date of the conveyance, and on the modern description being connected with the old description (v).

Uncertainty
in description.

741. Extrinsic evidence is necessarily admissible to identify the property conveyed, that is, to connect the language of the deed with the particular property (a), but it is not admissible to contradict the description in the deed (b). If, after resort to such evidence as is admissible, there remains an uncertainty as to the property intended to be conveyed and such uncertainty cannot be cured by election, the deed is void (c).

General
words.

742. General words conveying appurtenances, and conveying or creating easements, and the "all estate" clause are generally omitted in reliance upon the statutory provisions (d).

SECT. 4.
Form of the Assurance.

744. The habendum limits the estate granted (g), and mentions any liabilities or incidents subject to which the property is conveyed (h). A fee simple may be limited by the words "in fee simple" without the word "heirs" (i). On the sale of land subject to a specified incumbrance or lease, the vendor is entitled to have the conveyance framed accordingly (k); but he cannot insist on property being conveyed subject to covenants, conditions and restrictions not mentioned in the abstract (l), or which, though mentioned in the abstract, were not referred to in the particulars or conditions (m).

Exceptions and reservations.

Habendum.

745. The vendor's covenants include covenants for title, express or implied, and any special covenants to suit particular circumstances (n).

covenants.

The purchaser's covenants include covenants, stipulated for in the contract, which restrict his prima facie rights over the property, and also covenants indemnifying the vendor against any incumbrances subject to which it is sold (o).

Purchaser's
covenants.

SECT. 4. Accordingly, any obligations of either party which will not be discharged at the time of completion must be provided for by the Form of the Assurance. covenants (q).

Covenants for title.

746. The ordinary covenants for title are for right to convey, for quiet enjoyment, for freedom from incumbrance, and for further assurance. A vendor (r) need not give absolute covenants for the title to the land sold (s), but may limit his liability to the acts or omissions of himself and those claiming by, through, under or in trust for him, and of those who have been in possession since the last sale of the estate (t). The remedy for a breach of such covenants is an action for damages (u).

Implied covenants for title.

747. The vendor's qualified covenants for title are, according to the present practice, incorporated in the conveyance by the use of the proper statutory expression. They vary in comprehensiveness according to the character in which the vendor conveys (a).

Covenant by person conveying as "beneficial owner."

Thus, in a conveyance of freeholds made after the year 1881 for valuable consideration, other than a mortgage, the covenant implied on the part of a vendor who conveys as beneficial owner is that, notwithstanding any act or omission by him, or anyone through whom he derives title otherwise than by purchase for value, he has the right to convey; that the property shall be quietly enjoyed by the grantee and his successors in title, freed and discharged from estates and incumbrances other than those to which the conveyance is expressly made subject; and that the reasonable requirements of the purchaser for the purpose of further assuring the property to him shall be complied with (b).

Person directing as "beneficial owner."

(a) Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 41), s. 7; David v. Sabin, supra. The term "conveyance" includes, inter alia, an assignment, appointment, or other assurance, and a covenant to surrender, made by deed on a sale of any property (Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 41), s. 2 (v)). In a voluntary conveyance no covenant is implied by the grantor conveying as "beneficial owner." As to other statutory expressions, see p. 427, post; and, as to a conveyance "as settlor," see title SETTLEMENTS, p. 529, post.

(b) Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 41), s. 7 (1) (A); David v. Sabin, supra; Page v. Midland Rail Co., [1894] 1 Ch. 11, C. A.; *May v. A "purchase for value" in the above covenant does not include a conveyance in consideration of marriage (Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 41), s. 7 (1) (A)).

direction of another who directs as beneficial owner, the same covenant is implied on the part of the person so directing (c).

748. The covenants implied by statute may be varied or extended (d). Where this is intended, the modifications should be clearly expressed in the conveyance (e). A proviso destroying and not merely qualifying a covenant is void (f).

749. Where a vendor conveys as trustee (g), mortgagee (h), personal representative of a deceased person (i), committee of a lunatic so found (k), or under an order of the court (l), there is implied only a covenant against incumbrances, limited to things done or suffered by the person so conveying, or to which he has been party or privy (m). A trustee who sells as such cannot be compelled to enter into any other covenant (n).

750. Where a tenant for life sells under his statutory powers (o), or trustees sell with his consent, the implied covenants given by the tenant for life are usually limited, as regards the reversion, to his own acts and the acts of persons claiming under him (p); but the mere fact that he conveys as tenant for life in exercise of a power of itself confers no such protection (q).

751. Where the vendors are tenants in common, the covenants on the part of each are usually limited so as to apply only to their respective shares (r). If they are joint tenants, their covenants are sometimes joint and sometimes joint and several (s).

752. A vendor selling compulsorily, and not by agreement, under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (t), does not enter into covenants for title (a). Upon a sale of land by the promoters of the undertaking the word "grant" implies the usual covenants for title (b).

753. Where the consideration is of such a nature that it is not payable on completion of the contract, the purchaser enters into a covenant to pay it, as where a rent charged on the land forms the whole or part of the consideration (c).

Where a vendor sells land in respect of which he is personally subject to some liability or burden, the purchaser must covenant to indemnify the vendor against his liability (d) : thus, on the sale of an equity of redemption, the purchaser must covenant to indemnify the vendor against the mortgage debt and interest (e) ; and on the sale of a reversion the purchaser must covenant to pay the succession duty, unless it has already been compounded for (f).

754. Where land is sold subject to restrictive covenants the vendor is entitled to a covenant of indemnity from the purchaser in case of breach (g) ; but where a contract for the sale of land makes no mention that the land is subject to a restrictive covenant, the purchaser can insist on a conveyance according to the terms of the contract, and is not bound to have such restrictive covenant inserted in the conveyance (h) ; consequently he gives no covenant of indemnity against it. He may, however, be liable to observe it on the ground that he took with notice of its existence (i).

Where land having a common title with other land is disposed of to a purchaser, other than a lessee or mortgagee, who does not hold or obtain possession of the documents forming the common title, he may, notwithstanding any stipulation to the contrary, require notice of any provision in his conveyance restrictive of user of, or giving rights over; any other land comprised in the common title to be indorsed on, or annexed to, a document forming part of the common title which is retained by the vendor; but omission to require such indorsement or annexation does not affect the title (k).

SECT. 4.
Form of the Assurance.

Indorsement of notice of restrictive covenants.

This rule does not apply to dispositions of registered land (k).

755. Where any of the documents of title relate to land of the vendor which is not included in the sale to the purchaser, it is the practice for the vendor to retain these documents and give an acknowledgment in writing of the purchaser's right to production and delivery of copies; and also, where he is not a trustee or mortgagee, an undertaking for safe custody (l). Such an acknowledgment and undertaking are binding on the vendor only while he has possession or control of the documents, and are binding on future possessors of the documents during the period of their possession or control (m). As a rule, the acknowledgment and undertaking are contained in the conveyance; but, where it is desired to keep the documents to which they relate off the title, they are given by a separate document (n). Apart from the purchaser's rights under an acknowledgment, he has an equitable right to the production of documents in the possession of another person which form the common title to their lands (o).

Acknowledgment of right to production.

SUB-SECT. 2.—Copyholds.

756. An assurance of copyholds on sale is generally effected by a surrender by the vendor to the lord of the manor to the use of the purchaser, followed by an admittance of the purchaser by the lord (p). A copyholder cannot alienate his estate by common law assurance, and an attempt to do so, in the absence of a special custom, gives the lord a right to forfeit the tenement (q).

D. 600); but the correctness of this practice has been questioned; see 37 Sol. Jo. 4, 73, 78.

SECT. 4.

Form of the Assurance.

Covenants for title.

Where surrender unnecessary.

Tenant for life.

Compulsory sale.

School sites.

Recitals in assurance of leaseholds.

757. Covenants for title cannot be included or implied in a surrender, or entered on the court rolls, and it is the practice to have a separate deed containing or implying them. Such deed may be executed either before or after the surrender. As a rule, the covenants are implied by the use of the statutory words in a deed of covenant to surrender (r); but, if they are contained in a deed following the surrender, they must be in the full form, since the statute (s) does not then apply (t).

758. In certain cases a surrender is unnecessary; thus, where a testator devises copyholds to such uses as his trustee shall appoint, or gives his trustee a mere power of sale (u), or where a trustee in bankruptcy is selling copyholds forming part of the bankrupt's estate (v), the lord is bound to admit the appointee or purchaser upon payment of a single fine, and without requiring the trustee to be admitted and to surrender.

A person exercising the powers of a tenant for life under the Settled Land Acts (w) can convey copyholds without a surrender (w), and, where copyholds are acquired compulsorily under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, no surrender is required (x).

759. Under the Schools Sites Act, 1841 (y), conveyances of copyholds not exceeding one acre for the purposes of the statute may be made in the statutory form (a).

SUB-SECT. 3.—Leaseholds.

760. In an assignment of leaseholds (b) it is customary to recite the lease and devolution of title to the vendor, but, where there have been numerous dealings with the property since the granting of the lease, the intermediate dealings are recited generally, and only the ultimate assurance to the vendor is particularly set out (c). The (r) Since "a covenant to surrender" is a "conveyance" (Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 41), s. 2 (v)), covenants for title are implied by the use of the appropriate words. recitals of the lease should include a verbatim description of the parcels as in the lease, and in the operative part these are referred to as "all and singular the hereditaments and premises comprised in and demised by the said lease" (d).

SECT. 4.
Form of the Assurance.

761. In a conveyance on sale of leasehold property the same covenants for title as in the case of freeholds are, mutatis mutandis, implied by a person conveying as beneficial owner, with an additional covenant that the lease is valid and subsisting, and that the rent has been paid and the covenants performed up to the date of assignment (e). In the case of a conveyance of leaseholds by the vendor as trustee, mortgagee, personal representative of a deceased person, committee of a lunatic so found, or under an order of the court, the same statutory covenants are implied as in a similar conveyance of freeholds (f).

Covenants for title.

762. Where the vendor, as original lessee, is liable for the payment of rent or the performance of the covenants under the lease, the purchaser expressly covenants for the future to perform and observe the lessee's covenants and to indemnify the vendor against this liability (g); and the like covenant is given to a vendor who is assignee of the lease to indemnify him against the covenant into which he entered in the assignment to himself (h).

Indemnity against covenants of lease.

763. Where part only of the property demised by a lease is sold, the total rent is apportioned by the deed of assignment between the vendor and the purchaser, and both parties enter into mutual covenants for payment of their respective shares, and for performance of the lessee's covenants in the lease (i), but the assignee of part becomes liable to distress for the rent of the whole of the premises (k). The transaction may also be carried out by way of underlease, in which case the purchaser incurs no liability under the covenants in the head lease (l).

Assignment of part of demised premises.

764. When leasehold property comprised in one lease is sold in lots, the sale is usually effected by an assignment to the purchaser of the largest lot on trust to grant underleases to other purchasers (m).

object to the title on the ground that the licence has not been obtained until the date of completion (n); but, if the vendor fails to obtain the licence after making reasonable efforts to do so, the contract for sale is not enforceable (o).

If the vendor does not endeavour to procure the lessor's licence, the purchaser is entitled to damages for loss of his bargain (p).

SUB-SECT. 4.—Registered Land.

Instrument of transfer.

766. Registered land is assured to a purchaser by the execution of an instrument of transfer in the statutory form, followed by registration of the purchaser as proprietor of the land (q). Under the Land Transfer Act, 1897 (r), the legal estate in land situate in a district where registration of title is compulsory does not pass to a purchaser unless and until he is registered as proprietor (s).

SUB-SECT. 1.—Execution of the Assurance (l).

776. The purchaser cannot insist on the conveyance to him being executed in his presence or in that of his solicitor; but he is entitled, at his own cost, to have the execution of the conveyance attested by some person appointed by him, who may, if he thinks fit, be his solicitor (m). This rule applies to transfers of registered land (n).

vendor.

777. A purchaser can require the conveyance to be executed by the vendor and other necessary parties in person where this is practicable (o). If the conveyance cannot be executed otherwise than by attorney, it must appear either that the power has not been revoked, or that it is valid in favour of the purchaser notwithstanding any matter which would operate to revoke it (p). 778. Where a power of attorney (a) is given for valuable consideration, and, in the instrument creating it, is expressed to be irrevocable, acts done under it are validated in favour of a purchaser, and the purchaser is not prejudicially affected by notice of anything done by the donor of the power without the concurrence of the donee, or of the death, marriage, lunacy, unsoundness of mind or bankruptcy of the donor (b).

The same rule applies to acts done under a power of attorney, whether given for valuable consideration or not, expressed, in the instrument creating the power, to be irrevocable for a specified time, not exceeding one year from the date of the instrument (c).

779. If a power of attorney does not fall within the above statutory rules, a purchaser should require proof that the power at the time of its exercise has not been revoked or suspended, either expressly, or by the death, bankruptcy or lunacy of the donor, and, until satisfied, should not pay over the purchase-money to the attorney (d).

780. A married woman, whether an infant or of full age, may by deed executed after the year 1881 appoint an attorney for the purpose of executing any deed which she might herself execute (e).

The statutory rule applies only to powers of attorney created after the 31st December, 1882 (ibid., ss. 1 (2), 8 (2)); see also Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 41), ss. 46, 47; titles AGENCY, Vol. I., pp. 229, 230; DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS, Vol. X., p. 394. (e) Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 41), s. 40; see also title HUSBAND AND WIFE, Vol. XVI., p. 365. As to acknowledgments of conveyances by married women, see title HUSBAND AND WIFE, Vol. XVI., pp. 323, 381 et seq.

(f) The reservation of an easement operates as a grant by the purchaser, and his execution of the deed is necessary to give legal effect to the grant (Doe d. Douglas v. Lock (1835), 2 Ad. & El. 705, 743; Proud v. Bates (1865), 11 Jur. (N. S.) 441, 443); and see titles DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS, Vol. X., p. 472; LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., p. 428.

A transfer of registered land need not be executed by a purchaser except where an entry is to be placed on the register in derogation of the estate passing to him (h).

782. Where a person fails to comply with an order of the court directing him to execute a conveyance, the court may order the conveyance to be executed by a nominee for that purpose, and a conveyance so executed operates as if it had been executed by the person originally directed to execute it (i).

SUB-SECT. 2.—Receipt for Purchase-money.

783. The vendor must either himself give, or procure others to give, a valid receipt for the purchase-money, and his inability to do so is a defect in the title (k). Formerly the receipt was indorsed on the deed; but, in a deed executed after the 31st December, 1881, a receipt in the body of a deed is a sufficient discharge to the person making the payment, without any further receipt being indorsed (l), and since that date it has been the practice to insert the receipt in the body of the deed immediately after the statement of the payment of the purchase-money (m).

receipt if he was unaware of its existence (p). Absence of a receipt is presumptive evidence of non-payment of the purchase-money and puts a subsequent purchaser upon inquiry as to whether it was paid (q).

785. The written receipt of a mortgagee is a sufficient discharge for any money arising under the statutory power of sale, and a person paying the same to the mortgagee is not concerned to inquire whether any money remains due on the mortgage (r).

786. A written receipt by a trustee for money payable to him under any trust or power is a sufficient discharge, and exonerates the person making the payment from seeing to its application or being liable for its misapplication (s). All who have not disclaimed or retired ought to join (t). They may appoint a solicitor (a), but not one of themselves, to receive the money (b). Where trustees are unable to give a discharge for purchase-money, the money may be paid into court (c) or, if the fund is under £500, into a post office savings bank (d).

A surviving trustee may exercise the powers of the trustees, and accordingly may give a receipt (e).

A purchaser from a tenant for life selling under his statutory power (f) is discharged by the receipt in writing of the trustees of the settlement, or, if the settlement empowers one trustee to act, of one trustee or of the personal representatives of the last surviving or continuing trustee (g).

SUB-SECT. 3.—Payment to Persons Other than the Actual Vendor.

788. Where the property is subject to incumbrances which are to be discharged out of the purchase-money, the purchaser must pay the proper amounts to the incumbrancers and the balance to the vendor (k). A purchaser who disregards an incumbrance of which he has knowledge, and pays the vendor without the consent of the incumbrancer, is liable to the latter to the extent of such payment (l).

789. Where a solicitor (m) produces a deed having in the body thereof or indorsed thereon a receipt for the consideration money or other consideration, and the deed has been executed, or the indorsed receipt signed, by the person entitled to give a receipt, the deed itself authorises payment being made to the solicitor, without his producing any separate authority from the person who executed or signed the deed or receipt (n). This procedure can be adopted also by vendors who are trustees (o).

The solicitor producing the deed must be acting for the party to whom the money is expressed to be paid (p), but in the absence of suspicious circumstances the purchaser may assume that the solicitor is so acting (q).

The consideration must be paid in cash, payment by cheque to the statutory agent not being authorised (r), nor is payment by set-off warranted (s).

(t) See Sugden, Vendors and Purchasers, 14th ed., p. 667; title AGENCY, Vol. I., pp. 165, 210. Where the purchase is completed by the vendor's attorney acting under a power of attorney, the power will usually authorise payment of the purchase-money to him (see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. I., pp. 380, 382), and if it is valid for the purpose of conveyance (see p. 436, ante), it is valid also for the purpose of payment. It may be that a purchaser making a payment to an attorney is also protected by the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 41), s. 47, against a revocation of the power of which he is not aware, but the language of this statutory provision seems to indicate that it operates only in favour of the attorney himself.

App. 8), but does not include an Act of Parliament or an adjudication order in bankruptcy (Re Calcott and Elwin's Contract, [1898] 2 Ch. 460, C. A.; see title BANKRUPTCY AND INSOLVENCY, Vol. II., p. 88). The instrument is usually under seal (see Hunter v. Kennedy (1850), 1 I. Ch. of the instrument (o). Registration is not compulsory, and omission to register does not in any way invalidate the instrument as an assurance (p); but it exposes the purchaser to the risk of being postponed to a subsequent purchaser or mortgagee, who takes without notice and registers first (q).

The court has jurisdiction to order the rectification of the register (r).

797. The provisions of the Middlesex Registry Act, 1708 (s), do not apply to copyholds (t); to lands registered under the Land Transfer Acts (u), save as regards estates or interests excepted from the effect of registration under a possessory or qualified title, or an unregistered reversion on a registered leasehold title, or dealings with incumbrances created prior to the registration of the land (a); to Crown lands in England or Wales affected by any deed to which the Commissioners of Woods and Forests are parties, and which has been enrolled in the office of Land Revenues, Records and Enrolments (b); or to instruments made after the 30th July, 1900 (c), which may be registered under the Land Charges Registration and Searches Act, 1888 (d), or the Land Charges Act, 1900 (e).

Registration in Yorkshire.

798. An assurance (f) on sale of land in any of the three ridings of Yorkshire (g) should be registered (h). The registration is effected by presenting a memorial for enrolment (i). Omission to register postpones the purchaser to a subsequent purchaser or incumbrancer who registers first, even though such subsequent purchaser or incumbrancer takes with notice. Except in the case of fraud the register is conclusive as to priority (k).

799. There are the same exemptions (l) as in the case of lands in Middlesex (m) as regards land registered under the Land Transfer Acts, 1875 and 1897 (n), Crown lands, and instruments capable of registration under the Land Charges Registration and Searches Act, 1888 (o), and the Land Charges Act, 1900 (p).

but it seems that it may postpone the purchaser to subsequent incumbrancers who register before him (s).

SUB-SECT. 3.—Notices (a).

On purchase of equitable estates.

801. On the purchase of an equitable estate in land, the priority of a purchaser does not depend on his giving notice of his purchase to the trustees, mortgagees, or other persons in whom the legal estate is vested (b). But notice is advisable in order to prevent the legal estate being acquired for value without notice of the purchaser's equitable title (c).

On purchase of equity of redemption.

802. On the purchase of an equity of redemption in land the purchaser should inquire of the mortgagee as to the amount due to him on the mortgage, and should give him notice of the conveyance of the equity in order to prevent him from tacking a subsequent advance to the original mortgage (d).

On purchase of legal remainder.

803. On the purchase of a remainder the purchaser should give notice of the transaction to the trustees of the settlement for the purpose of the Settled Land Acts (e), or, if there are none, to the tenant for life or the ordinary trustees, so as in the event of a sale by the tenant for life under his statutory power and his subsequent death to prevent the proceeds being paid to the remainderman (f).

But the purchaser can insist on notice of covenants in the conveyance to him restricting the use of land retained by the vendor being indorsed upon or annexed to one of the common title deeds (Conveyancing Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 37), s. 11).

A conveyance made by a mortgagor to a mortgagee pursuant to a foreclosure order is a conveyance on sale (a), but not a conveyance by way of family arrangement (b), or on a partition (c).

periodical payments are to extend beyond a period of twenty years or in perpetuity, or for an indefinite period not terminable with life, the conveyance is charged with duty calculated on the total amount which will or may become payable during the period of twenty years from the date of the instrument (p). Where the money is payable during a life or lives, the duty is calculated on the amount which will or may become payable during a period of twelve years from the date of the instrument (q).

The conveyance is not liable to further duty in respect of any provision contained in the conveyance for securing the periodical payments; and a separate instrument made for securing the periodical payments is not chargeable with any higher duty than 10s. (r).

Where the purchase-money or any part of it is left on loan and secured by a mortgage, the conveyance and mortgage are both chargeable, since the transaction operates as a payment and advance (s).

811. Where the conveyance is made in consideration, wholly or in part, of a debt due to the purchaser, or subject, either certainly or contingently, to the payment or transfer of any money or stock, whether being or constituting a charge or incumbrance upon the property or not, the debt, money or stock is deemed the whole or part, as the case may be, of the consideration in respect whereof ad valorem duty is chargeable (t). Hence, upon a conveyance of an equity of redemption, the stamp duty is payable on the aggregate of the mortgage debt and the purchase price (u).

812. Ad valorem duty is not payable in respect of an existing rentcharge or rent subject to which land is sold (a); but, where land is sold subject to an annual payment to the vendors, who undertake to pay the tithe, the annual payment forms part of the consideration (b).

813. Where property contracted to be sold for one consideration is conveyed to the purchaser in separate parcels by different instruments, the consideration is apportionable as the parties think fit; but a distinct consideration for each separate part must be set forth in each instrument, and the duty must be paid in respect of each conveyance accordingly (c).

Where the contract is for sale at one consideration to two or more persons jointly, or to a person purchasing on behalf of several, and the property is conveyed in separate parcels and for distinct considerations to the several persons interested, each conveyance is chargeable in respect of the part of the consideration therein specified (d).

814. Where there are several instruments for completing the title of the purchaser, the principal conveyance alone is chargeable with ad valorem duty; the other instruments are charged with the appropriate duty for which they may be liable, not exceeding the ad valorem duty payable in respect of the principal instrument (e). Except where the property is copyhold, the parties may determine which is the principal instrument (f). A conveyance confirming a properly stamped conveyance, which for some reason is inoperative, is not the principal instrument in the transaction (g).

Where any copyhold or customary estate is conveyed by deed, no surrender being necessary, the deed is deemed the "principal instrument" (h). In other cases the surrender or grant, if made out of court, or the memorandum thereof and the copy of court roll of the surrender or grant, if made in court, is the principal instrument (i).

(i) Ibid., s. 61 (1) (b). When a conveyance of freeholds and a covenant to surrender copyholds are included in the same instrument, the consideration should be apportioned; ad valorem duty is then charged on the freeholds and 10s. on the covenant to surrender. But in practice the additional 10s. is not charged if there is a contemporaneous surrender stamped with ad valorem duty; see Alpe, Law of Stamp Duties, 12th ed., pp. 133, 134. If the interest in the copyholds is equitable only, it is transferred by the covenant to surrender, which is then chargeable with ad valorem duty (ibid.). If the surrender is made out of court, the surrender or a memorandum thereof is stamped, and the steward should place a certificate that it is duly stamped on the copy of court roll of the surrender, and also in the margin of the entry in the court rolls. If the surrender is made in court, the copy of court roll of the surrender is stamped, and the steward should place a like certificate in the margin of the entry in the court rolls. The copy of court roll of the surrender and the entry in the court rolls are then admissible as evidence, although not themselves stamped (Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 39), s. 65 (2), (3)). As to requirements as to stamping, see, further, title COPYHOLDS, Vol. VIII., pp. 17, 63, 105; Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 39), ss. 66—68; title REVENUE, Vol. XXIV., pp. 703 et seq.

SECT. 7.

Other Formalities.

Conveyance to sub-purchaser.

815. Where a conveyance is made direct to a sub-purchaser, the duty payable is calculated in respect of the consideration moving from the sub-purchaser (k). The same rule applies where there are several sub-purchasers, no regard being paid to the value of the original consideration (l). Where any sub-purchaser takes an actual conveyance of the interest of his immediate vendor, which is stamped with ad valorem duty on the consideration moving from him, any subsequent conveyance made to him by the original vendor is chargeable with a duty of 10s., or ad valorem if the latter duty is less than 10s. (m).

Conveyance of equitable interests.

816. Where a conveyance on sale of an equitable estate or interest in land is made in pursuance of a written contract, the ad valorem duty is payable on the contract and no further duty is payable on the conveyance (n).

Stamp duty in cases of property vested by statute or purchased under statutory power.

817. Where, by virtue of a statute, either (1) property is vested by way of sale in any person, or (2) any person is authorised to purchase property, such person must, within three months after the passing of the statute, or the date of vesting, whichever is later, or after the completion of the purchase, as the case may be, produce to the Inland Revenue Commissioners a King's Printer's copy (o) of the statute, or some instrument relating to the vesting in the first case, or in the second case the conveyance, duly stamped. In default of production, the duty and interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum from the passing of the statute, date of vesting or completion, as the case may be, becomes a Crown debt (p).

Increment value duty.

818. Increment value duty (q) is assessed by the Inland Revenue Commissioners and paid by the transferor on any transfer on sale of the fee simple of any land or of any interest in land (r).

The conveyance must be stamped before completion either (1) with a stamp denoting that the increment value duty has been assessed by the Commissioners and paid, or (2) with a stamp

The Commissioners give credit for the amount of duty paid on previous occasions (ibid., s. 3 (1)), or deemed to have been paid, e.g., duties remitted (ibid., s. 3 (5)), or duties assessed (ibid., s. 4 (4)), or assessed on account delivered (ibid., s. 6 (4)).

821. If the land sold is in the occupation of a tenant, attornment by the tenant is not necessary to give effect to the conveyance of the reversion (b), but notice of the conveyance should be given to him in order to prevent any further payment of rent to the vendor (c). by distress rent which accrues due after the conveyance (d), and where the lease is by deed he can sue on the covenant for payment of rent (e). Where the tenancy is not created by deed, the mere conveyance does not, it seems, vest in the purchaser the right to sue for the rent as such (f), but if he in fact receives payment of rent from the tenant, a new agreement for tenancy on the same terms as the old agreement is usually implied (g).

822. Where the property sold is only part of the demised premises, the conveyance effects a severance of the reversion, and the rent can be apportioned between the part conveyed to the purchaser and the remainder of the premises (h). Usually, on a sale by auction, the particulars show how the rent is to be apportioned and make the apportionment binding between vendor and purchaser; but in order that the apportionment may be binding on the tenant it should be made with his consent or by judicial process (i).

823. The purchaser has, from the fact of the tenant's occupation, notice of his interest whatever it may be (k), and he takes, accordingly, subject to the tenant's rights, including not only those which arise out of the tenancy (l), but also those to which the tenant is entitled under any collateral or subsequent agreement, such as an agreement for purchase (m), and he must give effect to such rights (n).

(d) See title DISTRESS, Vol. XI., pp. 115 et seq.; and, as to reservation of rent, see title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., pp. 467, 468; and compare Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 41), s. 10.

If, however, the purchaser makes the inquiry and finds that rent is being paid to an adverse claimant, this gives the purchaser notice of his rights (q), though, for this purpose, notice is not imputed from the circumstance that the rents are being paid to an estate agent (r).

The purchaser also becomes liable to the obligations of the lessor's covenants (g), though this does not release the lessor (h).

Where the tenancy was not created by deed the purchaser is not, by virtue of the conveyance to him, entitled to enforce the tenant's stipulations, nor is he liable under the landlord's stipulations, unless by receipt of rent or otherwise a new tenancy on the old terms can be implied (i).

reversion.

826. Where the assignment to the purchaser comprises only part of the demised premises, so that the reversion on the term is severed, the purchaser is entitled to enforce the covenants and take advantage of the conditions so far as they relate to the land assigned (k).

(ii.) Restrictive Covenants.

Covenants
as to user.

827. Upon the sale of land the purchaser is frequently required to enter into covenants, either positive or negative, affecting the enjoyment of the land or of neighbouring premises: a covenant to lay out money in maintaining roads is a positive covenant of this character; a covenant not to use a house as a shop is a negative or restrictive covenant. These covenants are binding as between the covenantor and covenantee as the immediate contracting parties: whether they are binding as between other parties depends on the form of the proceedings to enforce them and on the circumstances of the case (l).

(k) This is so under stat. (1540) 32 Hen. 8, c. 34, s. 1, as regards covenants, but not as regards conditions. These were extinguished by severance, unless the severance took place by act of law (Dumpor's Case (1603), 4 Co. Rep. 119 b; 1 Smith, L. C., 11th ed., p. 32). Conditions were saved on severance by act of the parties by the Law of Property Amendment Act, 1859 (22 & 23 Vict. c. 35), s. 3, as regards the severed parts of rent legally apportioned; and, in the case of leases made since the 31st December, 1881, conditions are saved on severance generally by the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 41), s. 12; and see title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., pp. 596, 597.

The question may arise (1) between the vendor and persons claiming under him by devolution on death on the one side, and the original purchaser of the land and persons claiming under him on the other; and (2) between purchasers of different parts of the land of the vendor or persons claiming under them respectively (m). As regards the covenantor, it has to be considered whether the burden of the covenant passes to persons claiming under him; as regards the covenantee, whether the benefit of the covenant passes (n).

828. The burden of a covenant relating to the use or enjoyment of land (o) does not, save in cases arising between landlord and tenant (p), run with the land at law (q); and, where the covenant is positive in substance, and can only be complied with by the expenditure of money, the burden does not run with the land in equity (r). But where the covenant is in substance negative (s), it creates an equitable interest in the land in the nature of a negative easement, and this, like other equitable interests, is binding on subsequent owners of the land until there is an owner who obtains the legal estate for value and without notice of the covenant (t). Co. v. Gomm* (1882), 20 Ch. D. 562, 583, C. A.; Clegg v. Hands (1890), 44 Ch. D. 503, 519, C. A.; see Holford v. Acton Urban Council, [1898] 2 Ch. 240. A covenant to use land only for the erection of shops is not implied from a statement that it is adapted for that purpose (Holford v. Acton Urban Council, supra).

(t) See Tulk v. Moxhay (1848), 2 Ph. 774, where it was held that the restrictive covenant bound the subsequent owner of the land on the ground that he took with notice. But according to the later doctrine, the covenant creates an interest in the land which binds every owner until the legal estate is obtained without notice; see London and South Western Rail. Co. v. Gomm, supra, per JESSEL, M.R., at p. 583; Rogers v. Hosegood, [1900] 2 Ch. 388, 406, C. A.; Osborne v. Stephens (1846), 15 Sim. 377). It is, for the purpose of this doctrine, immaterial that the burden of the covenant does not run with the land at law (Renals v. Cowlishaw (1878), 9 Ch. D. 125, 129). A restrictive covenant, since it creates an immediate interest in the land, is not with notice is in the same position as a party to the covenant, and a breach by him will be restrained by injunction without proof of substantial damage (u).

829. Covenants restricting the user of land (v) may be entered into (1) for the vendor's personal benefit only; (2) for the benefit of the vendor or his successors in title as the owners of particular property; and (3) as part of a building scheme (w).

The rule just stated (x) only applies where the covenant is of the second or third kind. It does not apply where the covenant is a mere personal covenant, collateral to—that is, having no necessary connexion with—the conveyance to the purchaser; and, while such a covenant is enforceable by the vendor and his personal representatives against the original purchaser, it is not enforceable against a subsequent purchaser who was no party to the deed (y). A covenant entered into with a vendor who is selling the whole of his estate in the neighbourhood to a single purchaser is of this kind, and the vendor or his personal representatives cannot enforce it against sub-purchasers (z).

vendor, as covenantee, must have the legal estate in the land; the covenant must “touch or concern”—that is, must be for the advantage of—the land (b); and the vendor’s successor in title who claims the benefit of the covenant must hold under the same legal title as the vendor (c).

In equity this tracing of the legal title is unnecessary: it is sufficient for the claimant to show that he is entitled to the benefit of the covenant (d). This he can do, where there is no common building scheme, by showing (1) that the benefit of the covenant is in equity annexed to and is part of his land; or (2) that on his purchase of the land he also purchased, as a distinct matter, the benefit of the covenant. Where various plots of land have been purchased under a common building scheme, the purchaser of each plot takes, as regards the purchasers of the other plots, with the rights and subject to the liabilities defined by the scheme (e).

Where a vendor, who has taken from a purchaser a restrictive covenant for the benefit of the whole or some part of the land retained by the vendor, subsequently conveys the whole of such land to a second purchaser, the benefit of the covenant passes with the land, and the covenant is enforceable by injunction at the suit of the second purchaser against the first (f). The benefit of the covenant is annexed either to the whole or part of the land, and hence it passes by the conveyance of the whole.

it(i); or it may be the effect of some subsequent instrument executed by the vendor(k). When the benefit of the covenant has been once annexed to a particular piece of land, it constitutes an equitable interest in the land and passes by assignment of the land. It follows that it runs with the land, not on the ground of notice(l), or on the ground that a subsequent purchaser has expressly bought it(m), but because it inheres in or is annexed to the land which he has bought(n).

Covenant

Where the benefit of the covenant has not, at the time of the later sale, been annexed to the land comprised in the later conveyance, it does not pass unless the later purchaser is aware of its existence and obtains an assignment of it as part of his purchase(o).

Building
scheme.

833. The mutual rights of the owners of neighbouring plots of land frequently depend upon the existence of a common building scheme. The chief elements in such a scheme are (p) —

(1) A common vendor under whom the various owners derive title;

(2) A scheme relating to a defined area which the vendor intends to sell in lots, containing restrictions which are to be imposed on all the lots and though, perhaps, varying in details as to particular lots, are framed upon some general plan of development (q);

under them all or any of the vendors' lands adjoining or near to the premises conveyed. Under these words, the benefit of the covenant was annexed to all the adjoining or neighbouring lands retained, and hence it passed on a subsequent conveyance of part of them. Where the covenant is to be annexed to part only of the land, that part must be sufficiently defined (Renals v. Cowlishaw (1879), 11 Ch. D. 866, 868, C. A.).

(i) Rogers v. Hosegood, [1900] 2 Ch. 388, 408. C. A.

(k) It is sufficient if the benefit of the covenant has been annexed to the land at the date of the later conveyance (Reid v. Bickerstaff, [1909] 2 Ch. 305, C. A., per COZENS-HARDY, M.R., at p. 320).

(l) Hence it is immaterial that the subsequent purchaser is not aware of the existence of the covenant (Rogers v. Hosegood, supra); he takes the rights incident to the land which he buys (Child v. Douglas (1854), Kay, 560, 571).

(m) Rogers v. Hosegood, supra, at p. 407.

(n) But it does not run if the terms or circumstances of the second conveyance show that the benefit of the covenant was not to pass; see Rogers v. Hosegood, supra, at p. 408.

(p) See Elliston v. Reacher, [1908] 2 Ch. 374, per PARKER, J., at p. 384; S. C., [1908] 2 Ch. 665, C. A.; Reid v. Inskip (1884), Cab. & El. 231; Tucker v. Vowles, [1893] 1 Ch. 195; Tindall v. Castle (1893), 3 R. 418; Davis v. Leicester Corporation, [1894] 2 Ch. 208, C. MacDermott* (1866), 2 Ch. App. 72; and see title EQUITY, Vol. XIII., pp. 101, 102.

(q) It is essential that the area within which the scheme is to operate should be definite, and that the nature of the obligations imposed, though varying among themselves, should be definite, so that each party may

(3) An intention on the vendor's part that the restrictions shall be for the benefit of all the lots (r);

(4) An intention on the part of the original purchasers to take the benefit of the restrictions (s).

Such a scheme constitutes a local law for the area over which it extends (t), and has the practical effect of rendering each purchaser and his successors in title subject to the restrictions, and of conferring upon them the benefits of the scheme, as between themselves and all other purchasers and their respective successors in title, and, unless the vendor expressly reserves the right of exempting any lots that may remain unsold, it also renders him and future purchasers of such lots equally liable. The result is sometimes made clearer by requiring the purchasers to execute a deed of mutual covenants expressly giving to each the benefit, and imposing on each the liability, of the restrictions (u). This, however, is not essential. The conveyance to each should be made subject to the know with certainty what his rights and obligations are, and against and by whom such rights and obligations may be enforced (Reid v. Bickerstaff, [1909] 2 Ch. 305, C. A.; see Renals v. Cowlshaw (1879), 11 Ch. D. 866, 868, C. A.; Osborne v. Bradley, [1903] 2 Ch. 446, 453).

(r) The vendor's object in imposing the restrictions must in general be gathered from all the circumstances of the case, including in particular the nature of the restrictions. If a general observance of the restrictions is in fact calculated to enhance the value of the lots offered for sale, it is an easy inference that the vendor intended the restriction to be for the benefit of all lots. This inference is not rebutted by the circumstance that he retains other land which will share in the enhanced value. The intention of the vendor to annex the benefit of the covenants to the land may be inferred with regard both to the lots sold and the land retained (see Elliston v. Reacher, [1908] 2 Ch. 374, 385; affirmed, [1908] 2 Ch. 665, C. A. (deed of covenant showing the necessary intention engrossed but not executed); see ibid., at pp. 390, 392, 672); it is not rebutted by the circumstance that the vendor reserves to himself power to dispense with the restrictions as regards lots which are not sold. This is a circumstance to be taken into consideration in determining whether the benefit of the restrictions is annexed to the various lots, but it is not important (ibid., at pp. 389, 672). Apart from such express power and any exercise of it, the vendor is himself bound by the scheme (Mackenzie v. Childers (1889), 43 Ch. D. 265; Re Birmingham and District Land Co. and Allday, [1893] 1 Ch. 342; compare Whitehouse v. Hugh, [1906] 2 Ch. 283, C. A.); and, as to reservation of power to alter the scheme, see A.-G. v. Richmond Corporation (1903), 89 L. T. 700.

(s) This fourth point requires that the purchasers should have notice of the facts involved in the first three points. Without notice, the fourth point cannot be established; with notice, it usually follows from the first three (Elliston v. Reacher, [1908] 2 Ch. 374, 385). The doctrine rests upon the implication of covenants between the purchasers inter se, and the implication cannot be made in the absence of knowledge. An inference that a purchaser intended to enter into an indeterminate number of covenants with unknown persons should not be drawn (Osborne v. Bradley, supra, at p. 455).

(u) See Whatman v. Gibson (1838), 9 Sim. 196; Renals v. Cowlshaw (1878), 9 Ch. D. 125, 129. Where a deed is prepared, a person who takes the benefit of it is bound by the restrictions contained in it, though he does not execute it (Formby v. Barker, [1903] 2 Ch. 539, 549, C. A.; Elliston v. Reacher, [1908] 2 Ch. 665, 669, C. A.; see Co. Litt. 230 b). For a form of such a deed, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XII., p. 753.

restrictions (a), but the title of each to the benefit of the covenants is sufficiently established wherever the above four points exist (b). If the purchases are simultaneous, it is possible to imply a mutual contract under which the benefit of the covenants is annexed to each plot of land (c) and thereafter passes upon a conveyance of the plot without express mention in accordance with the principle already stated (d). But the purchases need not be simultaneous (e), and the circumstances may exclude the possibility of such a contract. It is sufficient to say that the community of interest where lands are purchased under a building scheme imports in equity the reciprocity of obligation which is in fact contemplated by each original purchaser at the time of his own purchase (f).

Purchasers
under common vendor.

834. Although neighbouring lands are not, in terms, sold under a common building scheme, yet, if the vendor puts each purchaser under the same restrictive covenants, and the purchasers are aware of their common liability, the result is the same as where the purchases are under a building scheme. The purchasers, as regards each other, come under reciprocal obligations and are entitled to reciprocal rights, and they are able to enforce these rights in equity without making the vendor a party (g).

The same result follows even though the various purchasers are unaware of the restrictions imposed on the others, if the benefit of the restrictions was in fact annexed by the common vendor to the various plots (h); but, if the covenants were imposed

(e) Elliston v. Reacher, supra, at p. 385. Where an estate is sold in lots at successive sales under a building scheme, a purchaser can only enforce the restrictions against property shown as lotted in the plan and subject to the restrictions at the sale at which he purchases (Rowell v. Satchell, [1903] 2 Ch. 212).

A.; title EVIDENCE, Vol. XIII., p. 567, note (j). But where a covenant refers to the consent of the vendor and his "assigns," this does not include all subsequent purchasers and lessees of any part of the estate (Everett v. Remington, [1892] 3 Ch. 148).

(g) Whitman v. Gibson (1838), 9 Sim. 196; Child v. Douglas (1854), Kay, 560, 570. The question whether this result is intended is one of fact to be decided on the ordinary rules of evidence; but it is usually inferred under the circumstances stated; see Nottingham Patent Brick and Tile Co. v. Butler (1886), 16 Q. B. D. 778, C. A., per Lord ESHER, M.R., at p. 784: "If it is found that it was the intention that the purchasers should be bound by the covenants inter se, a Court of Equity will, in favour of any one of the purchasers, insist upon the performance of the covenants by any other of them, and will do so under such circumstances, without introducing the vendor into the matter." It is not, however, essential that a subsequent purchaser should enter into the covenant: without his doing so the benefit of the first purchaser's covenant may be annexed to the land retained by the vendor and pass to a subsequent purchaser of the whole or part (Child v. Douglas, supra, at p. 569); and see p. 457, ante.

835. In all the above cases, where the benefit of the covenant passes to the various purchasers, one purchaser can sue another without making the remaining purchasers parties (k).

836. Where the vendor takes a covenant for his own benefit merely (l), he is the only person entitled to enforce it, and the fact that he has acquiesced in an unsubstantial infringement of it does not prevent his suing in respect of a substantial infringement (m). Where, under a building scheme or otherwise, the benefit of the covenant is vested in a number of owners (n), any one of these may release his right to enforce the covenant (o), or may lose his right to enforce it by acquiescing in systematic breaches (p). Moreover, if the character of the estate has undergone so complete a change that the covenant is no longer capable of attaining the object for which it was imposed, it ceases to be enforceable (q); but the covenant is not waived or extinguished by the covenantee allowing it to be relaxed in a remote part of the estate where the relaxation does not affect its general character (r).

But acquiescence implies knowledge, and breaches of covenant on a remote part of the estate do not establish acquiescence on the part of the plaintiff without proof that he was aware of them (Knight v. Simmonds, [1896] 2 Ch. 294, C. A.); nor is a plaintiff prevented from suing because he has acquiesced in, or been himself a party to, slight breaches (Western v. MacDermott, supra; Jackson v. Winniffrith (1882), 47 L. T. 243; Chitty v. Bray (1883), 48 L. T. 860; Hooper v. Bromet (1903), 89 L. T. 37). A sub-purchaser is not necessarily prevented from suing because his vendor has committed a breach of covenant in another part of the lot (Rowell v. Satchell, [1903] 2 Ch. 212). As to acquiescence generally, see title EQUITY, Vol. XIII., pp. 166 et seq.

The fact that the vendor cannot show a complete chain of previous covenants for title is not an objection to his title (Re Scott and Alvarez's Contract, Scott v. Alvarez, [1895] 1 Ch. 596, 606, C. A.). The care with which titles are investigated makes it very unusual for a purchaser to require to sue on the covenant, and it has been said that more value is attached to covenants for title than tion to give a title clear of defects and incumbrances, unless otherwise provided by the contract (t). While the contract remains executory, the purchaser can decline to complete unless a proper title is made out (a); but, after the property has been conveyed and the purchaser has accepted the conveyance and taken possession, the vendor becomes absolutely entitled to the purchase-money. The purchaser cannot, on the ground of adverse claims, recover money which has been paid or detain money unpaid, but he must rely on the covenants for title (b). In the absence of covenants, or so far as these do not apply, he is without remedy (c), except in case of fraud (d).

838. The usual covenants for title given on a sale of freeholds or copyholds by a beneficial owner (e) are: for right to convey; for they are worth (3 Preston, Abstracts of Title, p. 57; Dart, Vendors and Purchasers, 7th ed., p. 566). Hence there are but few decisions on the effect of such covenants. In the United States it is different, and "the American reports are proportionally as full of cases upon the subject of covenants for title as the Year Books were with cases upon the subject of warranty" (Rawle, Covenants for Title, 5th ed., s. 17).

(t) See p. 341, ante. An agreement to sell the fee simple, free from incumbrances, carries with it the right of the purchaser to proper covenants (Church v. Brown (1808), 15 Ves. 258, 263).

(b) See Maynard's (Serjeant) Case (1676), Freem. (CH.) 1; S. C., sub nom. Maynard v. Moseley, Cas. temp. Finch, 288; 3 Swan. 651, 653, where the point as to detention of unpaid purchase-money was left open:—"He that purchases land without any covenants or warranties against prior titles . . . if the land be afterwards evicted by an eigne title, can never exhibit a bill in equity to have his purchase-money again on that account; possibly there may be equity to stop the payment of such purchase-money as is behindhand" (Maynard v. Moseley, supra, as reported at 3 Swan. 651, 655). But it seems to be settled that the purchaser can neither recover purchase-money paid (Bree v. Holbech (1781), 2 Doug. (K. B.) 654; Urmston v. Pate (1794), 4 Cru. Dig., title xxxii., Deeds, ch. xxv., s. 92; Sugden, Vendors and Purchasers, 14th ed., p. 549; Wakeman v. Rutland (Duchess) (1796), 3 Ves. 233, 235; Craig v. Hopkins (1732), Mor. Dict. 16,623; Clare v. Lamb (1875), L. R. 10 C. P. 334), nor detain purchase-money unpaid (see Thomas v. Powell (1794), 2 Cox, Eq. Cas. 394, where the court declined to prevent payment out of court on the ground of an adverse claim; Sugden, Vendors and Purchasers, 14th ed., p. 551; Rawle, Covenants for Title, 5th ed., s. 321). But probably he can apply unpaid purchase-money in discharging incumbrances which the vendor should have cleared; see Tourville v. Naish (1734), 3 P. Wms. 307; Lacey v. Ingle (1847), 2 Ph. 413; Sugden, Vendors and Purchasers, 14th ed., p. 552; and compare Miller v. Pridden (1856), 3 Jur. (N. S.) 78.

(c) Bree v. Holbech (1781), 2 Doug. (K. B.) 654; Wakeman v. Rutland (Duchess) (1796), 3 Ves. 233, 235. The purchaser takes the conveyance at his own risk, and upon eviction cannot recover the purchase-money on the ground of failure of consideration; but he has been allowed to do so where the purchase has been completed without conveyance (Cripps v. Reade (1796), 6 Term Rep. 606, where, on a sale of leaseholds, the lease was handed over without assignment); see Johnson v. Johnson (1802), 3 Bos. & P. 162; and compare Awbry v. Keen (1687), 1 Vern. 472. On the sale of a shop the purchaser cannot be required to erase the vendor's name (Townsend v. Jarman, [1900] 2 Ch. 698, 702); and see title TRADE AND TRADE UNIONS.

(d) See Bree v. Holbech, supra; Edwards v. M'Leay (1815), Coop. G. 308; Hitchcock v. Giddings (1817), 4 Price, 135; Clare v. Lamb (1875), L. R. 10 C. P. 334; Co. Litt. 384 a, note (at end); and, as to rescission even after completion, in cases of fraud, see pp. 471 et seq., post.

(e) The covenants for title are the modern equivalent for the old quiet enjoyment; for freedom from incumbrances; and for further assurance (f). If the property is leasehold, the vendor also covenants that the lease is valid and subsisting, and that the rent and lessee's covenants have been paid and performed to date (g). But the covenants are not absolute; they are limited to defects arising since the last purchase for value (h). If the vendor is a express and implied warranties; or, as they were otherwise called, warranties in deed and warranties in law (see Littleton's Tenures, ss. 697 et seq.; Co. Litt. 365 a). An express warranty was created only by the word "warrant" or its Latin equivalent (Littleton's Tenures, s. 733; Co. Litt. 384 a). An implied warranty arose from the word "grant"; and before the statute Quia Emptores (1290), 18 Edw. 1, c. 1 (see title REAL PROPERTY AND CHATTELS REAL, Vol. XXIV., pp. 144, 145), it was incident to the tenure between grantor and grantee; it bound the heirs of the grantor, and was not excluded by an express qualified warranty; after the statute it was not incident to tenure, and was confined to the life of the donor; see Co. Litt. 384 a, note (1); Rawle, Covenants for Title, 5th ed., s. 6. This implied warranty was abolished by the Real Property Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 106), s. 4; see title DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS, Vol. X., p. 481. As to the covenant formerly implied from the words "grant, bargain, and sell" in Yorkshire, see ibid., note (m). Covenants for title came into use at an early date: formerly they included, in addition to those mentioned in the text, a covenant for seisin, and there are decisions on this and the other covenants in the reports of the sixteenth and early part of the seventeenth centuries: see on the covenant for seisin, Gray v. Briscoe (1607), Noy, 142; Muscot v. Ballet (1615), Cro. Jac. 369; for right to demise, Bradshaw's Case (1612), 9 Co. Rep. 60 b; quiet enjoyment on sale of copyhold land, Grenelife v. W— (1538), Dyer, 42 a, and in leases, Mountford v. Catesby (1573), Dyer, 328 a; Noke v. Awder (1595), Cro. Eliz. 373; Woodroff v. Greenwood (1596), Cro. Eliz. 518; Corus v.— (1597), Cro. Eliz. 544; Penning v. Plat (Lady) (1615), Cro. Jac. 383; against incumbrances, Briscoe v. King (1611), Cro. Jac. 281; for further assurance, Boulney v. Curleys (1610), Cro. Jac. 251; Briscoe v. King, supra; see Rawle, Covenants for Title, 5th ed., s. 13.

(f) See 2 Davidson, Precedents in Conveyancing, 4th ed., p. 191; Dart, Vendors and Purchasers, 7th ed., p. 567; see, further, pp. 426 (freehold), 430 (copyholds), 431 (leaseholds), 432 (registered land), ante. The old covenant for seisin probably fell into disuse because, when limitations to uses to bar dower became prevalent, conveyances were ordinarily made under powers operating by virtue of the Statute of Uses (27 Hen. 8, c. 10) (Rawle, Covenants for Title, 5th ed., s. 20). Its place was at one time taken by a covenant that the power under which the vendor conveyed was well created and in force; but this is implied in the covenant for right to convey and has been abandoned (2 Davidson, Precedents in Conveyancing, 4th ed., p. 192). The covenant against incumbrances is not an independent covenant, but is prefaced by the words "and that," and follows the covenant for quiet enjoyment; see p. 466, post.

For this purpose a settlement on marriage is not treated as made for value; the vendor claiming under such a settlement covenants against the acts of the settlor and his representatives (Dart, Vendors and Purchasers, 7th ed., p. 568), and this is the effect of the covenants implied by statute; see note (b), p. 426, ante. Where the covenants in the conveyance are not in accordance with the contract, the conveyance may be rectified (Stait v. Fenner, [1912] 2 Ch. 504, 518; see p. 470, post). trustee (i) or mortgagee (k), he only gives a covenant against incumbrances created by himself (i). It is now the practice not to give full express covenants, but to rely on the covenants implied by statute from the use of the words "beneficial owner," "trustee," "personal representative," and "mortgagee" (l).

839. The covenant for right to convey is a covenant for title; the covenant for quiet enjoyment is a covenant relating to possession (m); this distinction affects both the date when the covenant

Blagrove* (1854), 18 Beav. 404; Hare v. Burges (1857), 4 K. & J. 45, 57 (the last three being cases on the form of a lease to be granted by trustees in pursuance of a testator's covenant for perpetual renewal); 2 Davidson, Precedents in Conveyancing, 4th ed., p. 261, note (n); Dart, Vendors and Purchasers, 7th ed., pp. 573, 575. It has been said to be the practice of conveyancers to make all the cestuis que trust, whose shares of the purchase-money are considerable, join in covenants for title according to their respective interests (Sugden, Vendors and Purchasers, 14th ed., p. 574). But this has been described as an oppressive practice, and has not been adopted on sales by the court (Cottrell v. Cottrell (1666), L. R. 2 Eq. 330, 333); and, now that trustees can give a receipt for the purchase-money, so that the beneficiaries are not parties to the contract for sale or its execution, it seems safe to say that no covenants from them can be required; see Dart, Vendors and Purchasers, 7th ed., p. 569; Williams, Vendor and Purchaser, 2nd ed., p. 657. In practice, covenants by the beneficiaries are expressly excluded by the conditions of sale; see pp. 338, 339, ante. A tenant for life directing trustees to sell under a power, or himself selling under his statutory power or other power, must give covenants for title (Re London Bridge Acts, Ex parte Clothworkers' Co. (1842), 13 Sim. 176; Poulett (Earl) v. Hood (1868), L. R. 5 Eq. 115; Re Sawyers and Baring's Contract (1884), 53 L. J. (CH.) 1104), but in practice his covenants are limited, as regards the remainder in fee, to the acts and defaults of himself and his heirs and persons claiming under or in trust for him (Dart, Vendors and Purchasers, 7th ed., p. 571; Williams, Vendor and Purchaser, 2nd ed., p. 656); and see p. 427, ante.

(m) See Howell v. Richards (1809), 11 East, 633, 642. The covenant for right to convey is in this respect on the same footing as the former covenants for seisin and for the validity of a power (see notes (e), (f), pp. 462, 463, ante); for the early recognition of the distinction between covenants for title and possession, see Gregory v. Mayo (1677), 3 Keb. 744, 755. A covenant for seisin was treated as a covenant for lawful seisin, and was equivalent to a covenant for right to convey the estate expressed to be conveyed (Nervin v. Munns (1582), 3 Lev. 46; Gray v. Briscoe (1607), Noy, 142; Cookes v. Fowns (1661), 1 Keb. 95; Browning v. Wright (1799), 2 Bos. & P. 13, 27). In certain of the American States the covenant for seisin has been held to be satisfied by an actual, though tortious, seisin; see the grounds of this discussed in Rawle, Covenants for Title, 5th ed., ss. 42 et seq.

is broken and the measure of damages. A covenant for title is an assurance to the purchaser that the grantor has the very estate in quantity and quality which he purports to convey (n), and it is broken by the existence of an adverse right such as a right of way (o), or any outstanding interest, charge, or claim (p) which may prevent the purchaser from enjoying this estate (q). Hence the covenant for right to convey is not a continuing covenant, but is broken once and for all at the time of the conveyance if there is then a defect in title which prevents the vendor from conveying the estate which he purports to convey (r); and consequently time begins to run forthwith against an action for breach of the covenant (s).

840. The measure of damages is the difference between the value of the property as expressed to be conveyed and its value at that time as the vendor had power to convey it (t). Hence the purchaser, if he loses the land, can only recover the amount of the purchase-money and not the value of subsequent improvements (a).

damages.

The purchaser can sue on the covenant, notwithstanding that the defect in title is disclosed by a recital in the conveyance (b).

Defect dis-
recital.

(n) Howell v. Richards (1809), 11 East, 633, 642; the covenant will not be qualified so as to extend to less than the interest expressed to be conveyed, unless such qualification is clearly indicated (May v. Platt, [1900] 1 Ch. 616, explaining Delmer v. M'Cabe (1863), 14 I. C. L. R. 377).

(o) Turner v. Moon, [1901] 2 Ch. 825; Great Western Railway v. Fisher, [1905] 1 Ch. 316, 321. Apparently such a right would not have been a breach of a covenant for seisin, though it might be a breach of a covenant against incumbrances (see Rawle, Covenants for Title, 5th ed., s. 59).

(q) Under the old practice it was sufficient in an action on the covenant to allege generally that the grantor had not right to convey (Bradshaw's Case (1612), 9 Co. Rep. 60 b; S. C., sub nom. Salman v. Bradshaw, Cro. Jac. 304; Muscot v. Ballet (1615), Cro. Jac. 369; 2 Wms. Saund. 181, note (10); and see pleadings in Thackeray v. Wood (1864), 5 B. & S. 325; affirmed (1865), 6 B. & S. 766, Ex. Ch.); but it would now be proper to allege the facts constituting the breach; see title PLEADING, Vol. XXII., pp. 422, 423.

(r) Turner v. Moon, supra. The judgment of Lord ELLENBOROUGH, C.J., in Kingdon v. Nottle (1815), 4 M. & S. 53, appears to be contra; but see this explained in Spoor v. Green (1874), L. R. 9 Exch. 99, per BRAMWELL, B., at p. 111: "It is not what is called a continuing breach, any more than not paying money is a continuing breach. The covenant remains broken indeed, but broken once for all."

(t) Turner v. Moon, supra; see Gray v. Briscoe (1607), Noy, 142 (copyhold conveyed as freehold; damages, the difference between values of copyhold and freehold land); compare Wace v. Bickerton (1850), 3 De G. & Sm. 751; and see Eastwood v. Ashton, [1913] W. N. 129. The value of the property as expressed to be conveyed is usually the amount of the purchase-money stated in the conveyance; but this is not so if the purchase-money does not correspond to the actual value; see Jenkins v. Jones (1882), 9 Q. B. D. 128, C. A. As to conditions providing for compensation for misdescription, see pp. 328 et seq., ante.

Generally, mere notice to the purchaser of a defect in title does not bar his right to recover (Levett v. Witherington (1687), 1 Lut. 317).

Quiet enjoyment, free from incumbrances.

841. The covenant for quiet enjoyment is a future covenant (c); and when, according to the usual practice, the covenant against incumbrances follows as part of it (d), this also is future; the two are, in effect, a single covenant that the covenantee shall enjoy free from incumbrances (e). Consequently there is no breach of the covenant until the covenantee is disturbed in his enjoyment (f). The covenant for quiet enjoyment is usually limited to lawful disturbance by the covenantor or any person claiming under or in trust for him (g); it is not broken by claims under title paramount to that of the covenantor, or by tortious acts other than those of the covenantor himself (h). Being a future covenant, the damages seem to be measured by the loss to the covenantee when the disturbance takes place; thus, in case of eviction, they include the value of improvements which he has made (i).

(c) See Ireland v. Bircham (1835), 2 Scott, 207.

(d) See note (f), p. 463, ante.

(e) See Vane v. Barnard (Lord) (1708), Gilb. (CH.) 6, 7; Rawle, Covenants for Title, 5th ed., s. 70, p. 87, note (1). There is a lack of authority in the English reports as to what are incumbrances within the meaning of the covenant; the American authorities are numerous; see Rawle, Covenants for Title, 5th ed., ss. 75 et seq. An incumbrance has been defined to be "every right to or interest in the land which may subsist in third persons, to the diminution in the value of the land, but consistent with the passing of the fee by the conveyance" (ibid., s. 75). This would include a mortgage, charge, or lien; an easement; and a subsisting term, unless in the last case the real subject of purchase was the reversion on the term (ibid., s. 78; and, as to a term, see Haverington's Case (1586), Owen, 6; Anon. (1586), Moore (K. B.), 249; probably also it would include a restrictive covenant; see Cato v. Thompson (1882), 9 Q. B. D. 616, 618, C. A.; Ellis v. Rogers (1885), 29 Ch. D. 661, 665, C. A.; compare Phillips v. Caldcleugh (1868), L. R. 4 Q. B. 159, 163. But the mere existence of an incumbrance does not give a right to sue under this covenant; there must be interruption of enjoyment by claim under it (Nottidge v. Dering, Raban v. Dering, [1909] 2 Ch. 647, 656; [1910] 1 Ch. 297, C. A.). See also Re Martin, Ex parte Dixon v. Tucker (1912), 106 L. T. 381.

(f) While the covenant for right to convey is a covenant for title (see p. 464, ante), that for quiet enjoyment is an assurance against disturbance consequent upon a defective title (Howell v. Richards (1809), 11 East, 633, 641; compare title LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, Vol. XIX., p. 78).

(g) As to the effect of a covenant for quiet enjoyment, and the matters which constitute a breach of the covenant, see titles LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., pp. 524 et seq., 527 et seq.; MINES, MINERALS, AND QUARRIES, Vol. XX., p. 551; Young v. Raincock (1849), 7 C. B. 310; Browne v. Flower, [1911] 1 Ch. 219. A judgment which does not interfere with the possession is not a breach (Howard v. Maitland (1883), 11 Q. B. D. 695, C. A.; compare Hunt v. Danvers (1680), T. Raym. 370). As to arrears of ground rent, see Howes v. Brushfield (1803), 3 East, 491, and the comments thereon in Sugden, Vendors and Purchasers, 14th ed., p. 602; and as to disturbance under title paramount, see also Woodhouse v. Jenkins (1832), 9 Bing. 431. After conveyance the court does not necessarily interfere by injunction to prevent illegal distress by the vendor on the tenants (Drake v. West (1853), 22 L. J. (CH.) 375). In an action on the covenant for quiet enjoyment the plaintiff must allege the facts constituting the disturbance, and that the disturbance was lawful, with sufficient particularity to show the breach of covenant (Foster v. Pierson (1792), 4 Term Rep. 617; 2 Wms. Saund. 181, note (10)).

(h) See title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., pp. 524, 525.

(i) This is in accordance with the ordinary rule as to damages, and is supported by Bunny v. Hopkinson (1859), 27 Beav. 565; see Rolph v. Crouch (1867), L. R. 3 Exch. 44; compare Duckworth v. Ewart (1864), 10 Jur. (N. S.) 214; see also 2 Williams, Vendor and Purchaser, 2nd ed.,

Further
assurance.

842. Under the covenant for further assurance the vendor is bound to do such further acts for the purpose of perfecting the purchaser's title as the latter may reasonably require (k) and the vendor can properly do (l). The purchaser should tender a draft of the further conveyance to which he considers that he is entitled (m), and should tender or offer to pay the vendor's costs (n). The vendor is entitled to a reasonable time to procure professional assistance (o). If the conveyance is proper and he declines to execute it or to do any act which the purchaser can properly require, this constitutes a breach of the covenant (p). The purchaser cannot, by means of

p. 1156. In America different rules have prevailed in different States; the damages for eviction being in most States limited to the original purchase-money and interest, but in others extending to the value of the land at the time of eviction (Rawle, Covenants for Title, 5th ed., ss. 163 et seq.). A lessee, in case of eviction, recovers under the covenant for quiet enjoyment the value of the term to him; see title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., pp. 529, 530; Rawle, Covenants for Title, 5th ed., s. 169, where the result is explained on grounds peculiar to leases: but the construction of the covenant should be the same whether it is in a lease or a conveyance on sale; and the rule as to leases supports the statement in the text. Where the improvements effected by the purchaser are in pursuance of the contract of sale, e.g., where he erects houses out of which the vendor is to receive a rent, there is additional reason for including in the damages the value of the buildings (Rawle, Covenants for Title, 5th ed., s. 170). In the absence of evidence of increase of value, the damages are the original value (Jenkins v. Jones (1882), 9 Q. B. D. 128, C. A.). Upon a covenant against incumbrances the purchaser, if he has paid off a mortgage or charge, or bought in an easement, can recover the amount so paid and any expenses which he has incurred; but until he has incurred some loss, it seems that he cannot sue on the covenant, since, according to the English form, the covenant is a future covenant; see p. 466, ante; Rawle, Covenants for Title, ss. 188 et seq. The damages may include the costs of litigation upon an adverse claim (Sutton v. Baillie (1891), 65 L. T. 528; see title LANDLORD AND TENANT, Vol. XVIII., p. 530; Dart, Vendors and Purchasers, 7th ed., pp. 800 et seq.).

(k) See Rawle, Covenants for Title, 5th ed., s. 99. Such acts include the removal of a judgment if charged on the land, or other incumbrance (King v. Jones (1814), 5 Taunt. 418; Re Jones, Farrington v. Forrester, [1893] 2 Ch. 461, 471; and, as to request for further assurance, see Bennet's Case (1582), Cro. Eliz. 9; Nash v. Aston (1682), T. Jo. 195; and compare Blicke v. Dymoke (1824), 2 Bing. 105. The assurance must be necessary (Warn v. Bickford (1819), 7 Price, 550; (1821) 9 Price, 43), and the execution of it possible (Pet and Cally's Case (1589), 1 Leon. 304 (party insane); Nash v. Aston (1682), T. Jo. 195).

The draft is usually settled by counsel and accompanied by counsel's opinion as to the necessity and propriety of the further assurance, though this is not necessary (Blicke v. Dymoke, supra). Under the early form of covenant, the covenant was to make such assurance as the purchaser's counsel should advise (Rosewell's Case (1593), 5 Co. Rep. 19 b; Bennet's Case (1582), Cro. Eliz. 9; Baker v. Bulstrode (1673), 2 Lev. 95; Lassels v. Catterton (1670), 1 Mod. Rep. 67). As to the preparation of the conveyance, see, further, pp. 412 et seq., ante.

In an action on the covenant, the facts showing the necessity and propriety for the further assurance, and the defendant's refusal to execute it, should be alleged. the covenant for further assurance, obtain a greater estate than that which was the subject of the original conveyance (q); though, if the vendor's title was defective, the vendor may be required to assure an estate which he has got in since, whether by descent or devise (r), or by purchase (s).

The purchaser can either bring an action for breach of the covenant for further assurance, or can sue for specific performance (t). In the former case the damages are the loss arising to the purchaser from the neglect to execute the assurance. If this results in his being evicted, the loss is the amount of the purchase-money (a). In the event of the vendor's bankruptcy, specific performance of the covenant can be enforced against his trustee in bankruptcy, against the vendor himself after his discharge, (q) Davis v. Tollemache (1856), 2 Jur. (N. S.) 1181. "The covenant for further assurance in a deed is a covenant intended to give full effect and operation to the estate and interest conveyed by the deed" (ibid., per STUART, V.-C., at p. 1185).

(r) Smith v. Baker (1842), 1 Y. & C. Ch. Cas. 223.

(s) See Taylor v. Debar (or Dabar) (1676), 1 Cas. in Ch. 274; 2 Cas. in Ch. 212; Sugden, Vendors and Purchasers, 14th ed., p. 612. The purchaser is, it seems, under the same liability in equity, even apart from a covenant for further assurance (Noel v. Bewley (1829), 3 Sim. 103); and see titles EQUITY, Vol. XIII., p. 104, note (f); ESTOPPEL, Vol. XIII., p. 373, note (a). Where, however, the covenant for further assurance is, with the other covenants, limited in the usual way to the acts of the vendor and his predecessors since the last sale, the vendor can, it seems, only be required to assure an after-acquired estate which is necessary to satisfy this limited covenant (Rawle, Covenants for Title, 5th ed., s. 104). Formerly a purchaser might require a husband who had sold his wife's land to levy a fine (Boulney v. Curteys (1610), Cro. Jac. 251; Middlemore v. Goodale (1638), Cro. Car. 503; King v. Jones (1814), 5 Taunt. 418, per HEATH, J., at p. 427), and, if she would not consent, he might be sent to prison (Hall v. Hardy (1733), 3 P. Wms. 187, 189). But this has been doubted (Ortread (or Outram) v. Round (1717), 4 Vin. Abr., Baron and Feme, p. 203, pl. 4; Emery v. Wase (1803), 8 Ves. 505). A vendor, tenant in tail, who has conveyed a base fee may be required to turn it into a fee simple (Bankes v. Small (1887), 36 Ch. D. 716, C. A.; see titles REAL PROPERTY AND CHATELS REAL, Vol. XXIV., p. 262, note (n); SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE). Probably a purchaser who has not obtained the title deeds cannot obtain a covenant for production under the covenant for further assurance, but his equity or right to production is usually sufficient without a covenant (Hallett v. Middleton (1826), 1 Russ. 243; Fain v. Ayers (1826), 2 Sim. & St. 533; p. 429, ante). He can, however, if necessary, obtain a duplicate of his own conveyance (Napper v. Allington (Lord) (1700), 1 Eq. Cas. Abr. 166, pl. 4; Dart, Vendors and Purchasers, 7th ed., p. 796). As to loss of title deeds, see Bennett v. Ingoldsby (1676), Cas. temp. Finch, 262; title MORTGAGE, Vol. XXI., p. 208. The deed of further assurance should not itself contain additional covenants of title by the vendor (Coles v. Kinder (1620), Cro. Jac. 571; Lassels v. Catterton (1670), 1 Mod. Rep. 67; Sugden, Vendors and Purchasers, 14th ed., p. 615).

(a) See King v. Jones (1814), 5 Taunt. 418; but, since there is no breach till the refusal to execute the further assurance, the damages may, perhaps, be the value of the land at this time; see p. 466, ante. The action may be brought at once upon breach of covenant, but it is better to wait till the ultimate damage has been sustained, provided the statutory limit is not exceeded (King v. Jones, supra, at p. 428). As to the Statutes of Limitation generally, see title LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, Vol. XIX., pp. 33 et seq.

and also against his assigns, except such as take the legal estate for value without notice (b).

843. The burden of the covenants for title falls upon the covenantor—usually the vendor—personally, and after his death is enforceable, like any other liability, against his estate (c). The benefit of the covenant runs with the estate of the purchaser, and the covenant is enforceable by subsequent purchasers, provided they take that estate (d). This is so in the case of the express covenants for title (e), and the same rule is applied by statute to the covenants implied by the use of the statutory words (f). Apparently the statutory covenants given on the conveyance of an equitable estate run with that estate; but the express covenants for title only run with the legal estate, and the equitable owner must rely on his right to sue in the name of the covenantee or his assigns (g). If on a subsequent sale the land has been subdivided, a purchaser of part of the land, who takes the estate of the

(c) Dart, Vendors and Purchasers, 7th ed., p. 785; see title EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, Vol. XIV., p. 305. If the vendor becomes bankrupt, the liability is provable in the bankruptcy, and if not proved will be discharged; see Hardy v. Fothergill (1888), 13 App. Cas. 351. Davis v. Tollemache, supra, at p. 1185, on this point is not now law; see title BANKRUPTCY AND INSOLVENCY, Vol. II., p. 199; and, as to the covenant for further assurance, see p. 467, ante.

(d) Where the original conveyance has been obtained by fraud, an assignee for value without notice of the fraud can sue on the covenants for title, although the original covenantee could not do so (David v. Sabin [1893] 1 Ch. 523, C. A.).

Awder* (1595), Cro. Eliz. 373, 436. As to copyholds, see Riddell v. Riddell (1835), 7 Sim. 529, 535. The covenantee should, however, have an estate in the land at the time of the covenant (Dart, Vendors and Purchasers, 7th ed., p. 787). As to the necessity for the subsequent purchaser taking the estate of the original covenantee so as to create the privity of estate which enables the covenant to run with the land, see Roach v. Wadham (1805), 6 East, 289; Onward Building Society v. Smithson, [1893] 1 Ch. 1, C. A.; compare Webb v. Russell (1789), 3 Term Rep. 393, 402. Where the original conveyance is to a grantee to uses, the covenants should be made with him, and they then follow the uses (1 Williams, Vendor and Purchaser, 2nd ed., p. 660). But it is not essential that the covenantor should himself have an estate in the land; hence, covenants for title entered into by a person who is not a conveying party run with the land, provided there is privity of estate between the successive owners (Pakenham's Case (1368), Y. B. 42 Edw. 3, fo. 3, pl. 14, cited Co. Litt. 385 a; Third Report of Real Property Commissioners, p. 52; Dart, Vendors and Purchasers, 7th ed., p. 786; see, contra, Sugden, Vendors and Purchasers, 14th ed., p. 386).

original purchaser in that part, is entitled to sue on the covenants in respect of his part (h); and similarly a subsequent owner of part of the original estate—such as a life estate (i), or an undivided share (k)—can sue. Where the covenant for right to convey has been broken, and the original covenantee has not sued on it, his successors in title may do so notwithstanding that it is not a continuing covenant (l).

SECT. 2.—Rectification.

Mistake.

844. Where, owing to mutual mistake (m), the conveyance does not operate to carry out the intentions of the parties, as where, for example, the land conveyed is less (n) or more (o) than was comprised in the contract, or there is an error in the limitations (p), or the vendor's covenants for title are wider than the contracting parties intended (q), or there has been a common mistake in the description of an easement (r), or a covenant has been inserted to which the parties had not agreed (s), the court, upon sufficient evidence of the mistake (t), will rectify the conveyance (a), and will

SECT. 3.—Rescission.

845. After completion of the contract, the transaction is at an end as between vendor and purchaser, and, as a general rule, no action, either at law or in equity, can be maintained by either party against the other for damages or compensation on account of errors as to quantity or quality of the property sold, unless such error amounts to a breach of some contract or warranty contained in the conveyance itself, or unless some fraud has been practised on the purchaser (d).

In general
completion is final.

846. If, however, the transaction has been induced by fraud, or misrepresentation amounting to fraud (e), or by mutual mistake of a fundamental character (f), the court will order a reconveyance of Reid* (1900), 82 L. T. 369); and, where the contract provides for compensation, this stipulation is not discharged by the conveyance, and compensation can be recovered even after conveyance (see p. 331, ante), and, after conveyance, damages can be recovered for breach of a collateral stipulation, such as an agreement to finish a house (Saunders v. Cockrill (1902), 87 L. T. 30).

Campbell* (1880), 5 App. Cas. 925, per Lord SELBORNE, L.C., at p. 937; Joliffe v. Baker, supra, at pp. 267, 269. It is fraud if the vendor knows and conceals a fact material to the validity of the title (Edwards v. M'Leay (1815), Coop. G. 308; on appeal (1818), 2 Swan. 287). Where a vendor made a misstatement as to a matter which he should have investigated—e.g., that copyhold land was freehold—this was held to be legal fraud which entitled the purchaser to rescind after conveyance (Hart v. Swaine (1877), 7 Ch. D. 42); but probably there must be actual fraud (Derry v. Peek (1889), 14 App. Cas. 337; and see Soper v. Arnold (1887), 37 Ch. D. 96, 102, C. A.). The plaintiff cannot obtain rescission if he was from the commencement cognisant of the matters complained of (see Vigers v. Pike (1842), 8 Cl. & Fin. 562, 650, H. L.). The purchaser will be entitled to the costs, charges and expenses incident to the purchase and conveyance, including the costs of investigating the title (i), and the costs of the action to set aside the conveyance (k).

vendor himself is no bar to rescission (t), nor where it can be made good by compensation (u).

The contract cannot, however, be rescinded in part and stand good for the residue: if it cannot be rescinded as a whole, it cannot be rescinded at all (a).

Rescission.

rescission.

849. A right to rescind a sale or purchase of land may be enforced by the personal representatives of the contracting party, or his trustee in bankruptcy (b), and, in the case of the vendor, by his devisee (c), or an assignee of his whole interest in the land (d). Parties.

Conversely, a right of rescission may be exercised against the devisees or representatives (e), the assigns, other than those purchasing for value without notice (f), or the trustee in bankruptcy (g) of the opposite party.

Part I.—Definition and Nature.

Set-off.

850. When A. has a claim for a sum of money against B. and B. has a cross-claim for a sum of money against A., such that B. is by law to the extent of his cross-claim entitled to be absolved from payment of A.'s claim, and to plead his cross-claim as a defence to an action by A. for the enforcement of his claim, then B. is said to have to the extent of his cross-claim a right of set-off against A.

851. When A. has a claim of any kind against B. and brings an action to enforce such claim, and B. has a cross-claim of any kind against A. which by law he is entitled to raise and have disposed of in the action brought by A., then B. is said to have a right of counterclaim (a).

PART I.
Definition and Nature.

Counterclaim.

852. Set-off is a ground of defence. If established it affords an answer to the plaintiff's claim wholly or pro tanto. Counterclaim, as distinguished from set-off, affords no defence to the plaintiff's claim, but is a weapon of offence which enables a defendant to enforce a claim against the plaintiff as effectually as in an independent action (b).

Distinction between set-off and counterclaim.

853. Set-off is entirely distinct from payment. Payment is satisfaction of a claim made by or on behalf of a person against whom the claim is brought. The person paying makes performance of the obligation in respect of which the claim arises, which thereby

Distinction between set-off and payment.

(a) Before the Judicature Acts (see title COURTS, Vol. IX., p. 51, note (g)), set-off was confined to money claims, liquidated or unliquidated, and was subject to many technical restrictions; see p. 489, post. As to whether the Judicature Acts and the Rules of the Supreme Court have made any difference in this respect, see p. 491, post. Counterclaim is not so confined. Any claim in respect of which the defendant could bring an independent action against the plaintiff can be enforced by counterclaim, subject only to the limitation that it must be such as can conveniently be tried with the plaintiff's claim; see p. 514, post. Thus, not only claims for money, but other claims—for example, a claim for an injunction or for specific performance or for a declaration—may be the subject of a counterclaim. It follows that most claims which can be made the subject of a set-off can also be made the subject of a counterclaim, but the converse proposition does not hold good; see note (f), p. 484, and pp. 491, 492, post.

(b) "Set-off and counterclaim may be, and commonly are, essentially different; and it becomes necessary, therefore, to see in each case whether a counterclaim amounts in effect to no more than a set-off, or whether it is in effect a cross-action. . . . The effect of these two modes of proceeding must, therefore, be sought in the statutes by which they were introduced, and in their results; and when these are looked at, it will be seen how essentially these two forms of procedure differ. By the Statutes of Set-off this plea is available only where the claims on both sides are in respect of liquidated debts, or money demands which can be readily and without difficulty ascertained. The plea can only be used in the way of defence to the plaintiff's action, as a shield, not as a sword. Though the defendant succeeded in proving a debt exceeding the plaintiff's demand, he was not entitled to recover the excess; the effect was only to defeat the plaintiff's action, the same as though the debt proved had been equal to the amount of the claim established by the plaintiff, and no more. . . . In a case of set-off, the claim being for liquidated damages, its existence and its amount must be taken to be known to the plaintiff, who should have given credit for it in his action against the defendant. This reasoning does not apply to a counterclaim, the effect of which, as distinguished from a mere set-off, is altogether different. It is, as I have already pointed out, to all intents and purposes an action by the defendant against the plaintiff. It is not confined to debts or liquidated damages. It is not even necessary that the claim should be analogous to that of the plaintiff. A claim founded on tort may be opposed to one founded on contract, or vice versâ. But the most striking difference is that the counterclaim operates not merely as a defence, as does the set-off, but in all respects as an independent action by the defendant against the plaintiff" (Stooke v. Taylor (1880), 5 Q. B. D. 569, per COCKBURN, C.J., at pp. 575, 576).

becomes extinguished. Set-off exempts a person entitled thereto from making any satisfaction of a claim brought against him, or of so much of the claim as equals the amount which he is entitled to set off, and thus to the extent of his set-off he is discharged from performance of the obligation in respect of which the claim arises (c).

Pleading payment and
set-off.

854. Where there has been payment, the party against whom the claim is brought pleads payment or accord and satisfaction (d), which in effect alleges that the claim no longer exists. A plea of set-off, on the other hand, in effect admits the existence of the claim, and sets up a cross-claim as being ground on which the person against whom the claim is brought is excused from payment and entitled to judgment on the plaintiff's claim. Until judgment in favour of the defendant on the ground of set-off has been given, the plaintiff's claim is not extinguished (e).

Part II.—Set-off.

SECT. 1.—When Set-off Available.

When set-off
available.

855. A set-off is available to a defendant only when the rules of procedure of the court in which the plaintiff brings his action allow a set-off to be pleaded, and the mode in which a plea of set-off is to be raised is also determined by those rules (f).

Jurisdiction of courts to entertain
set-off.

856. No court has jurisdiction to entertain a defence of set-off unless the subject of the set-off is in its nature such that it might be made the subject of a cross-action or counterclaim in that court (g).

(c) Tender of the difference between the amount claimed and the set-off was formerly held not to be a good tender; see title CONTRACT, Vol. VII., p. 419); see, however, pp. 517, 518, post. A defendant who pays into court the difference between the amount of the claim and the set-off he succeeds in establishing is in the same position as a defendant who has paid into court the whole amount recovered.

(e) Re Hiram Maxim Lamp Co., [1903] 1 Ch. 70. If there is a doubt whether the facts show payment or set-off, both payment and set-off should be pleaded as alternative defences. Both defences must be specially pleaded; see title PLEADING, Vol. XXII., p. 447, note (d); Fidgett v. Penny (1834), 1 Cr. M. & R. 108; Thomas v. Cross (1852), 7 Exch. 728; Cooper v. Moorcraft (1838), 3 M. & W. 500.

(f) This is part of the general rule that the pleadings in a court are governed by the rules of procedure of that court; see title PLEADING, Vol. XXII., p. 419. For example, a Canadian Court of Admiralty has not the same jurisdiction to entertain a plea of set-off as the Admiralty Division of the High Court in England (Bow, McLachlan & Co. v. Ship "Camosun," [1909] A. C. 597, 603, 608, P. C.; see The Don Francisco (1862), Lush. 468). As to the form in which a set-off is pleaded in the English courts, see p. 509, post.

(g) Bow, McLachlan & Co. v. Ship "Camosun," supra, where the Privy Council held that a claim for unliquidated damages could not be set off in an action in rem in a Canadian Court of Admiralty, because such a claim could not have been entertained by that court as a counterclaim in such

857. Set-off should not be pleaded in respect of a sum for which the plaintiff has properly given credit in his claim (h).

858. The right of set-off cannot be waived (i). A defendant may, however, be estopped by his conduct from relying on a set-off. Thus a defendant to whom the plaintiff had produced an account which the defendant admitted to be correct was not allowed, after a long period of acquiescence in the correctness of the account, to claim a set-off when sued for a sum debited in such account (k). Similarly, where a defendant had given credit in an account with the plaintiff under a mistake, and after discovering such mistake had allowed the plaintiff to remain in ignorance of it, he was not allowed when sued by the plaintiff to set off the sum for which credit had been so given (l).

A defendant cannot be compelled to plead a set-off. He can, if he wishes, enforce his claim by independent action (m).

SECT. 2.—Essential Characteristics of Set-off.

SUB-SECT. 1.—As to Nature of Claim.

859. Apart from agreement all rights of set-off are purely the creation of statute or rules of court (a).

an action. There are claims which, though sufficient to found a set-off, cannot be made the subject of a counterclaim, for example, some debts not enforceable until a statutory requirement has been fulfilled (see pp. 493, 504, post), or a claim against the agent of an undisclosed principal (see pp. 495, 505, post).

(h) Lovejoy v. Cole, [1894] 2 Q. B. 861.

(i) Thus, a defendant who borrows from his debtor on an express promise that the loan shall be repaid without deduction may, if sued for repayment of the loan, set off an antecedent debt (Taylor v. Okey (1806), 13 Ves. 180). A broker sued for sums collected for his principal, which he has agreed to pay over without deduction, may set off a debt due from the principal (McGillivray v. Simson (1826), 9 Dow. & Ry. (K. B.) 35; see also Lechmere v. Hawkins (1798), 2 Esp. 626; Baillie v. Edwards (1848), 2 H. L. Cas. 74).

(m) Laing v. Chatham (1808), 1 Camp. 252; Jenner v. Morris (1861), 3 De G. F. & J. 45, 54, C. A.; Davis v. Hedges (1871), L. R. 6 Q. B. 687; Re Sturmeys Motors, Ltd., Ratray v. Sturmeys Motors, Ltd., [1913] 1 Ch. 16.

(a) "Set-off is the creature of statute; to be allowed a set-off you must statutory right" (Liskeard and Looe Rail. Co. v. Liskeard and Caradon Rail. Co. and Foster (1901), 18 T. L. R. 1, per COZENS-HARDY, J., citing JESSEL, M.R.). "Set-off and counterclaim are both the creation of statute" (Stooke v. Taylor (1880), 5 Q. B. D. 569, per COCKBURN, C.J., at p. 575). The first statute which gave to the defendant in an action a right of set-off was passed in 1729 (2 Geo. 2, c. 22), and provided as follows:—"Where there are mutual debts between the plaintiff and defendant, or if either party sue, or be sued, as executor or administrator, where there are mutual debts between the testator or the intestate and either party, one debt may be set against the other, and such matter may be given in evidence upon the general issue, or pleaded in bar, as the nature of the case shall require, so as at the time of his pleading the general issue, where any such debt of the plaintiff, his testator, or his intestate is intended to be insisted on in evidence, notice shall be given of the particular sum or debt so intended to be insisted on, and upon what account it became due, or otherwise such matter shall not be allowed in evidence upon such general issue" (ibid., s. 13). This enactment was only temporary, but it was re-enacted by stat. (1735) 8 Geo. 2, c. 24, which enacted that "mutual debts may be set against each other, either by being pleaded in bar, or given in evidence on the general issue, in the manner therein mentioned, notwithstanding that such debts are deemed in law to be of a different nature, unless in cases where either of the said debts shall accrue by reason of a penalty contained in any bond or specialty; and in all cases where either the debt for which the action hath been or shall be brought, or the debt intended to be set against the same hath accrued, or shall accrue by reason of any such penalty, the debt intended to be set off shall be pleaded in bar, in which plea shall be shown how much is truly and justly due on either side: and in case the plaintiff shall recover in any such action or suit, judgment shall be entered for no more than shall appear to be truly and justly due to the plaintiff after one debt being set against the other as aforesaid." These two statutes, which were repealed by the Statute Law Revision and Civil Procedure Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 49), s. 4, presumably on the ground stated in the preamble that the subject-matter is provided for by the Judicature Acts and rules made pursuant thereto (see p. 487, post), are known as the "Statutes of Set-off," but before they were passed there already existed a right of set-off in bankruptcy which had been created by statutory enactment in somewhat wider language than that used in the statutes mentioned above. The first statute that gave this right in bankruptcy was stat. (1705) 4 & 5 Anne, c. 4. Then by stat. (1718) 5 Geo. 1, c. 24, it was provided that where it should appear to the Commissioners in Bankruptcy "that there hath been mutual credit given by the bankrupt and any other person" at any time before the bankruptcy, the Commissioners should state the account between them, and only the balance shown on taking the account should be paid or claimed. This Act was followed, at a date between the Statutes of Set-off, by stat. (1732) 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, which provided (ibid., s. 28) that where it should appear "that there hath been mutual credit given by the bankrupt and any other person, or mutual debts between the bankrupt and any other person" at any time before bankruptcy, then the Commissioners or the assignees of the bankrupt should "state the account between them and one debt shall be set against another" and only the balance should be claimed or paid. Thus it will be seen that the right of set-off in an action, with which alone this title deals, is different in origin from the right of set-off in bankruptcy, as to which see title BANKRUPTCY AND INSOLVENCY, Vol. II., pp. 31, 211 et seq. Quite apart from statutory enactment, equity allowed a set-off where it could find an agreement to set off, which it did on very slender grounds, to prevent circuity of action and multiplicity of suits; see title EQUITY, Vol. XIII., pp. 161 et seq. In taking this course equity was influenced by the statutes relating to bankrupts mentioned above (Downam v. Matthews (1722), 2 Vern. Ch. 580), but the right was recognised quite apart from cases of bankruptcy and existed before the passing of these statutes (Curson v. African Co. (1683), 1 Vern. 121; Peters v. Soame (1702), 2 Vern. 428; Freeman v. Lomas (1851), 9 Hare, 109). The Statutes of Set-off were construed strictly by the courts of common law, and it was held that a claim in damages could not be the subject of a set-off, but that "debts to be set off must be such as indebitatus assumpsit will lie for" (Howlet v. Strickland (1774), 1 Cowp. 56, per ASHHURST, J.; and see the cases cited in note (a), p. 490, post). Similarly, it was held that a defendant could not plead a set-off where the plaintiff's claim was for unliquidated damages (Grant v. Royal Exchange Assurance Co. (1816), 5 M. & S. 439, and cases cited p. 491, post). This doctrine was not applied to set-off in bankruptcy, the word "credit" used in the Bankruptcy Acts being held ex vi termini to include a claim for unliquidated damages (see Cumming v. Forester (1813), 1 M. & S. 494, per Lord ELLENBOROUGH, C.J., at p. 499). The result is that the law now governing set-off in bankruptcy (see title BANKRUPTCY AND INSOLVENCY, Vol. II., pp. 211 et seq.) is more liberal than that which determines the right of set-off allowed to the defendant in an action, and the decisions in the old equity reports as to set-off allowed in an action brought by the assignee of a bankrupt are not always in point in discussing the law of

860. A set-off may be created by agreement, and on this ground a claim may be set off which could not be pleaded under the statutory law (b). Such set-off is allowed even though the evidence of the agreement be slight (c), but there must be some evidence on which the court can find an agreement express or implied (d). A course of dealing between the parties by which mutual debts have been set off is evidence from which the court will imply such an agreement (e). But a set-off cannot be based on a custom of which the plaintiff was not aware (f). Such a set-off is not allowed if there is no consideration to support the agreement (g).

Set-off.

Set-off by agreement.

861. There can be no set-off to a claim which the law forbids to be assigned or incumbered (h).

Inalienable claim.

862. The Statutes of Set-off (i) have been repealed, and the right of set-off as it now exists is that conferred by the Rules of the Supreme Court (j), and is as follows:—

When set-off allowed.

A defendant in an action may set off or set up by way of counter-set-off in cases not connected with bankruptcy. Fresh grounds of equitable set-off (see title EQUITY, Vol. XIII., pp. 161 et seq.) arose after the passing of the statutes owing to the equitable construction put upon the statutes by courts of equity. If one debt was legal and the other equitable, a set-off was allowed (Hunt v. Jessel (1854), 18 Beav. 100). Cases were held to be within the equity of the statutes though not within their actual words. On the other hand, courts of equity, following the spirit of the statutes, would not allow a man to set off, even at law, where there was an equity to prevent him doing so, that is to say, where the rights, although legally mutual, were not equitably mutual (see Re Whitehouse & Co. (1878), 9 Ch. D. 595, per JESSEL, M.R., at p. 597). By the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852 (15 & 16 Vict. c. 76), s. 75, it was provided that pleas of set-off should be taken distributively, and that, if such a plea were found true by the jury as to part of the cause of action, a verdict should pass for the defendant as to that part of the cause of action and for the plaintiff as to the rest. By the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854 (17 & 18 Vict. c. 125), s. 83, a defendant in an action in a court of law was allowed to plead equitable defences, and in this way it became possible to raise an equitable set-off in courts of law as well as in courts of equity. Apart from the various statutes relating to bankruptcy, the next statute which affected the law of set-off was the Judicature Act, 1873 (36 & 37 Vict. c. 66), s. 24 of which made it possible to set up a legal or an equitable set-off in any Division of the High Court, even in the Admiralty Division (Bow, McLachlan & Co. v. Ship "Camosun," [1909] A. C. 597, 608, P. C.). Shortly afterwards, by the Judicature Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 77), s. 10, the rules in bankruptcy as to right of set-off were made applicable in the winding up of companies; see Re Washington Diamond Mining Co., [1893] 3 Ch. 95, C. A.; title COMPANIES, Vol. V., pp. 482, 502 et seq., 515.

claim against the claim of the plaintiff any right or claim whether such set-off or counterclaim sound in damages or not, and such set-off or counterclaim shall have the same effect as a cross-action, so as to enable the court to pronounce a final judgment in the same action both on the original and on the cross claim. But the court or a judge may, on the application of the plaintiff before trial, if in the opinion of the court or a judge such set-off cannot be conveniently disposed of in the pending action, or ought not to be allowed, refuse permission to the defendant to avail himself thereof (k).

Where in any action a set-off or counterclaim is established as a defence against the plaintiff's claim, the court or a judge may, if the balance is in favour of the defendant, give judgment for the defendant for such balance (l), or may otherwise adjudge to the defendant such relief as he may be entitled to upon the merits of the case (m).

only differs from the R. S. C. (1875), Ord. 9, r. 3, by omitting the words "statement of claim in" before the words "cross action." The Civil Procedure Acts Repeal Act, 1879 (42 & 43 Vict. c. 59), repealed stat. (1729) 2 Geo. 2, c. 22, and stat. (1735) 8 Geo. 2, c. 24, as far as they related to the Supreme Court of Judicature, subject to the qualification that "any jurisdiction or principle or rule of law or equity established or confirmed, or right or privilege acquired" under those enactments, was not to be affected by the repeal (Civil Procedure Acts Repeal Act, 1879 (42 & 43 Vict. c. 59), s. 4 (1) (a)), and that the repeal was not to "operate in respect of any court other than the Supreme Court of Judicature in England" (ibid., s. 4 (2)). The Common Law Procedure Acts, 1852 (15 & 16 Vict. c. 76), s. 75, and 1854 (17 & 18 Vict. c. 125), s. 83 (see note (a), p. 485, ante), were repealed by the Statute Law Revision and Civil Procedure Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 49), s. 3. Stat. (1729) 2 Geo. 2, c. 22, and stat. (1735) 8 Geo. 2, c. 24, were completely repealed, subject to a similar qualification to that made by the Civil Procedure Acts Repeal Act, 1879 (42 & 43 Vict. c. 59), on the ground stated in the preamble, that the subject-matter thereof had been "provided for by or under the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1873, and the Acts amending it, or rules made pursuant thereto"; whilst by the Statute Law Revision and Civil Procedure Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 49), s. 6 (c), it was provided that the power to make rules contained in the Judicature Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 77), and the Acts amending it should be deemed to extend to the matters contained in and regulated by the enactments thus repealed. The effect of these statutes was considered by the Court of Appeal in Snelling v. Pulling (1885), 29 Ch. D. 85, C. A., where BRETT, M.R., at p. 87, laid it down that "the Judicature Acts gave the judges power to make rules having a statutable force," and "though the judges had no power to make rules altering any statute, they had power to make rules dealing with any principle of law which affected rules of procedure and practice." The result appears to be that the present law of set-off, at least so far as the High Court is concerned, depends entirely on R. S. C., Ord. 19, r. 3; Ord. 21, r. 17. The King's Bench Division held in Bankes v. Jarvis, [1903] 1 K. B. 549, that the right of set-off is greater under the present rules than before the Judicature Acts were passed; see, further, note (g), p. 491, post.

864. In an action for specific performance of a contract for the sale of land the defendant cannot plead a set-off, and it is no ground for refusing specific performance that there is a debt due from the plaintiff to the defendant (o), but if the debt is a mortgage debt it may be set off against a claim for the purchase-money (p).

And in an action of covenant for a sum payable under a contract which contains a provision that in certain events the defendant may claim a deduction to be ascertained by arbitration, a set-off may be pleaded of a sum which the arbitrator has found to be the proper amount of deduction (q).

SUB-SECT. 2.—Effect of the Judicature Acts.

865. Before the Judicature Acts (r) set-off was only allowed where both the plaintiff's and the defendant's claims were for a legal or an equitable debt (s), and was therefore subject to the following limitations:—

(1) No set-off was allowed as against a claim which sounded in damages (t), either at law or in equity (u).

(2) A claim which sounded in damages could not be made the subject of a set-off (a).

For example, where a municipal corporation opened three separate accounts with the plaintiff's bank, the first as the corporation, the second as managers of public baths and washhouses, and the third as the local board of health, and were sued for a balance due on the first account, it was held that they could set off sums due to them on the second and third accounts (Pedder v. Preston Corporation (1862), 12 C. B. (N. S.) 535), but where a trustee for creditors of a firm to whom an assignment had been made sued for a debt owing to him in respect of the business which had accrued since the assignment, it was held that the defendant could not set off a debt due from the firm (Hunt v. Jessel (1854), 18 Beav. 100); see also *Charlton v. SECT. 2.
Essential Character-

Set-off.

(3) A claim on a guarantee or an indemnity sounds in damages and therefore a set-off could not be pleaded to it (b), nor could it be made the subject of a set-off (c), unless the claim was one of indemnity in respect of money already paid (d).

(4) If either the plaintiff's claim or the claim sought to be set off by the defendant accrued by reason of a penalty contained in a bond or specialty, the defendant might plead a set-off, but only by a plea in bar which showed exactly how much was due on either side (e). Therefore a defendant sued on a bond who desired to plead a set-off was required to state in his plea how much he admitted to be due on the bond (f). A defendant could not set off a penalty on a bond, but only such a sum as should be held to be due on the bond (g). If the condition of a bond was to do an act other than payment of money, and the condition was broken, no right of set-off arose (h); but if the condition of the bond was to pay a liquidated sum, or if a contract for payment of a sum for work to be done contained a stipulation for payment of a liquidated sum in the event of non-completion by a certain day, then in an action for such sum a set-off could be pleaded (i), and such a sum could itself be the subject of a set-off (k).

(5) If the plaintiff could frame his claim either in such a way that a set-off could be pleaded, or in such a way that a set-off could not be pleaded, the defendant could plead a set-off if the claim were framed in the former manner (l), but not if it were framed in the latter manner (m). If the plaintiff joined in the same action claims of both kinds the defendant could plead a set-off to those of the former kind, notwithstanding the joinder (n).

866. The effect of the Judicature Acts (o) and of the Rules of the Supreme Court (p) on the right of set-off appears open to some doubt. It has been decided that in an action at the suit of a trustee a claim for unliquidated damages by the defendant against the cestui que trust can be relied on as a defence (q), and the view was expressed that the defendant's claim was an answer to the plaintiff's claim and ought to be allowed as a set-off, and that by the Act and the Rules made in pursuance of it, more particularly R. S. C., Ord. 19, r. 3, an unliquidated claim is put "on the same footing as a liquidated claim for the purpose of a set-off," and that as the cross-claim could before the Acts (o) have been set off if liquidated, it could by virtue

(q) Bankes v. Jarvis, [1903] 1 K. B. 549. [It may be contended, however, that some of the dicta in Bankes v. Jarvis, supra, go further than was necessary for the decision of the case, and that the decision does not apply to all cross-claims, but is confined to equitable rights of set-off such as were the subject-matter of that case, and which were given effect to in Agra and Masterman's Bank v. Leighton (1866), L. R. 2 Exch. 56, which was relied on in it, and only decides that where before the Rules of the Supreme Court (see note (j), p. 487, ante) an equitable plea of set-off could have been maintained in respect of a liquidated claim, such a plea may now be maintained in respect of unliquidated damages. As to these equitable rights, it was laid down in Newfoundland Government v. Newfoundland Rail. Co. (1888), 13 App. Cas. 199, 213, P. C., following Young v. Kitchin (1878), 3 Ex. D. 127, that "unliquidated damages may now be set off between the original parties, and also against an assignee if flowing out of and inseparably connected with the dealings and transactions which give rise to the subject of assignment." See, further, Watson v. Mid Wales Rail. Co. (1867), L. R. 2 C. P. 593; Baker v. Adam (1910), 15 Com. Cas. 227, 235 et seq.; Stoddart v. Union Trust, Ltd., [1912] 1 K. B. 181, C. A.; Parsons v. Sovereign Bank of Canada, [1913] A. C. 160, P. C.; compare Reeves v. Pope, [1913] 1 K. B. 637, cited p. 500, post. It must be observed that in these cases the cross-claim set up against the assignee is really in the nature of an equitable defence, and that, although it may afford an answer to the whole or a part of the claim, the defendant cannot recover anything from the assignee even if his claim against the assignor exceeds the amount of the claim made by the assignee. The dicta in Bankes v. Jarvis, supra, go beyond this, and the dictum in Newfoundland Government v. Newfoundland Rail. Co., supra, referring to a "set-off as between the original parties," which was also obiter, appears to support the view that unliquidated damages may now be in all cases the subject of a "set-off." This view is, however, opposed to the view expressed in Bennett v. White, [1910] 2 K. B. 643, C. A., per KENNEDY, L.J., at p. 648, and seems opposed to the views expressed by the Court of Appeal in Stumore v. Campbell & Co., [1892] 1 Q. B. 314, C. A., 316, 318. It also appears inconsistent with the reasoning on which the cases which show the difference between the effect of a set-off and a counterclaim as regards the amount the plaintiff "recovers," within the meaning of the County Courts Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 43), s. 116 (see p. 520, post), were decided; and with the cases, many of them decided in the Court of Appeal, in which the same difference has been held to exist as to the incidence of the cost of the plaintiff's claim (see pp. 518, 519, post), and with the cases as to security for costs, e.g., New Fenix Compagnie Anonyme d'Assurances de Madrid v. General Accident, Fire, and Life Assurance Corporation, Ltd., [1911] 2 K. B. 619, C. A. None of these latter cases appear to have been cited in Bankes v. Jarvis, supra, and it seems of the Acts be "now set off though unliquidated" (r). If this be so, then it would appear that the effect of the Acts and Rules is that claims in damages, even when unliquidated, may now be made the subject of a set-off, and a set-off may be allowed in an action where the plaintiff's claim is for damages.

SUB-SECT. 3.—As to Date of Origin.

must arise.

867. No debt can be made the subject of a set-off unless it was in existence and was an actionable and enforceable debt both at the time when the action was commenced (s) and at the date when the plea was pleaded (t), and has continued unsatisfied up to the trial (u). Therefore a plea of set-off of a debt is bad unless it alleges that the plaintiff was at the commencement of the action and still is liable to the defendant (v).

Debt arising
brought.

868. A debt arising after action brought, even though it arise before the defence is delivered, cannot be made the subject of a set-off (w); but it is no objection to a set-off that the debt relied upon accrued due after the plaintiff's cause of action accrued (x).

A defendant cannot set off a sum due on a bill of exchange which was in the hands of a third party at the date of action brought and was subsequently and before plea indorsed to the defendant (a).

Statute-barred debt.

869. It is a good answer to a plea of set-off that the debt sought to be set off was statute-barred at the date of action brought if the statute is pleaded in reply (b), but not that it has become statute-curious if the defendant's liability to pay the costs of the claim and the general costs of the action could in many of them have been avoided by merely calling the counterclaim a set-off. Bankes v. Jarvis, [1903] 1 K. B. 549, was distinguished by HAMILTON, J., in Baker v. Adam (1910), 15 Com. Cas. 227, at p. 236, somewhat on the grounds above suggested. As to the previously existing right of a cestui que trust to set off a debt due to his trustee, see, further, Cochrane v. Green (1860), 9 C. B. (N. S.) 448; and, as to equitable pleas of set-off, see generally, Bullen and Leake, Precedents of Pleadings, 3rd ed. (1868), pp. 571, 573, 574. The judgment of VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, J., in Westacott v. Bevan, [1891] 1 Q. B. 774, at p. 780, may be cited in support of the view that as between the original parties to a contract, a right to set off the amount recovered on a counterclaim exists, but is limited to claims arising out of the same contract; but in Stumore v. Campbell & Co., [1892] 1 Q. B. 314, C. A., the Court of Appeal did not approve of this.—EDITORIAL NOTE.]

(r) See, especially, Bankes v. Jarvis, supra, per CHANNELL, J., at p. 553.

(s) Evans v. Prosser (1789), 3 Term Rep. 186, and cases in note (w), infra. If Bankes v. Jarvis, supra, applies to all cases, it may be doubted whether this rule has not now gone. In that case the claim which was set off arose after action brought, and counterclaim can be maintained in respect of a claim arising after action brought; see p. 508, post.

barred after the commencement of the action and before the defence was delivered (c).

If a company goes into liquidation, debts which accrued due before the winding-up may be set off against one another (d), but a defendant sued for a debt which has accrued since the winding-up cannot set off a debt due from the company before the liquidator was appointed (e). A similar rule applies when a defendant is sued by a trustee in bankruptcy (f).

870. A solicitor may set off an amount due to him for costs although he has not complied with the statutory provision (g), which requires the delivery of a bill of costs a month before action (h).

SUB-SECT. 4.—As to Parties.

871. Subject to the exceptions hereinafter mentioned, a set-off is available only between the same parties and in the same right as the claim (i).

Between what
exists.

A joint debt and a several debt cannot be set off against each other (k). Thus in an action for a debt due from the defendant to the plaintiff separately the defendant cannot set off a debt due from the plaintiff jointly with others who are not co-plaintiffs in the action (l); but he may set off a debt due from the plaintiff severally as well as jointly with others (m).

872. A defendant sued for a debt by two or more plaintiffs jointly cannot set off a debt due from one of the plaintiffs separately (n), even though the joint debt was contracted owing to fraud (o).

for a separate debt he cannot set off a debt due to himself and another jointly (q).

873. A defendant who is sued alone as one of several joint debtors may plead that the debt is due from himself jointly with others, and that he and his co-debtors are entitled to a set-off in respect of a debt owed by the plaintiff to them jointly (r), but he cannot set off a debt due to one of such co-debtors separately, even though such co-debtor has assigned a share of such debt to him (s).

How raised.

874. Defences to a set-off are raised in the High Court by means of a reply.

Where it is merely desired to traverse the facts on which set-off is based no reply need be delivered (t).

If the plaintiff desires to set up that the alleged set-off is bad, or that assuming the facts alleged in the plea of set-off to be proved there is no right of set-off, he must do so by specially pleading his contention in reply, together with the facts on which such contention is based (a). Thus, a plaintiff may reply to a plea of set-off that the debt is unenforceable. If he does so, he must set out the grounds on which he bases his contention (b).

A defence to a set-off arising after the defence has been delivered may be raised in the reply either alone or together with any other defence (c).

payment.

875. Payment is a good answer to set-off, and a payment made by an unauthorised agent and not ratified until after set-off pleaded may be pleaded in defence to a set-off (d).

Plea as to character in which plaintiff claims.

876. It is no defence to a set-off of or claim against the plaintiff to plead that the plaintiff sues on his claim simply as trustee or assignee (e).

SECT. 4.—*Set-off by and against Particular Parties.*SUB-SECT. 1.—Agents, Factors, and Brokers.

877. A defendant who is sued by the disclosed principal of an agent cannot set off a debt due from the agent (f), and if the defendant is sued by the agent he cannot set off a debt due from the principal (g), unless it can be shown that the agent has assented to such a set-off (h). Where a set-off would operate to prejudice the agent's lien for his expenses, or a prior charge given to him by the principal, in respect of advances made at the principal's request, over the money in respect of which the action is brought, the set-off will not be allowed (i).

878. A defendant sued on a liquidated claim (k) by an undisclosed principal may set off a debt due from the agent of the undisclosed principal (l), provided that the claim is in respect of a transaction entered into by the agent acting in his own name as principal and that the plaintiff authorised the agent so to act or held him out as principal and the defendant dealt with the agent in the belief that he was the principal and that the debt which the defendant seeks to set off accrued due before he knew that the agent was merely an agent (m).

879. If the defendant knows only that the agent is an agent, for instance, a broker, without knowing his principal, he is put on inquiry and cannot set off in an action by the principal a debt due from the agent (n), or rely on any custom not known to the plaintiff as giving him such right (o). But if he believes that the agent, having the right to do so, for instance, a factor, has sold in his own name to repay advances made by the agent to his principal, he is not bound to make further inquiry, and so may set off against a claim by the principal a debt due from the agent (p).

880. If the claim the defendant seeks to set off arises out of a transaction entered into by a broker acting on the defendant's behalf, the knowledge of the broker is the knowledge of the defendant, and if the broker knew that the agent was an agent the defendant cannot set off a debt due from the agent (q).

881. A broker may set off as against his principal a debt due from the principal (a).

Where a broker has negotiated a sale and purchase and, after disclosing the name of the seller to the purchaser, has resold for the latter to a third party, he cannot set off against the purchaser a sum paid by him to the original seller as the purchase price, even though he acted for such seller on a del credere commission (b).

SUB-SECT. 2.—Assignees.

assignment.

882. The assignee of a chose in action takes it subject to certain equities (c). In an action by the assignee of a chose in action the defendant may set off any debt that could have been set off as against the assignor (d), even though the debt arises out of an act initially wrongful if the assignee has affirmed and adopted it (e), but not a debt that accrues due from the assignor after notice of the assignment (f), unless it appears from the circumstances of the case that the parties intended that one should be set off against the other (g). A debt accruing due from the assignee after notice of assignment may be set off (h). A debt owed to a third person by the plaintiff and assigned (i) by such third person to the defendant can be set off against the plaintiff (k).

In an action by the assignee of a chose in action (b) the defendant may set off any claim in damages available against the assignor if the damages flow out of and are inseparably connected with the dealings and transactions which give rise to the chose in action assigned (c); but he may not, as against an innocent assignee for value and without notice of the fraud, set off damages for fraudulent misrepresentation whereby he was induced to enter into the contract which gave rise to the chose in action (d) or claims for unliquidated damages arising out of breaches of contracts not connected with the subject-matter of the plaintiff's claim (e).

The defendant to an action brought by the assignee of a marine insurance policy is entitled to raise any defence, and therefore any set-off, arising out of the contract which he would have been entitled to raise against the assignor (f), but he has no greater right of set-off than has the defendant to an action brought by the assignee of any other chose in action, and therefore may not set off a claim for indemnity arising out of some other policy than that on which the plaintiff sues (g).

885. A banker is entitled to set off what is due to a customer on one account against what is due from him on another account (h), although the moneys due to him may in fact belong to other persons (i), unless there is some equity sufficient to countervail the legal right of set-off (k); but he is not justified of his own motion in transferring a balance from what he knows to be a trust account of

A customer has a right to set off a balance due to him from his bank against a debt due to the bank from him (o), unless he has notice that the debt due from him has been assigned to a stranger (p).

886. Where a customer of a bank having an account in his own name also has an account in the name of himself and another jointly, a right to set off items in the two accounts will only arise where the customer is so beneficially interested in the balance of the joint account that a court of equity would without terms or inquiry compel a transfer of the account into the customer's name alone (q).

SUB-SECT. 4.—Executors.

Claims against executors.

887. If either party sue or be sued as executor, or administrator, and there are mutual debts between the testator, or intestate, and the other party, one debt may be set off against the other (r), provided both debts arose before or both arose after the death of the testator or intestate (s).

Thus in an action by an executor on a cause of action which has accrued to him as executor, the defendant cannot set off a debt due from the testator in his lifetime (t); and in an action against an executor for a debt due from the testator the executor cannot set off a claim which has accrued to him as executor (a).

An executor can set off against a legatee a debt owed to the testator (b), even though such debt has become statute-barred since the death of the testator (c).

A debtor to a testator cannot set off against the executor a debt due from a legatee (d).

888. The rule that the debts must accrue in the same right is strictly applied. Therefore, if a plaintiff sues as executor the defendant cannot set off a debt due from the plaintiff in his personal capacity (e). If an executor be sued as executor he cannot set off a claim he has in his personal capacity against the plaintiff (f), and if sued in his personal capacity he cannot set off a claim he has as executor (g), unless it be such a claim that he can also sue on it in his personal capacity (h).

A debt due from a husband cannot be set off against the assignees of the husband suing on a chose in action which belonged to the wife before marriage (o).

892. An administrator cannot set off against the claim of a wife to a share of the estate, in an action brought by the wife against him and her husband, a debt due to him from the husband (p), nor can he set off a debt from the husband to the prejudice of the wife's equity to a settlement (q).

SECT. 4.

Set-off by and against Particular Parties.Insurance policy.SUB-SECT. 6.—Insurance Brokers and Underwriters.

893. A claim under a policy is a claim for unliquidated damages, and losses and premiums could not be set off against each other under the Statutes of Set-off (r), but by virtue of the Judicature Acts (s) the broker in an action brought by the insurers against him for premiums can counterclaim to the extent to which he could recover on the policies for his own use and benefit (t).

SUB-SECT. 7.—*Landlord and Tenant.*Former rights.

894. Before the Judicature Acts (s) a tenant could not set off against a claim for rent a claim in damages for breach of covenant by the landlord (u) unless he had himself repaired the breach and was entitled to recover the cost from the landlord as money paid to his use (a).

Claims of tenant against landlord.

895. Where a tenant who has obtained judgment against his landlord became indebted to him in arrears of rent and for dilapidations, it was held that he could not be restrained from issuing execution against his landlord on the judgment (b).

Where a tenant sues in replevin and there is an avowry of rent due, the tenant cannot set off a debt due from the landlord in reply to such avowry (c).

But where he has paid ground rent to the superior landlord (d), or where he has paid rent to a mortgagee, who has threatened to put the law in force (e), he may plead payment (f) pro tanto in reply to such avowry; similarly where a tenant has paid rates on the promise of the landlord that they shall come out of the rent (g).

Assignment
of reversion.

896. The rule of equity that to an action by an assignee of a chose in action the defendant may set off a claim for damages against the assignor directly arising out of the same transaction as the subject-matter of the assignment does not apply to the assignment of a reversion expectant on the termination of a lease (h).

SUB-SECT. 8.—Master and Servant.

SECT. 4.

897. A servant discharged without proper notice may set off a claim for wages in lieu of notice against a claim by the master for money had and received (i).

Set-off
by and against Particular Parties.

A master sued for wages cannot set off a sum claimed for the value of goods lost by the negligence of the servant (k), unless there be an agreement authorising such sum to be deducted from the wages (l).

Master and servant.

Where proceedings between an employer and workman are taken in a court of summary jurisdiction the defendant cannot, except by leave of the court, rely on any set-off or counterclaim unless notice thereof has been given (m).

898. The Truck Act, 1831 (n), does not make it illegal to deduct from wages a debt due to the master, and a master sued for wages is not debarred by that Act from setting off against a claim for wages a sum due under a magistrate's order against the workman for damages for unlawfully absents himself from work (o).

Truck Act,

899. A defendant cannot, in the absence of special agreement, set off a claim for the board and lodging of the plaintiff's son sent to him on a "liking" for a month, where no apprenticeship has resulted (p).

Other claims.

A sum which has been overpaid to a workman cannot (q) be set off against compensation subsequently becoming due to him under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906 (r).

SUB-SECT. 9.—Partners.

900. The law as to set-off between joint debts and several debts (s) applies where one or more of the parties is a firm. Therefore, where a defendant is sued by a firm he cannot set off a debt due from one of the partners individually (t) unless the partners have permitted one of their number to deal as a sole trader with the defendant and thereby led him to believe that he was dealing with an individual and not with a firm, and the defendant in this belief has made advances or given credit to such partner. In such a case the defendant may set off against the firm the debt due from the individual partner in respect of such advance or as to which such credit has been given (u). Similarly, if in like circumstances an individual partner has agreed to allow a set-off, such agreement is binding on the firm (v), provided such debt is due in respect of a matter within the scope of the apparent authority given by the firm to the individual partner (x); but if the other party knew that somebody besides the individual partner had an interest in the debt sued for, he will not be allowed to set off a debt due from the individual partner, and an agreement to allow him to do so, if made without the authority of the other partners, is not binding on the firm (a).

Firm acting as agent.

901. Where a firm act as agents for an undisclosed principal and contract with a defendant, in an action on such contract by the undisclosed principal the defendant may set off a debt due from the firm if the circumstances are such that he would have had a right of set-off if the agent had been a single individual (b); a similar rule applies where the agent is not really a firm but contracts in a firm name on behalf of one only of the persons acting as agents under such name (c).

Debts owed by and to a firm.

902. A defendant sued for a debt due from himself alone may not set off a debt owing to a firm of which he is a member (d); similarly, a debt owed by a firm may not be set off against a claim by an individual partner (e); but where all the other partners have died and the right to the firm debt is in the individual partner as survivor, it may be made the subject of a set-off (f).

assignment.

903. The law as to set-off as against an assignee obtains where any one or more of the parties concerned is a firm (g), and a firm may set off against the assignee of a retiring partner a debt due from the retiring partner at the date of assignment (h) and a debtor may set off against the assignee of a firm a debt due from the firm before assignment (i).

SUB-SECT. 10.—Solicitors.

SECT. 4.

904. A solicitor is not prevented from setting off a sum due for costs by the fact that no signed bill has been delivered (j).

Where a claim for costs and disbursements in respect of work done by a solicitor fails because the solicitor is guilty of negligence, and there is joined with it a claim as to which this defence does not avail, the defendant cannot set off against the second claim moneys paid to the solicitor and expended by him in doing the work before the negligence occurred (k).

Solicitors.

SUB-SECT. 11.—Sureties.

905. A surety for payment of a sum due under a contract is entitled to be exonerated by his principal, and may therefore set off in an action against himself as surety a debt due from the plaintiff to the principal arising out of the same transaction (l); and if under the contract the principal is entitled to the benefit of a deduction to be ascertained by arbitration, the surety may set off a sum awarded by an arbitrator acting under the contract (m).

Claim against surety.

906. A surety sued by his principal may set off sums paid by him as surety (n), and if sued by the executor of the principal the right of set-off holds good (o).

Surety and principal.

907. Where a loan is made by an insurance company to B. on the security of a policy on the life of A. and A. dies, the company cannot set off a debt due from A. against a claim on the policy by a surety who has paid off the loan (p).

Claim against

SUB-SECT. 12.—Trustees and Cestuis que Trust.

908. In an action at the suit of a trustee a cross-claim for a liquidated amount (q), or even for unliquidated damages (r), which the defendant has against his cestui que trust may be set off, and in an action against a cestui que trust the defendant may set off a cross-claim which his trustee has against the plaintiff (s).

SECT. 4.
Set-off
by and

Particular Parties.

909. Trustees have, in certain circumstances, a right of set-off. This is, however, dealt with elsewhere (u).

Trustees.

Part III.—Counterclaim.

SECT. 1.—When Counterclaim Available.

When
available.

910. A counterclaim (v) is available to a defendant only when the rules of procedure of the court in which the plaintiff brings his action allow a counterclaim to be set up, and the mode in which a counterclaim may be brought is determined by those rules (a).

In the High Court the court has power to exclude a counterclaim which cannot be conveniently tried with the plaintiff's claim (b).

A counterclaim may be set up only in respect of claims as to which the party could bring an independent action in the court in which the counterclaim is brought (c). The Judicature Acts (d) and (u) See title TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES.

(v) Counterclaim is entirely the creation of the Judicature Act, 1873 (36 & 37 Vict. c. 66), s. 24 (3), Schedule, r. 18, and R. S. C., Ord. 19, r. 3, Ord. 21, rr. 10—17. Until the Judicature Act, 1873 (36 & 37 Vict. c. 66) was passed a defendant could not raise in the plaintiff's action any claim which could not be made the subject of set-off. His only remedy was to bring an independent cross-action (Stooke v. Taylor (1880), 5 Q. B. D. 569, 576; Stumore v. Campbell & Co., [1892] 1 Q. B. 314, 316, C. A.). Now by his counterclaim he may raise any claim, whatever its nature, against the plaintiff in the plaintiff's action that might have been the subject of an independent action, subject only to the discretionary power of the court under R. S. C., Ord. 19, r. 3, Ord. 21, r. 15, to refuse to allow him to adopt that method of procedure if it be inconvenient that his claim should be tried in the same proceedings as the plaintiff's. If the defendant's claim exceeds the plaintiff's and is such that the defendant may plead it as a set-off, he should counterclaim as well, as it is considered that only in this way can he recover the balance in the action. This is the usually accepted interpretation of R. S. C., Ord. 21, r. 17, although the rule possibly allows judgment to be given for the defendant for the balance; see Gathercole v. Smith (1881), 7 Q. B. D. 626, per LUSH, L.J., at p. 629, C. A.). In Stumore v. Campbell & Co., supra, at p. 318, LOPES, L.J., said that the Judicature Acts "did not alter, or intend to alter, the rights of parties. This power to counterclaim was introduced to prevent circuity of action. It is a matter of procedure and does not affect rights." KAY, L.J., ibid., at p. 319, said: "All that those Acts have done in respect of a counterclaim is to allow a cross-action to be brought and tried at the same time as the original action. This is for the general convenience and to prevent the necessity for trying the action separately, with all the costs of doing so."

(c) Pellas v. Neptune Marine Insurance Co. (1879), 5 C. P. D. 34, C. A.; Birmingham Estates Co. v. Smith (1880), 13 Ch. D. 506, 508; Bow, McLachlan & Co. v. Ship "Camosun," [1909] A. (d) See title COURTS, Vol. IX., p. 51, note (g).

the rules made thereunder have not given new rights of action, but have only altered the procedure to the extent of allowing a cross-action and an action to be brought and tried in the same proceedings (e). A person who has a right not enforceable by action, but in some other way, cannot enforce the same by a counterclaim, but is confined to the proper remedy (f).

SECT. 1.
When Counter-claim Available.

911. A counterclaim cannot be set up in respect of a cause of action or to claim relief which would not be available to the defendant, or defendants if there are more than one, suing in an independent action without the joinder of a co-plaintiff, and the court will not add a fresh defendant to enable a counterclaim to be raised (g) unless the relief claimed by the plaintiff in the action is such that the fresh defendant may properly be added having regard to the plaintiff's claim (h).

Joint claims.

A husband joined as co-defendant with his wife for conformity only may with his wife counterclaim in respect of a cause of action available to them jointly (i).

One of several co-defendants may set up a counterclaim in respect of a several cause of action available to himself alone (k).

SECT. 2.—Essential Characteristics of Counterclaim.

SUB-SECT. 1.—Plaintiff must be a Party.

912. A counterclaim by a defendant must allege a cause of action (l) available against the plaintiff (m), either alone or together with some other person, as defendant or defendants to the counterclaim (n). A counterclaim may not be set up only against persons or a person not plaintiffs or a plaintiff in the action (a).

Plaintiff must be a party.

A defendant who has a cause of action available against the plaintiff or plaintiffs in the action, together with some person not a plaintiff, may join such person as a defendant to the counterclaim subject to the restriction mentioned below (b).

SECT. 2.

Essential Characteristics of Counter-claim.Claim against plaintiff alone.SUB-SECT. 2.—When Raised against Plaintiff only.

913. Where there are several co-plaintiffs a counterclaim may be brought against all of them or against one or some of them only (c).

In an action by several co-plaintiffs the defendant may in his counterclaim allege separate causes of action against each or any of them (d).

A counterclaim cannot be brought against a plaintiff personally and also in a representative capacity unless the rules governing joinder of parties (e) would allow of such joinder in an independent action (f).

SUB-SECT. 3.—*When Raised against Plaintiff and a Third Person.*Claim against plaintiff and another.

914. The defendant in an action may set up a counterclaim against the plaintiff, together with some third person, provided the subject-matter thereof or relief claimed is connected with or relates to the subject-matter of the plaintiff's claim (g), even though such third person could not have been joined as a co-plaintiff in the action (h), but the cause of action alleged must be a cause of action available against the plaintiff and such third person jointly and not against such third person merely in the alternative (i), and the subject-matter thereof or relief claimed must relate to or be connected with the original subject of the cause or matter (g).

SECT. 3.—*How Counterclaim Differs from Set-off.*Distinction between
and set-off.

915. A counterclaim does not afford any defence to the plaintiff's claim (k) as does a set-off, but is in effect an independent action which alleges a cause of action against the plaintiff or the plaintiff together with some third person, as the subject of a cross-action which is to be tried at the same time as the plaintiff's claim (l). It can be brought in respect of any claim that could be the subject of an independent action (m). The amount that may be recovered by a counterclaim is not limited by the jurisdiction of the court in respect of the amount of the claim (n), unless notice in writing of the objection to the jurisdiction is given (o).

916. Counterclaim is not confined to money claims, and is not confined to causes of action of the same nature as the original action (p); and except where a person other than the plaintiff is made a defendant to it, it need not relate to or be connected with the original subject of the cause or matter (q), and a defendant is entitled to set up any counterclaim which is not so incongruous as to be incapable of being tried with the original action (r). A claim founded on tort may be opposed to one founded on contract (s), and in an action in rem the defendant may set up a counterclaim in personam (t). The defendant by his counterclaim may ask for any form of relief, for example, a declaration (a), a vesting order or relief against forfeiture (b), an injunction (c), a receiver (d), specific performance (e), revocation of a patent (f), an account (g), payment of money claim, or damages.

SECT. 4.—Effect of Counterclaim when Raised.

917. The effect of a counterclaim when raised is to put the plaintiff, and any third person against whom together with the plaintiff the counterclaim is set up, in the position of a defendant to a cross-action, who must defend himself and show a good answer or suffer judgment against himself, on which execution may issue in respect of the cause or causes of action alleged in the counterclaim (h).

Brought.

The counterclaim is not affected by anything which relates solely to the plaintiff's claim, but proceeds as an independent action (i).

SECT. 5.—Counterclaim Arising after Action Brought.

918. A defendant may by a counterclaim set up a cause of action which has accrued since action brought (k). A contributory on whom calls have been made in the winding-up of a company can counterclaim for rescission of the contract to take shares provided he has taken legal steps to have his name removed from the register before the winding-up commenced (l).

When cause of action may arise.

A defendant may set up a counterclaim in respect of a cause of action arising after defence, if he amend the defence and state in the counterclaim that it arose after defence (m).

Counterclaim to counter-claim.

919. A plaintiff, in reply to a counterclaim, may set up a counterclaim against the defendant in respect of a matter which arose at the same time and out of the same transaction as the defendant's counterclaim (n), provided the plaintiff sets up such counterclaim merely as a protection against the defendant's counterclaim; otherwise any fresh claim he wishes to raise must be raised by amending the statement of claim (o).

A person not a party to the original action, but who is served with a counterclaim, may not raise a counterclaim against the original defendant alone (p) or against the original defendant together with the plaintiff (q).

SECT. 7.—Third Party Notice.

Part IV.—Pleading and Practice.

SECT. 1.
Pleading.SECT. 1.—*Pleading.*SUB-SECT. 1.—Form.

921. In the High Court of Justice a set-off or counterclaim should be raised by being specially pleaded in the same document as the defence (s). In the High Court.

922. In the county court, a set-off or counterclaim is raised by notice in writing given five clear days before the date fixed for the hearing (a), or where the plaintiff's claim exceeds £50, then ten clear days before such date (b). The notice must state the facts relied on as showing the ground of set-off or counterclaim in the same form as that in which such facts would be pleaded in an action in the High Court (c). In the county court.

923. In any inferior court (d), including the Mayor's Court, London (e), the mode of raising a set-off or counterclaim is determined by the rules of procedure in force in such court. Inferior courts.

924. When in the High Court a party wishes to set up a set-off or counterclaim, the pleading in which he does so should be marked with the proper description (f). A party wishing to plead a set-off may do so by alleging facts sufficient to support the same without stating that it is a set-off (g), but a party wishing to set up a counterclaim must not only allege the necessary facts, but must also state that he does so by way of counterclaim (h). Form of pleading.

925. When in the High Court a defendant by his defence sets Title of pleading.

(f) R. S. C., Ord. 19, r. 11. Where there are pleadings the facts relied on as a set-off or as the subject of a counterclaim are pleaded in the same document as the defence after the facts relied on by way of defence pure and simple. The allegations which form the counterclaim should be headed "Counterclaim," and the title of the defendant's pleading should be "Defence and Counterclaim"; see R. S. C., Appendix D., s. I. Allegations which show a ground of set-off are usually headed "Set-off" or are introduced by words indicating that they are alleged by way of set-off. The pleading should be divided into paragraphs numbered consecutively; see title PLEADING, Vol. XXII., p. 421.

up any counterclaim which raises questions between himself and the plaintiff along with any other persons, he must add to the title an additional title as in a statement of claim, setting forth the names of all the persons who, if such counterclaim were to be enforced by cross-action, would be defendants to such cross-action (i).

Time for raising claim.

926. Where the writ in an action in the High Court is indorsed for trial without pleadings (k), a defendant who seeks to rely on a set-off or counterclaim must, within ten days after appearance, give notice in writing to the plaintiff setting out the grounds and particulars (l) of such set-off or counterclaim (m), or apply by summons to the court or a judge for delivery of a statement of claim (n), and on the hearing of such summons ask for leave to deliver a set-off or counterclaim (a).

Contents of

927. A defendant seeking to avail himself of a set-off or counterclaim must set out all the material facts on which he relies in support thereof in his pleading or notice (b) with the same particularity as he would as plaintiff in an independent action brought to enforce the subject of the set-off or counterclaim (c).

A plea of set-off must allege both that the plaintiff is and that the plaintiff was indebted to the defendant in the amount sought to be set off (d).

of claim.

928. A defendant may plead several grounds of set-off or counterclaim, either simply or in the alternative, which several grounds must be pleaded in the same manner as grounds of claim in a statement of claim (e), but if he alleges an alternative cause of action only against a person not a plaintiff he cannot claim to have him joined as a party (f).

(b) Ibid., Ord. 19, r. 7, puts a notice on the same footing as a pleading in respect of particulars.

(c) Set-off is a ground of defence, and the facts in support thereof are relied upon as showing that the plaintiff's claim is not maintainable and must therefore be raised by the defendant's pleading (R. S. C., Ord. 19, r. 15). A counterclaim being in effect a cross-action is, as regards mode of pleading, governed by the same rules as a statement of claim, as to which see title PLEADING, Vol. XXII., pp. 440 et seq.

SECT. 1.
Pleading.

A counterclaim may allege more than one cause of action provided the different causes of action are such as could be joined in the same statement of claim in an independent action (g), but the facts relied upon in support of each cause of action must be separately alleged (h), and if more than one form of relief be claimed the forms of relief must be specifically stated, either simply or in the alternative (i).

929. A defendant relying in support of a set-off or counterclaim on facts already alleged by way of defence need not repeat them in extenso, but may incorporate them in the set-off or counterclaim by way of reference only (k). Similarly, where the same claim is relied on as a subject both of set-off and counterclaim, the facts, if not already alleged in the defence, may be alleged in the counterclaim and incorporated in the set-off by way of reference (l).

SUB-SECT. 2.—Delivery or Service.

930. Where a set-off or counterclaim is relied upon by a defendant only as against a person or persons by whom the action is brought as plaintiff or plaintiffs, such set-off is delivered in the same manner as and as part of the defence (m).

Delivery.

Where a defendant by his defence sets up any counterclaim which raises questions between himself and the plaintiff or plaintiffs along with any other persons, he must deliver his defence to such of them as are parties to the action (n) within the period within which he is required to deliver it to the plaintiff or plaintiffs (o), and any person not a party to the action, but made a defendant to a counterclaim, must be summoned to appear by being served with a copy thereof, and such service is regulated by the same rules as apply to the service of a writ of summons (p).

Appearance.

SUB-SECT. 3.—Appearance by Third Person not a Plaintiff.

931. Any person not already a party to the action, who is served with a defence and counterclaim, must appear thereto as if he had been served with a writ of summons (q) to appear in an action (r).

Where a person so served with a counterclaim fails to enter an appearance, judgment cannot be signed against him in default of appearance(s), but when the time for delivery of reply has expired the defendant may move for judgment in default of defence (t).

SUB-SECT. 4.—Pleading in Answer to Counterclaim or Set-off.

Reply.

932. A defence to a set-off or counterclaim must be pleaded by a plaintiff in the reply (a) and delivered in the time limited for reply (b).

A person not a plaintiff made a defendant to a counterclaim may deliver a reply (c) within the time within which he might deliver a defence if it were a statement of claim (d).

A reply delivered by a plaintiff against whom a counterclaim is set up is headed "Reply." In a reply delivered by a plaintiff the paragraphs dealing with the defence are prefaced by the words "As

Every defence so served must be indorsed in the Form No. 2 in Appendix B, Part III., of the Rules of the Supreme Court, or to the like effect (R. S. C., Ord. 21, r. 12). The form is as follows:—

If the only defence to a set-off is a traverse, no reply is needed, but if any other defence is relied upon it must be pleaded and leave to deliver a reply for that purpose should be obtained; see p. 494, ante; and title PLEADING, Vol. XXII., pp. 431, 458.

SECT. 1.
Pleading.

933. A party or person served with a counterclaim pleads thereto in the same manner as a defendant would plead thereto if it were a statement of claim in an independent action, and must so plead in accordance with the rules of pleading governing a defence (f); but he may not set up a counterclaim to the counterclaim (g) unless he is a plaintiff in the action (h).

934. A plaintiff or other person (i) against whom a set-off or counterclaim is set up may raise by his pleading any point of law or any of the defences hereinbefore mentioned (k) in answer thereto. Such point of law may be disposed of in the same way as a point of law raised by a defendant in answer to a statement of claim (l), and, if the decision of such point of law substantially disposes of any ground of set-off or counterclaim, the court or a judge may dismiss the same or make such other order as may be just (m), and similarly an objection in point of law may be taken to a reply (n).

A counterclaim may be struck out as disclosing no cause of action (o).

935. A defendant who has set up any set-off or counterclaim may, without any leave, amend such set-off or counterclaim at any time before the expiration of the time allowed him for answering the reply, and before such answer, or in case there be no reply, then at any time before the expiration of twenty-eight days from defence (p), and the opposite party may within eight days apply to the court or a judge to disallow such amendment (q).

Amendment
leave.

Where any defendant has amended a set-off or counterclaim as mentioned above, the opposite party must plead thereto, or amend his own pleading, in like manner and subject to the conditions that obtain when a plaintiff has amended his statement of claim (r).

936. A set-off or counterclaim, or reply thereto, may be amended by leave of the court or a judge in the same manner as any other pleading (s).

SECT. 2.—Applications to Exclude or Stay Counterclaim or Set-off.

937. Where a defendant sets up a counterclaim, if the plaintiff or any other person (t) named as party to such counterclaim (u) contends that the claim thereby raised ought not to be disposed of by way of counterclaim, but in an independent action, he may at any time before reply (a) apply to the court or a judge for an order that such counterclaim may be excluded, and the court or a judge may, on the hearing of such application, make such order as may be just (b).

938. The court or a judge may, on the application of the plaintiff before trial, if of opinion that a set-off or counterclaim cannot be conveniently disposed of in the pending action, or ought not to be allowed, refuse permission to the defendant to avail himself thereof and exclude the same (c).

A counterclaim may be excluded as embarrassing (d), or as tending unduly to delay the trial of the action (e).

939. Any counterclaim infringing the rules as to joinder of causes of action or parties will be disallowed (f). A counterclaim will not be excluded on the ground that the plaintiff is a foreigner who would not be amenable to the jurisdiction as defendant in an independent action (g), but if such plaintiff be an independent Sovereign, the defendant can only counterclaim to the extent of the plaintiff's claim, and in respect of a matter not outside or independent of the subject-matter of the plaintiff's claim (h). In an action for the protection of a trust fund in which the plaintiff claimed a beneficial interest, a counterclaim for libel was excluded (i); and in an action for the balance of an account leave to amend by adding a counterclaim for libel was refused (j). So such a counterclaim not connected with the subject-matter of the claim was excluded in an action for rent (k), but such a counterclaim will not

In an action by a trustee on a covenant of indemnity, the court will not allow a counterclaim involving an administration action, nor one asserting a secret trust in favour of a third party (m).

In an action by a tenant for life for breach of trust the defendant will not be allowed to counterclaim on a bill of exchange (n).

SECT. 3.—Effect of Default in Pleading.

941. If a plaintiff or other person against whom a counterclaim is set up makes default in pleading thereto, the defendant cannot sign judgment in default of pleading, but he may set down the counterclaim on motion for judgment, and such judgment will be given as upon the counterclaim the court or a judge considers the defendant entitled to (q). If the reply be delivered before notice of motion for judgment is served, the motion will be refused (r).

SECT. 4.—Security for Costs.

942. A defendant who sets up a counterclaim may in a proper case be ordered to give security for costs (s).

Security for costs.

Whether security for costs should be ordered to be given by a foreigner resident out of the jurisdiction, who is making a claim as plaintiff in a cross-action, or is counterclaiming as defendant in an action, is a matter of discretion. There is no hard and fast rule as to what are the circumstances under which an order for security for costs should be made. Generally speaking, if such a defendant is in substance setting up the counterclaim by way of defence to the action, he ought not to be required to give security; but if the counterclaim is really a cross-claim having nothing to do with the subject-matter of the plaintiff's claim, then the fact that he is a defendant will not prevent him being ordered to give security for costs (t). Such a defendant will not be ordered to give security whenever the cross-claim goes beyond mere matter of defence (u); but if as defendant he by his counterclaim is in effect bringing an action quite independent of the transaction out of which the plaintiff's claim arises, he will be ordered to give security for costs (u). If the only matter really in dispute is that raised by the counterclaim, such a defendant will be ordered to give security (a). Where the claim is in Admiralty for damages caused by collision, such a defendant must give security for all the costs (b).

944. A defendant who admits the cause of action sued upon and counterclaims against a foreign plaintiff is not entitled to security for costs (d).

Discontinuance or

945. If in any case in which the defendant sets up a counterclaim (e) the action is stayed, discontinued, or dismissed, the defendant may nevertheless proceed with his counterclaim (f), and the plaintiff cannot by discontinuing prevent a defendant from proceeding with his counterclaim and recovering judgment thereon (g).

Where an action is dismissed for want of prosecution (h), or as being frivolous or vexatious (i), the defendant may proceed with his counterclaim (k), and on default of pleading set it down on motion for judgment (l).

A counterclaim cannot after discontinuance be set up (m) or remitted to the county court (n).

A defendant who has no defence to the plaintiff's claim but who has a bonâ fide counterclaim is entitled to apply for a stay of the action pending trial of the counterclaim (o).

SECT. 6.—Judgment.

946. Where the defendant establishes a set-off equal to or exceeding the plaintiff's claim, judgment is entered in his favour on the claim, because a set-off amounts to an absolute defence (p), and, therefore, if he has also counterclaimed in respect of the matters pleaded by way of set-off, he gets judgment both on the claim and the counterclaim (q). Where the defendant succeeds in establishing a set-off, but for less amount than the plaintiff recovers on the claim, judgment is entered for the plaintiff for the difference between the amount recovered on the claim and the amount in respect of which a set-off has been proved (r). If both the claim and the counterclaim fail, judgment is entered for the defendant on the claim and the plaintiff on the counterclaim (s).

947. Where in any action a set-off or counterclaim is established as a defence against the plaintiff's claim, the court or a judge may, if the balance is in favour of the defendant, give judgment for the defendant for such balance (a), or may otherwise adjudge to the defendant such relief as he may be entitled to upon the merits of the case (b).

The power so to enter judgment in the case of a counterclaim is discretionary, and when judgment is so entered it should state the decision on the claim and on the counterclaim (c). Where the plaintiff succeeds on the claim and the defendant on the counterclaim, judgment is usually entered for the plaintiff on the claim and for the defendant on the counterclaim (d). Where the plaintiff has succeeded on his claim and the defendant has succeeded on the counterclaim, and the one amount exceeds the other,

(a) R. S. C., Ord. 21, r. 17. Formerly a defendant who established a set-off exceeding in amount the plaintiff's claim could not get judgment in his favour for the excess (Stooke v. Taylor (1880), 5 Q. B. D. 569, 575). His only course was after getting judgment in respect of the claim brought by the plaintiff to bring an independent action for the balance. Even now, where a defendant desires judgment in his own favour for a balance in addition to judgment in respect of the plaintiff's claim, he should set up a counterclaim for this as well as a set-off.

(b) R. S. C., Ord. 21, r. 17. If the amount recovered by the defendant on his counterclaim exceeds the amount recovered by the plaintiff on his claim, but the balance of costs is in favour of the plaintiff, the court may allow the defendant to set off against such balance the difference between the two amounts (Meynall v. Morris (1911), 104 L. T. 667).

judgment may be entered for the balance (e), but it is usually entered for the plaintiff on the claim and for the defendant on the counterclaim (f). It is entirely a matter for the discretion of the judge at the trial whether judgment is entered in the one form or the other (g).

Execution.

948. Where a plaintiff obtains judgment on his claim and a defendant on the counterclaim, there are two judgments for all purposes except execution (h). Execution may not issue for more than the balance, and for this purpose it is immaterial whether judgment has been entered in the one or the other of the forms mentioned above (h).

SECT. 7.—Costs.

In general.

949. Where a plaintiff succeeds on his claim and the defendant on a counterclaim, which is not the subject of a set-off, the plaintiff, in the absence of circumstances which the court may treat as a ground for depriving him of his costs, and, subject to the provision of the County Courts Act, 1888 (i), s. 116, is entitled to the general costs of the action (j), and the defendant is entitled to the costs of the counterclaim (k). Where a defendant sued in the High Court succeeds on a counterclaim, he is entitled to costs on the counterclaim, however small the amount recovered, and the County Courts Act, 1888 (i), s. 116, does not apply (l). Similarly, if the plaintiff fails on the claim and the defendant fails on the counterclaim, the defendant is entitled to the costs of the claim, including the general

Where judgment was entered for plaintiffs with costs on the claim, and judgment for the plaintiffs and other persons (added as defendants to the counterclaim) with costs on the counterclaim, it was held that the judgment debts were separate and could not be the subject of one bankruptcy notice (Re A Bankruptcy Notice (1906), 96 L. T. 133, C. A.). The claim and counterclaim are treated as one action for the purpose of determining the sum on which a solicitor has a charging order for his costs (Westacott v. Bevan, [1891] 1 Q. B. 774). As to such charging orders, see, generally, title SOLICITORS.

costs of the action, and the plaintiff to the costs of the counterclaim (m). If the plaintiff is successful in defeating the counterclaim he is entitled to his costs of the counterclaim on the High Court scale, notwithstanding that the costs of his claim are governed by the County Courts Act, 1888 (n), s. 116 (o).

Where one party gets costs on the claim and the other costs on the counterclaim, the two sets of costs are set one against the other and the balance paid by the party against whom the greater sum for costs has been taxed (p).

The proper principle of taxation is to take the claim as if it and its issues were an action, and then to take the counterclaim and its issues as if it were an action, and then to give the allocatur for costs for the balance in favour of the litigant in whose favour the balance turns (q). If all the issues on the claim are found for the plaintiff he gets all the costs of the claim, but if only some of such issues are found in his favour he nevertheless gets the general costs of the action and of the issues on which he succeeds, but the defendant gets the costs of the issues on which the plaintiff fails (r). Costs incurred by a party in respect of matters that go partly to support the contentions on which he has succeeded and partly those on which he has failed, including the costs of a brief delivered to counsel on both claim and counterclaim, must be apportioned by the taxing master according to his own discretion (s).

If the difference between the amounts recovered respectively on the claim and counterclaim is in favour of one party, but the balance of costs is in favour of the other, the court may order such difference to be set off against such balance (Meynell v. Morris (1911), 104 L. T. 667).

The whole of the general costs of the action must be paid by a defendant against whom the plaintiff has established his claim; he is not entitled to any deduction on the ground that he has delivered a counterclaim instead of bringing a separate action (Atlas Metal Co. v. Miller, supra; Re Brown, Ward v. Morse, supra).

claimed in respect of the matters relied on by way of set-off he is similarly entitled to the costs of the counterclaim (a). If he proves a set-off for less than the plaintiff's claim he is held to have succeeded pro tanto (b).

Where a plaintiff brings an action in the High Court which might have been brought in the county court and succeeds on the claim, and the defendant establishes a set-off, the balance between the amount awarded on the claim and the amount the defendant has succeeded in setting off is the amount "recovered" for the purposes of the County Courts Act, 1888 (c), s. 116. But if the plaintiff gets judgment for an amount exceeding £100 and the defendant establishes a claim for a less amount by counterclaim, the plaintiff is nevertheless entitled to costs on the claim, however small the amount by which his claim exceeds the defendant's claim, and the County Courts Act, 1888 (d), s. 116, has no application (e).

(a) Lowe v. Holme (1883), 10 Q. B. D. 286; Lund v. Campbell (1885), 14 Q. B. D. 821, C. A. Where a defendant recovered on his counterclaim a sum equal to that recovered by a plaintiff on his claim, NEVILLE, J., ordered the plaintiff to pay the costs of the claim and counterclaim (Sprange v. Lee, [1908] 1 Ch. 424, 432), but it is difficult to see how this order can be supported unless the subject of counterclaim was also a good ground of set-off.

(b) Lund v. Campbell, supra. The word used in the County Courts Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 43), s. 116 (amended by the County Courts Act, 1903 (3 Edw. 7, c. 42)), is "recover," and it has been held that the word "recover" means recover when set-off is allowed (Ashcroft v. Foulkes (1856), 18 C. B. 261, 271; Beard v. Perry (1862), 2 B. & S. 493; Staples v. Young (1877), 2 Ex. D. 324; Stooke v. Taylor (1880), 5 Q. B. D. 569, 575). If the plaintiff succeeds on his claim to the extent of £100, and the defendant succeeds on a counterclaim but not on a set-off, the plaintiff is entitled to costs on the High Court scale as he has "recovered" £100 (Stooke v. Taylor, supra).

Part I.—Definition and Nature of Settlements.

SECT. 1.

Definition of a Settlement.

Definition of settlement.

SECT. 1.—Definition of a Settlement.

951. A settlement may be defined as any instrument or number of instruments whereby property, real or personal, is limited to or in trust for persons by way of succession, the object being the preservation and regulation of the enjoyment of the settled property between and by the persons or classes of persons nominated or intended by the settlor (a).

SECT. 2.—Duration of Settlements.

Duration of settlements.

952. The period during which such regulation may endure is limited by two rules: the first is that if land is limited to an unborn person during his life, a remainder cannot be limited to the children of such unborn person (b), whether the estates limited are legal or equitable (c); the second is that all estates and interests created by any settlement of real or personal property must vest indefeasibly in interest, but not necessarily in possession, within a life in being and twenty-one years after the determination of such life (d).

SECT. 3.—Subject-matter of Settlements.

Subject-matter of settlements.

953. Everything which can be a subject of private ownership may be settled by the owner (e). By reason of the differences in the

(a) Parliament has from time to time given definitions of the word "settlement" for the purpose of particular statutes, but there is no generally accepted legal definition of the word. For some definitions of settlement for the purposes of the particular statutes in which the definitions are contained, see Harbours and Passing Tolls, etc. Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 47), s. 2; Land Drainage Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 133), s. 6 (4); Settled Estates Act, 1877 (40 & 41 Vict. c. 18), s. 2; Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 2 (1); Bankruptcy Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 52), s. 47 (3); Finance Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. 30), s. 22 (1) (i.). The definition set out in the text is adopted from that used in the Settled Estates Act, 1877 (40 & 41 Vict. c. 18), s. 2, and the Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), ss. 1, 2 (1) (see, further, pp. 624, 675, post), so as to include property of any nature settled by instruments of any nature; see pp. 527 et seq. The present title deals with the law as it affects settlements whether created by deed or will; and, as to questions arising on the construction of wills, see title WILLS.

(c) Re Nash, Cook v. Frederick, [1910] 1 Ch. 1, C. A.

(d) See title PERPETUITIES, Vol. XXII., pp. 300 et seq. The enjoyment of a person who has a vested interest under a settlement cannot be postponed by a trust for accumulation exclusively for his benefit (Saunders v. Vautier (1841), Cr. & Ph. 240; Wharton v. Masterman, [1895] A. C. 186); and see title PERPETUITIES, Vol. XXII., pp. 327, 370.

(e) Limited interests cannot be given in consumable chattels; see titles GIFTS, Vol. XV., p. 408; PERSONAL PROPERTY, Vol. XXII., p. 414. It is, however, possible, though for obvious reasons it is not often done, to direct that a tenant for life shall be entitled to the enjoyment of only a limited amount, e.g., of a cellar of wine in each year, and that the residue, if any, at his death, shall be distributed among the remaindermen. As to the settlement of a patent medicine for which there was no written recipe, see Green v. Church (1823), 1 L. J. (O. S.) (CH.) 203.

law of England with reference to real and personal property, settlements are sometimes divided, according to their subject-matter, into settlements of realty and settlements of personalty, but both realty and personalty may be settled by the same deed. Realty may also be settled by conveying it to trustees on trust for sale, the ordinary trusts contained in personal settlements being declared of the proceeds, while money is sometimes settled on trust to purchase lands to be settled to the proposed uses (f). In these cases, by virtue of the equitable doctrine of conversion (g), the land or money while remaining unconverted is regarded as money or land respectively.

SECT. 3.
Subject-matter of Settlements.
Realty and personalty.

Part II.—Creation of Settlements.

SECT. 1.—By Act of Parliament.

954. Settlements are sometimes created by either public or private Act of Parliament (h). In the first case they are created for the purpose of rewarding eminent public services by grants of land (i), and the Acts creating them are passed through Parliament in the same manner and with the same formalities as other public Bills (k).

By Act of Parliament.

In the second case the Act creating the settlement is known as an estate Bill, being one of the class of personal Bills which are introduced in the first instance in the House of Lords (l).

Estate Bill.

Recourse was had to these private Acts in cases where the estate was entangled by a multitude of contingent remainders, resulting trusts, springing uses, executory devises and the like, so that it might be out of the power of the courts of justice to relieve the owner; where the tenant of the estate lacked some reasonable power and recourse to the courts would not supply the deficiency; or where it was necessary, in settling an estate, to secure it against the claims of infants or other persons under legal disabilities who were not bound by any judgments or decrees of the ordinary courts of justice (m). Such Acts are, however, regarded as private conveyances rather than the solemn acts of the legislature, and they may be relieved against if obtained upon fraudulent suggestions (n).

(h) The power of the Sovereign to make grants of Crown lands to subjects was abolished by the Crown Lands Act, 1702 (1 Anne, c. 1), s. 5, except in cases of grants or restitution of forfeited estates or of estates seized upon outlawry or executions by the Crown (ibid., s. 8).

(i) E.g., in the cases of the Duke of Marlborough, the Duke of Wellington, and Lord Nelson. It may be observed that the entails made by such Acts are indestructible; see stat. (1704) 3 & 4 Anne, c. 4, s. 1; stat. (1814) 54 Geo. 3, c. 161, s. 28; stat. (1813) 53 Geo. 3, c. 134, s. 1; and see titles GIFTS, Vol. XV., p. 408; REAL PROPERTY AND CHATTELS REAL, Vol. XXIV., p. 261.

By Will.

SECT. 2.—By Will.

By will.

955. Settlements by private individuals may be made by will as well as by deed (o). A different rule of construction may be applied to the particular instrument creating the settlement according as it is a deed or a will, and different formalities are required for the execution of a will from those required for the execution of a deed (p).

SECT. 3.—By Deed or Deeds.

By deed or deeds.

956. A settlement may be created by a deed poll, but more commonly it is created by an indenture to which the intending settlor, the intended trustees of the settlement, and sometimes, and generally in the case of a marriage settlement, some of the beneficiaries, are parties. The settlement may be created by more than one deed, as where an assurance is effected by one deed and the trusts of the assured property are declared by another (g).

Execution.

The settlement must be executed by the settlor (r), and it is generally expedient that it should be executed by the trustees.

Recitals.

957. A settlement, if made in contemplation of marriage, usually recites the agreement to marry, the title of the property to be settled, and the agreement to settle. If there is any discrepancy between the recitals and the operative part, then, in accordance with the general rule affecting the construction of written instruments, the recitals do not control the operative part when it is

Parliament has been diminished by recent legislation, e.g., the Settled Estates Act, 1877 (40 & 41 Vict. c. 18); the Settled Land Acts, 1882 to 1890 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38; 47 & 48 Vict. c. 18; 50 & 51 Vict. c. 30; 52 & 53 Vict. c. 36; 53 & 54 Vict. c. 69), but several private Acts of this description are still passed every year.

(o) For the purpose of this title, it may be taken that there is no distinction at law between a settlement created by deed and one created by will. As to the distinction between settlements by deed of personal chattels and settlements thereof by will, see titles PERSONAL PROPERTY, Vol. XXII., pp. 413, 415; WILLS.

(p) As to the form of settlements by deed and as to their construction, see the text, infra; pp. 532, 533, post. As to the construction of wills and the formalities relating to their execution, see title WILLS. For various precedents of settlements by will, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XV., pp. 403 et seq.

(q) As to settlements compounded of several deeds, see pp. 670 et seq., post.

(r) Non-execution by some of the contracting parties does not necessarily prevent a settlement from binding those parties who execute the deed (M'Neill v. Cahill (1820), 2 Bli. 228, H. L.); see title DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS, Vol. X., pp. 400, 402; and, as to the formalities of execution, see ibid., pp. 382 et seq. Execution by a beneficiary is, as a rule, only important if the beneficiary is contracting to do something in consideration of the gift. Formerly, if property of the wife was settled, it was important that the intending husband should execute the deed to prevent the possibility of his impugning it as a fraud on his marital rights. This is of less consequence having regard to the Married Women's Property Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 75), but it is usual for both the intending spouses to execute a marriage settlement although the property settled may belong to one of them only.

clear (s), though they may be used to explain it (t). A recital in a settlement may amount to a covenant if it is plain upon the construction of the whole deed that it was so intended (a).

958. Freehold lands which are the subject of the settlement may be limited by the settlor to the use of the beneficiaries for successive legal estates according to the intention, or may be conveyed by him to trustees upon trusts in favour of the beneficiaries (b). No technical words of conveyance are required, and as a rule the settlor is expressed to convey the lands "as settlor." This expression by virtue of statute (c) implies a covenant for further assurance (d) by the person so conveying with the person, if only one, to whom the conveyance is made, or with the persons jointly to whom the conveyance is made as joint tenants, or with each of the persons to whom the conveyance is made as tenants in common (e). Proper words of limitation must, of course, be employed (e). What was formerly known as the "all estate" clause is now usually omitted in reliance on the statutory provision that every conveyance of property made after the 31st December, 1881, passes all the estate, right, title, interest, claim, and demand which the conveying parties have, or

In the case of marriage settlements, the settled property is generally conveyed to trustees upon trust for the settlor till the solemnisation of the marriage, and afterwards upon the trusts declared by the settlement. A marriage which is declared null and void is never "solemnised" (Re Garnett, Richardson v. Greenep (1905), 74 L. J. (CH.) 570; see Mitford v. Reynolds (1848), 16 Sim. 130); and see title HUSBAND AND WIFE, Vol. XVI., p. 572.

(c) See Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 41), s. 7 (1) (E); and see title SALE OF LAND, pp. 426 et seq., ante.

(e) Where realty was conveyed to the trustees of a settlement without proper words of limitation, they took only an estate for their joint lives and the life of the survivor, and the reversion was left in the settlor (Re Hudson, Kühne v. Hudson (1895), 72 L. T. 892; Re Irwin, Irwin v. Parkes, [1904] 2 Ch. 752); and see, further, Chism v. Lipsett, [1905] 1 I. R. 60, C. A.; titles EQUITY, Vol. XIII., pp. 94, note (s), 95, note (c); REAL PROPERTY AND CHATTELS REAL, Vol. XXIV., pp. 165, 166, and the cases there cited. have power to convey, in the property (f). The habendum in a settlement does not differ from that in any other assurance dealing with a similar subject (g).

959. Copyholds are generally settled by a covenant to surrender them to the trustees to be held by them upon the trusts declared by the settlement, and leaseholds by an assignment to the trustees upon the trusts of the settlement (h). If freeholds are included in the settlement, the trusts of copyholds or leaseholds are generally declared by reference to the uses declared of the freeholds (i). If the leaseholds contain onerous covenants, they may be brought into the settlement by sub-demise to the trustees (k).

960. If land is settled upon trust for sale, it is generally conveyed to the trustees upon trust to sell and to hold the proceeds of sale, and the rents and profits of the land till sale, upon the trusts declared by an indenture of even date (l). Such a trust for sale, if absolute (m), creates in equity an immediate conversion of the land into personalty, notwithstanding that the consent of a beneficiary may be required during his life (n).

If money secured by a mortgage is settled, the mortgage should be transferred to the trustees by one deed and the trusts declared by another to avoid the inconvenience that would otherwise arise of having to produce and acknowledge the right to production of the deed containing the trusts, on the sale or redemption of the mortgaged property (o). For similar reasons, if a portion charged on land is settled, it should be assigned to the trustees of the settlement by a separate deed (p).

961. If the settled property consists of stocks or funds, which pass by transfer in the books of the Bank of England (q), the settlement should recite that such transfer has been or is proposed to be made, as the case may be. A similar recital should be inserted

962. A fund or share of a fund of personalty to which the settlor is entitled, either under or in default of appointment, in the estate of a testator or intestate is settled by assigning to the trustees the settlor's interest, which should be described with precision, since settlements of an interest in a fund derived under a will by survivorship or otherwise have been held not to include a share in the fund coming to the settlor as next of kin of another beneficiary under the will, and shares taken under appointments do not pass under settlements which deal with shares in the same property taken in default of appointment (t).

A reversionary interest is brought into settlement by being assigned to the trustees of the settlement, who should perfect their title, as in the case of other choses in action, by giving notice in writing of the assignment to the trustees of the instrument under which the reversionary interest is derived (u). The principle on which the court acts in discouraging dealing by expectant heirs with their reversionary interests has no application to the case of a settlement by an expectant heir (a).

963. If a debt is the subject of the settlement, it should be assigned to the trustees by the settlement. Such an assignment, coupled with notice thereof to the debtor in writing, vests in the trustees the legal right to the debt and the remedies therefor, with power to give a good discharge (b).

964. Policies of insurance, generally on the life of an intending husband (c), are frequently made the subjects of settlements (d). The settlement may either declare the trusts of moneys to arise from a policy which is taken out by the trustees in their own names (e), or the settlor may take out the policy in his own name and assign it by the settlement upon the trusts therein declared to the trustees, who should give notice in writing of such assignment to the insurance company (f). An assignment of a policy generally carries with it any bonuses that may accrue (g), though the settlor may be entitled to exercise any option that is given him by the rules of the company to apply the bonuses in reduction of premiums or receive them in cash (h). Where bonuses are excluded from the settlement, the trustees who receive them are not allowed to retain them, as against the personal representatives of the settlor, to make good a misappropriation of trust funds by him (i).

Appropriate
covenants.

The settlement should contain covenants with the trustees by the person whose life is assured not to avoid the policy, to pay premiums, to effect a substituted policy if necessary, and not to prejudice the trustees' rights to the policy moneys. If the covenant be merely to keep up the policy, there is no right of action against the covenantor's estate on the forfeiture of the policy by reason of a breach of the stipulations therein contained (k).

Failure to effect a substituted policy has been held to make the covenantor liable in damages to the trustees, though his life had in fact become uninsurable (l). Should the covenantor become bankrupt, his contingent future liability to pay premiums is a debt that may be proved in his bankruptcy (m). It is desirable always to give the trustees power to surrender the policy for a fully paid up one of a smaller amount.

effect to the intention of the parties as it appears in the settlement (o), even if it is impossible to adhere to the natural or ordinary meaning of the actual words used (p), and the court also, if necessary, substitutes a special meaning for the ordinary or the technical meaning of the words used (q), but clear and definite expressions are not overridden by ambiguous phrases (r). In short, such a construction is given to the settlement as supports the general intent, though a particular expression may be inconsistent with it (s).

SECT. 4.
Construction of Settlements by Deed.

Part III.—Contracts for Settlements.

SECT. 1.—Parol Agreements and the Statute of Frauds.

966. Contracts for settlements may be made in any circumstances in which settlements may be made. In practice, however, they are generally contracts made in consideration of marriage. Such contracts must be evidenced by a memorandum or note thereof in writing signed by the party to be charged or by some party lawfully authorised by him to sign (a). It follows that an agreement to make a settlement, when made before marriage by parol only (b), or only evidenced by an unsigned memorandum (c), Contracts for settlements must be in writing.

R. 765; and see title DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS, Vol. X., pp. 433, 434; Re Hammersly's Estate (1861), 11 L. Ch. R. 229, where words of limitation in fee were rejected. As to the effect of recitals on construction, see Doran v. Ross (1789), 1 Ves. 57; title DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS, Vol. X., pp. 459 et seq.

(p) Thus "or" has been construed to mean "and" (White v. Supple (1842), 2 Dr. & War. 471; but see Malmesbury (Earl) v. Malmesbury (Countess), Phillipson v. Turner (1862), 31 Beav. 407; Re Lund's Settlement, Stanfield v. Keene (1903), 89 L. T. 606; Re Coley, Gibson v. Gibson, [1901] 1 Ch. 40), and clerical errors have been corrected (Re Alexander's Settlement, Jennings v. Alexander, [1910] 2 Ch. 225); see also titles DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS, Vol. X., p. 454; WILLS.

(q) Thus the word "sole" in a marriage settlement may find its appropriate meaning in its being a provision to give the wife the sole and absolute disposition of her property (Massy v. Rowen (1869), L. R. 4 H. L. 288, 297).

(r) Dill v. Haddington (Earl) (1841), 8 Cl. & Fin. 168, H. L.; see title DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS, Vol. X., p. 439; and compare *Green v. (a) Statute of Frauds (29 Car. 2, c. 3), s. 4; see title CONTRACT, Vol. VII., pp. 361, 364. There is, of course, no reference here to mutual promises to marry. A deposit or collateral security for the performance of a written agreement to settle property is not within the purview of the statute (Hales v. Van Berchem (1708), 2 Vern. 617).

is not enforceable (d), whether such agreement is made by one of the parties to the intending marriage (e) or by a third person (f). An agreement for a settlement made by parol before marriage may, however, be sufficiently evidenced by a memorandum in writing made after the marriage so as to be enforced against a party to the agreement and any person identified in interest with him (g).

The Statute of Frauds (h) cannot be pleaded to bar the proof of a parol contract before marriage to settle land in cases where there has been part performance of such contract by the delivery of possession of the land in question after the marriage (i); but that in neither of these cases was there any completed agreement; see Welford v. Beazely (1747), 3 Atk. 503. Cokes v. Mascall (1688), 2 Vern. 34, 200, and Halfpenny v. Ballet (1700), 2 Vern. 373, cannot now be relied on as authorities.

(d) An executor cannot retain a debt due to himself from his testator on an oral contract made in consideration of marriage (Re Rownson, Field v. White (1885), 29 Ch. D. 358, C. A.). An actual transfer of money, however, to trustees by the intending husband and wife before marriage on trusts agreed on by them in parol is good, whether there is or is not any subsequent declaration of trust in writing (Cooper v. Wormald (1859), 27 Beav. 266).

M. & G. 571, 575, C. A.; Hammersley v. De Biel (Baron) (1845), 12 Cl. & Fin. 45, H. L. This question has given rise to a considerable discussion, but the cases of Spurgeon v. Collier (1758), 1 Eden, 55; Randall v. Morgan (1805), 12 Ves. 67; Battersbee v. Farrington (1818), 1 Swan. 106; Lassence v. Tierney (1849), 1 Mac. & G. 551; Warden v. Jones (1857), 2 De G. & J. 76; Trowell v. Shenton (1878), 8 Ch. D. 318, C. A., were all discussed and distinguished in Re Holland, Gregg v. Holland, supra, which lays down the law as stated in the text. Letters (Hodgson v. Hutchenson, supra), an affidavit made in legal proceedings (Barkworth v. Young, supra), and a recital in a post-nuptial settlement (Dundas v. Dutens, supra; Re Holland, Gregg v. Holland, supra) have been held to be a sufficient memorandum within the statute. A post-nuptial settlement, however, which does not refer to an ante-nuptial parol contract, is not a memorandum of such contract, nor does it take the case out of the statute on the ground of part performance (Warden v. Jones (1857), 23 Beav. 487, affirmed 2 De G. & J. 76; see Re Holland, Gregg v. Holland, supra, at p. 388; Trowell v. Shenton, supra). A recital in a post-nuptial settlement of an ante-nuptial contract may be disproved by evidence (Hogarth v. Phillips (1858), 4 Drew. 360).

The doctrine of part performance appears to have been applied to parol contracts to settle personalty only in Williams v. Williams (1868), 37 L. J. (CH.) 854, where STUART, V.-C., followed the opinion expressed in De Biel (Baron) v. Thomson (1841), 12 Cl. & Fin. 61, n., per Lord COTTENHAM, L.C.; see also *Re Gulliver, Stroughill v. D. 419, C. A. It may be observed that the doctrine of part performance appears to be founded on two distinct lines of reasoning, the first, which is only applicable to land, being that possession by a stranger is such marriage subsequent to and in reliance on a parol contract to settle is not part performance of the contract so as to exclude the operation of the Statute of Frauds (k).

A person who makes a misrepresentation of fact (l), and thereby induces a marriage, is not allowed, in accordance with the principle of estoppel by representation (m), to deny its truth (n). This principle is not affected by the Statute of Frauds (o).

SECT. 2.—Informal Contracts.

967. An offer to make a settlement in the event of a marriage taking place may, by a marriage following on such offer, become a contract binding on all parties concerned (p).

Informal
contract.

No formal document is required to enable such a contract to be enforced (q), but it must comply with the following conditions:—

(1) There must be a sufficient memorandum or note in writing to satisfy the Statute of Frauds (r) in cases to which that statute applies.

Requisites for cogent evidence that there was some contract as to compel the court to admit evidence of the terms of the contract in order that justice may be done between the parties (Ungley v. Ungley (1877), 5 Ch. D. 887, 890, C. A.). The other principle is that, if one of two contracting parties has been induced or allowed by the other to alter his position on the faith of the contract, it would be fraudulent to allow him to set up the statute against the party whom he has induced to alter his position (Caton v. Caton (1866), 1 Ch. App. 137, 148; see title EQUITY, Vol. XIII., p. 75), and this principle extends to any contract as to which, if in writing, a court of equity would order specific performance; see McManus v. Cook (1887), 35 Ch. D. 681, 697. For the doctrine of part performance generally, see titles CONTRACT, Vol. VII., pp. 379 et seq.; SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.

The doctrine does not apply where a solemn deed has been executed from which alone the intention of the parties can be gathered (Monypenny v. Monypenny (1858), 4 K. & J. 174, reversed as to the legal construction of the deed (1859), 3 De G. & J. 572; and see Kirwan v. Burchell (1859), 10 I. Ch. R. 63). While it is not necessary that the party making the representation should know that it was false (Jorden v. Money, supra, at p. 212), there must be something in the nature of a warranty of the truth of the representation, and an innocent mistake common to all parties does not inflict upon the erring person any liability (Merevether v. Shaw (1789), 2 Cox, Eq. Cas. 124; Ainslie v. Medlycott (1803), 9 Ves. 13; Evans v. Wyatt (1862), 31 Beav. 217).

Gilmore* (1873), 8 I. R. Eq. 290); "If your daughter has or may have money, my wish and intention would be that it should be so settled for her sole and separate use" (Alt v. Alt (1862), 4 Giff. 84); "Some years ago I made my will, by which I left all my property to . . . trustees . . . upon trust to . . . pay the interest to my daughter during her life, independent of any husband with whom she might intermarry, and the principal to be divided as she by her will might ultimately dispose of. It has been my intention in the event of the marriage taking place to make a similar will in accordance with the facts of the case, and of course I should settle my property . . . on my daughter absolutely and independent of her husband, or in other words in strict settlement . . . I will take care that my property . . . shall be properly secured upon her and her children after my death" (Coverdale v. Eastwood (1872), L. R. 15 Eq. 121); "Mr. J. P. T. also intends to leave a further sum of £10,000 in his will to Miss T. to be settled on her and her children, the disposition of which supposing she has no children will be prescribed by the will of her father. These are the bases of the arrangement, subject of course to revision, but they will be sufficient for Baron B. to act upon" (Hammersley v. De Biel (Baron) (1845), 12 Cl. & Fin. 45, H. L.); see also Luders v. Anstey, supra; Saunders v. Cramer, supra; Walford v. Gray (1865), 11 Jur. (N. S.) 106, 473; Shadwell v. Shadwell (1860), 9 C. B. (N. S.) 159; Synge v. Fickus, [1900] 1 Ch. 331); "She is and shall be noticed in my will, but to what further amount I cannot say" (Moorhouse v. Colvin (1851), 15 Beav. 341); "My will has been made for some time, and I am confident that I shall never alter it to your disadvantage. I have mentioned before, and I again repeat, that my county of T. estate will come to you at my death, unless some unforeseen occurrence should take place" (Mawnsell v. Hedges and White

SECT. 2.
Informal Contracts.

(3) There must be perfect or reasonable certainty as to the amount and nature of the property to which the contract applies (u), but parol evidence is admissible to explain ambiguities (a).

(4) It must be proved that the marriage took place on the faith of the offer (b); it necessarily follows that the offer must be communicated to the person seeking to enforce it (c).

968. A contract so created may be enforced if a marriage takes place on the faith of the offer, whether the offer has been made by one of the parties to the marriage to the other (d) or made by a third party to either of them (e).

Parties' between whom enforceable.

Such a contract has been enforced after the death of the contracting party against his estate (f). A promise to give a portion to a daughter has been enforced after her death in favour of her husband who had taken out administration to her estate (g).

969. There is a presumption, which may, however, be rebutted by sufficient evidence (h), that a completed settlement contains the entire marriage contract, and representations or promises made by correspondence prior to the settlement which are not carried out thereby are not enforced (i).

SECT. 3.

Articles.

Definition of "marriage articles."

SECT. 3.—Articles.

SUB-SECT. 1.—Definition.

970. Articles are clauses of a document, and hence the word "articles" sometimes means the document itself (j). The term "marriage articles" commonly means a contract in consideration of marriage to settle property on terms intended to be embodied subsequently in a formal marriage settlement (k).

SUB-SECT. 2.—Construction of Articles.

Trusts created by articles.

971. The trusts created by articles are, in most instances, in the nature of executory trusts (l). A court of equity, therefore, directs a settlement in accordance with the intention of the parties rather than the technical meaning attached to the words used (m), and, if necessary, inserts words in order to give effect to such intention (n). The legal construction of an executed settlement is not, however, affected by proof that the settlement is not such as the court would have directed in accordance with the articles (o).

Exclusion of rule in Shelley's Case.

Settlements
of realty.

972. It is assumed in marriage articles from the nature of the case that the settlement shall not be liable to immediate destruction by the act of the settlor, so that articles to settle land on the first taker for life, with remainder to his heirs general or particular, are carried out by directing a conveyance in strict settlement, namely, to the first taker for life, remainder to the first and every other son

(j) Sweet's Law Dictionary, p. 63.

(k) For forms of marriage articles, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XIII., pp. 291, 407.

(l) See title REAL PROPERTY AND CHATELS REAL, Vol. XXIV., p. 227, note (e); and see ibid., pp. 231 et seq. Articles may so finally declare the intention of the parties that no future instrument is required to carry it out, the trusts being perfect on the articles as they stand (De Havilland v. De Saumarez, De Havilland v. Bingham (1865), 14 W. R. 119; compare Johnstone v. Mappin (1891), 60 L. J. (CH.) 241), but as a rule they are treated by the court as short notes to be developed afterwards at length according to the usual course of settlements (Blandford (Marchioness) v. Marlborough (Dowager Duchess) (1743), 2 Atk. 542, 545; Taggart v. Taggart (1803), 1 Sch. & Lef. 84; Bushell v. Bushell (1803), 1 Sch. & Lef. 90; see Randal v. Willis (1800), 5 Ves. 262, 275; Fegan v. Meegan, [1900] 2 I. R. 441).

(m) Webb v. Kelly (1825), 3 L. J. (O. S.) (CH.) 172; Sackville-West v. Holmesdale (Viscount) (1870), L. R. 4 H. L. 543. This latter case was one of a will, but there is no distinction between an executory trust in marriage articles and in a will except that the object and purpose of the former furnish an indication of intention which in the latter must appear in some manner on the face of the instrument (ibid.; Blackburn v. Stables (1814), 2 Ves. & B. 367). As to executory trusts contained in wills, see title WILLS.

(o) Doe d. Daniell v. Woodroffe (1842), 10 M. & W. 608. The proper remedy in such a case is the rectification of the settlement; see Roberts v. Kingsly (1749), 1 Ves. Sen. 238; title MISTAKE, Vol. XXI., p. 23. The court does not add to an agreement (Warrington (Earl) v. Langham (1699), Prec. Ch. 89). As to construction of settlements, see, further, pp. 532 et seq., ante.

in tail, and not by directing an estate tail to the first taker (p). This principle of construction is adopted against a subsequent mortgagee who has notice of the articles (q). If, however, the estate tail cannot be barred by the first taker alone, but the concurrence of both parents is required for the purpose, the deed of settlement follows the words of the articles (r).

On similar principles, where estates are directed to be settled to correspond with the uses of a peerage which is limited to each successive taker and his heirs male, the court directs that they shall go in strict settlement (s).

Articles that property should be conveyed to the use of the wife and the child or children of the intended marriage have been held to intend that the wife should take not a quasi-estate tail, but an estate for life, with remainder to her children (t).

Limitations in marriage articles in favour of the issue of the bodies of the husband and wife or of the issue of the marriage are carried out by directing a strict settlement giving estates tail to the sons, with remainders in tail to the daughters (a). If the issue are

The same construction has been adopted in the case of post-nuptial articles (Brennan v. Fitzmaurice (1839), 2 I. Eq. R. 113; Rochford v. Fitzmaurice (1842), 1 Con. & Law. 158). On the articles construed strictly the first taker would take the fee simple or in tail under the rule in Shelley's Case (1581), 1 Co. Ch. R. 24).

Scully* (1829), Beat. 370. "Issue male" of a marriage has been held not to include the son of a daughter (Lambert v. Peyton (1860), 8 H. L. Cas. 1). Where the articles direct an estate to go to the children by way of remainder, the children take as purchasers (Cordwell v. Mackrill (1766), Amb. 515); compare title REAL PROPERTY AND CHATELS REAL, Vol. XXIV., p. 226.

directed by the articles to take absolute interests, the children of the marriage (b) take as tenants in common and not as joint tenants (c), and the usual directions for vesting at twenty-one or marriage and survivorship and accruer clauses are inserted in the settlement (d).

No portion of any provision made by executory articles for a class merges in the residue by reason of the death of members of the class while any one member of the class remains, and such one member takes the whole provision made for the class (e).

Settlement of personalty

Usual form.

Application of principle.

973. Similar principles prevail where the articles are for the settlement of personality. So far as the articles expressly provide for the destination of the capital or income the court must follow them, but in construing them it has regard to what is recognised as the usual form of settlement. The usual mode of settling a wife's personality is to give her the first life interest for her separate use, then a life interest to the husband, then, subject to powers given to the husband and wife of appointing the fund among the issue of the marriage, the capital is given equally to such of the children as being sons attain twenty-one, or being daughters attain that age or marry, or else to the children equally, with gifts over in favour of the others, if any of them being sons die under twenty-one, or being daughters die under that age and unmarried; if there is no child who being a son attains twenty-one, or being a daughter attains twenty-one or marries, then, if the wife survives, the fund is limited to her, but, if she dies in her husband's lifetime, she has a general power of appointment over it, and in default of any exercise of that power it is given to her next of kin as if she had died intestate and without having married (f). In accordance with this principle, a life interest has been given to the wife in personality where articles stipulated that it should be settled on her, though there was a subsequent provision that the income should in all cases belong to the husband (g). A direction in a deed that a fund should be settled upon a woman and her issue has been carried out by settling the property on her for life for her separate use, without power of anticipation, and after her death for her issue as she should by deed or will appoint, with trusts for her

A direction in a will that a legacy shall be settled on the legatee, without reference to issue, gives the legatee an absolute interest (i).

SECT. 3.
Articles.

974. Where marriage articles provide for the settlement of leasehold property in the same manner as freehold estates so far as the rules of law permit, effect is given to the articles by declining to apply the limitations of the freehold estates to the leaseholds literally, so as to give a vested interest to the eldest son upon birth (k), and by inserting a clause that no person shall be entitled to the absolute property unless he attains the age of twenty-one years or dies under that age leaving issue male (l).

Articles for settlements of leaseholds.

975. A direction in a will that, on the marriage of the testator's daughter, certain property should be settled for her and her issue may authorise the insertion in a settlement made on the daughter's marriage of a power to appoint a life interest to her husband (m). Provision for an annuity by way of jointure to a widow may be authorised by a direction contained in a will that in the event of a son marrying his property should be put into strict settlement (n); but a husband has been entirely excluded from the benefit of a settlement made under a direction in a will that the testator's daughters' shares should be put in strict settlement (o).

Where articles provided that the wife, in the event, which happened, of her surviving her husband, should settle and hand over two-thirds of any property remaining at the time to her children, she was held entitled to one-third of the property of which her husband died possessed in her own right (*M'Donnell v. beneficial to all parties (p), such as powers of sale and exchange and reinvestment (q), leasing (r), cutting timber in due course of management (s), changing securities (t) and appointing new trustees (u). Powers of maintenance, education and advancement are also inserted (a). On the other hand, powers of jointuring and charging portions in favour of younger children are not inserted, unless expressly provided for by the articles (b), and a covenant to settle after-acquired property is not a usual clause (c).

Implied

A reference to specific powers has been held to exclude others (d). A power of appointment among the children of the intended marriage is inserted (e), but not if the executory articles contain directions for equal division among children (f).

Martin* (1860), 1 Drew. & Sm. 31, a case on a will, it was held that the testator had himself directed the terms of the settlement, and the court would not vary those terms.

(b) Bedford (Duke) v. Abercorn (Marquess) (1836), 1 My. & Cr. 312; Grier v. Grier (1872), L. R. 5 H. L. 688; see Higginson v. Barneby (1826), 2 Sim. & St. 516; and see title POWERS, Vol. XXIII., pp. 80, 82. Where, however, a will directed real estate devised to a son to be put in strict settlement on the son's marriage, the court directed provision to be made by way of jointure for the son's widow (Wright v. Wright, [1904] 1 L. R. 360). Where the articles were for a strict settlement, to contain a power to the father to charge £1,000 for younger children, it was said that it might well be contended that the court would insert a clause to charge the estate with £1,000 with power only to the father to apportion the shares (Savage v. Carroll (1810), 1 Ball & B. 265, 276). In an Irish case the court declined to insert a hotchpot clause in the absence in executory marriage articles of any expression of intention of the parties to introduce such a clause (Lees v. Lees (1871), 5 I. R. Eq. 549), but it is doubtful whether this case would now be followed.

SUB-SECT. 4.—*Covenants to Leave Property by Will.*SECT. 3.
Articles.

977. Articles on the marriage of a child sometimes contain a covenant by the parent to make some provision by his will for such child (g).

Covenant to provide for child.

978. If, having covenanted to settle by will a specific piece of property, the covenantor fails to fulfil his bargain, the covenantee is entitled to a conveyance of the property after the death of the covenantor against all who claim under the covenantor as volunteers (h), and, if the covenantor so disposes of the property in his lifetime as to make it impossible to fulfil his covenant, the covenantee has an immediate right to sue for damages (i). A covenant, however, to leave a child all or an aliquot share (k) of the parent's property at death does not interfere with the covenantor's power to dissipate the same in his lifetime (l), but he cannot defeat his covenant by any disposition that is testamentary, either in form or by its nature, for instance, by a gift of property reserving to himself a life estate (m), nor can he by will cut down the interest that he has covenanted to give (n).

(k) A covenant to bequeath a fourth part of whatsoever estate the covenantor should die possessed of means one fourth share in value and not in specie (Bell v. Clarke (1858), 25 Beav. 437), and a covenant to leave a daughter "her share" has been held to mean an equal share with the other children in the covenantor's residuary personal estate (Laver v. Fielder (1862), 32 Beav. 1; Duckett v. Gordon (1860), 11 I. Ch. R. 181); but a covenant to leave a share means only some share and may be satisfied by a legacy (Re Fickus, Farina v. Fickus, [1900] 1 Ch. 331). Where the covenant was to leave a daughter an equal share with the covenantor's other five daughters, it was satisfied by an absolute bequest of one sixth share of the covenantor's estate, the shares of the other five daughters being settled on them for life with remainders to their issue and gifts over to the other four in the event of any one dying without issue, and the covenantee was not entitled to claim any further provision in respect of the benefit derived by the four daughters from the share of the fifth daughter who died without issue (Olegg v. Olegg (1831), 2 Russ. & M. 570); and see Stephens v. Stephens (1886), 19 L. R. Ir. 190 (where advancements to other children were not taken into consideration). On the other hand, a gift of a life interest to one daughter is a portion to that daughter, and a covenantee is entitled to receive an equivalent in value under a covenant to give her an equal portion with her sister (Eardley v. Owen (1847), 10 Beav. 572). As to satisfaction generally, see title EQUIRY, Vol. XIII., pp. 128 et seq.; and see title WILLS.

979. A covenant to bequeath a specific sum constitutes a debt against the covenantor's estate (o), but a covenant to bequeath a share of the estate is satisfied by a bequest of a share of residue to the covenantee, who is then in the same position as any other legatee as regards debts and lapse (p).

980. A covenant to make a settlement either by deed or will is satisfied if the provisions are carried out by will (q).

If the covenant is to make provision for children or grandchildren by deed or will, only those who are living at the death of the covenantor are entitled to the benefit of the covenant (r).

The wife's claim under a covenant by her husband in marriage articles to leave the wife, by deed or will, a sum of money at his death if she survives him is satisfied, in the event of his dying intestate, out of her share in his personal estate under the Statutes of Distribution (a). If, however, the husband is bound to carry out the covenant in his lifetime, then on his death intestate, without making the agreed provision, there is a clear breach of the covenant and the wife is entitled to the agreed sum in addition to her distributive share in the husband's personal estate (b); so also, if the covenant is to leave the wife an annuity, her distributive share is not a performance of the covenant either wholly or pro tanto (c).

981. If the covenant is to pay to the wife a certain sum after the husband's death, and the husband by his will leaves to the wife an equal or greater sum, the court has with some reluctance adhered to the rule that where there is a debt due from the testator to a third person, and the legacy given to such person is as much or more than the debt, then such legacy is a satisfaction of the debt (d). Each case, however, turns largely on the construction of the particular covenant and will, and the court has allowed the wife to take both the provision made for her by the articles and that made by the will on grounds of difference of value between the two provisions (e), or where the will has contained a direction to pay the testator's debts (f).

982. A covenant to settle land, the covenantor possessing no lands, or to purchase and settle lands, is satisfied wholly or pro tanto by the purchase of lands suitable for settlement, though no settlement is actually made (g), and, if the covenantor dies intestate as to those lands, they are treated as against his heir-at-law as being bound by the trusts of the settlement (h).

According to the old cases, if the settlement differed from the articles and both were made before marriage, the court would not rectify the settlement, unless it was expressed to be made in pursuance of the articles, on the ground that the parties had altered their intention. Now, however, the court rectifies a mistake, whether the settlement is ante-nuptial or post-nuptial, and no evidence of mistake beyond the articles is necessary; see title MISTAKE, Vol. XXI., p. 23. A recital of articles contained in a settlement is not, however, sufficient evidence (Mignan v. Parry (1862), 31 Beav. 211).

Specific performance.

Where no

984. The court will decree specific performance of a contract for which marriage was the consideration after the marriage has taken place (m), and after the death of the party primarily intended to be benefited thereby (n). It is no answer to an action to enforce articles that a third party has failed to perform his portion of the contract (o), or even that the person seeking to enforce them has himself failed to perform his part under them (p), but, if there is anything for him to do in which third parties are interested, the court takes care that he obtains no benefit until he has performed his part of the agreement (q).

Relief is not, however, given in equity if the agreement is one which could not be enforced at law by reason of its being dependent on a contingency which has not happened (a); and specific performance of marriage articles, as of other contracts, may be refused on the ground of ambiguity and uncertainty (b), or the right thereto may be lost by conduct amounting to laches (c).

The courts of equity have always supported marriage articles, and order specific performance thereof in preference to leaving the parties interested to sue in the names of the trustees for the recovery of damages (d). Where the only instrument is a bond given to secure an agreement to settle property on marriage, the bond is considered as articles of agreement for a settlement, and the obligor cannot elect to pay the penalty, but must specifically perform his contract (e). Specific performance may be ordered for the benefit and at the instance of the issue of the marriage (f).

Marriage without a settlement is not a waiver of articles for a settlement before marriage, and specific performance is decreed after the death of the husband (g), or in his lifetime if he fails to perform his agreement (h).

SECT. 4.—Covenants to Settle After-acquired Property.

SUB-SECT. 1.—In General.

Covenants to settle after-acquired property.

986. A provision that is commonly, though not universally (n), inserted in marriage (a) settlements is a covenant to settle property other than that which is the specific subject of the settlement (b). Such covenants may be so framed as to sweep in all property, both present and future (c), of one or both of the contracting parties, but as a rule they are confined to property to be acquired in the future by the wife during the coverture, or the husband in her right (d). Such a covenant is not a "usual covenant" (e), and ought not to be inserted without express instructions.

SUB-SECT. 2.—General Rules of Construction of Covenants to Settle After-acquired Property.

Construction
in general.

987. The instrument which contains the covenant is read as a whole, and the generality of the covenant may be cut down by reference to other parts of the instrument (f), or an ambiguity in where in very special circumstances specific performance had become impossible, see Barker v. Ivers (1724), 5 Bro. Parl. Cas. 127.

(n) Re Maddy's Estate, Maddy v. Maddy, [1901] 2 Ch. 820. In making settlements under the Infant Settlements Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 43), it is the invariable practice to insert a covenant to bind the infant's after-acquired property (Re Johnson, Moore v. Johnson, [1891] 3 Ch. 48); see title INFANTS AND CHILDREN, Vol. XVII., p. 103.

(a) If the settlement is post-nuptial, the covenant cannot be enforced either as an assignment or a declaration of trust (Wilkinson v. Wilkinson (1857), 4 Jur. (N. S.) 47).

(b) Such a covenant is not intended to settle such part of the property expressly included in the deed as is left to revert to the settlor, but to settle property which otherwise the deed would not affect at all (Re Wyatt, Gowan v. Wyatt (1889) 60 L. T. 920).

(c) A covenant to settle all present and future property of a wife binds property which is not referred to in the settlement (Caldwell v. Fellowes (1870), L. R. 9 Eq. 410).

(d) For forms of covenants, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XIII., pp. 421, 428, 481, 649. For a covenant by a husband to settle after-acquired property, see Re Turcan (1888), 40 Ch. D. 5, C. A. Such a covenant may reach property of any kind (Lewis v. Madocks (1810), 17 Ves. 48), either personalty (ibid.) or realty (Gubbins v. Gubbins (1825), 1 Dr. & Wal. 160, n.; *Prebble v. the covenant may be explained by the recitals (g). A covenant in clear terms, however, is not restricted by a recital (h).

988. Covenants to settle are contracts which must be performed in strict accordance with their terms (i), therefore general words are rejected, and a covenant to settle property derived from a particular source does not attach to property coming from another source or under another title (k).

If land is purchased out of the proceeds of personal property bound by a covenant of this kind, the land is charged with the money thus improperly invested (l).

(i.) Estates Tail.

989. The proper construction of a covenant to settle after-acquired property is that the property shall be conveyed for such estate and interest as is actually taken in it by the covenantor. If, therefore, the covenantor acquires an interest, such as an estate tail, which cannot be assured to the trustees of the settlement, the property in question is not caught by the covenant (m).

(ii.) Life Interests.

990. If the property does not fit the trusts of the settlement it may be assumed that it was not intended to come within the covenant, and in accordance with this principle the covenant has been held, in the absence of express words, not to attach to a life interest (n), nor to an annuity (o), nor to investments which represent savings of income which is not subject to the covenant (p). Property acquired by a wife under her husband's will has also been held to be outside the covenant (q), and so is a mere spes successionis or a contingent claim for damages which could not arise till after the husband's death (r), or a joint interest given to the husband and wife (s). The question, however, in each case must be whether, on the true construction of the covenant, a particular property falls within it or not (t).

(iii.) Property Acquired after the Termination of the Coverture.

Intention and extent of covenant.

991. The primary object of a covenant to settle the future property of a wife is to prevent it falling under the control of the husband, so that, in the absence of expressions showing a contrary intention, only property accruing to the wife during the intended coverture comes within its operation (a). This is so even though

While the bonus payable to the tenant for life on a sale under the Irish Land Act, 1903 (3 Edw. 7, c. 37), and the Irish Land Act, 1904 (4 Edw. 7, c. 34), is not an incident or by-product of the life estate, and is caught by the covenant (Tremayne v. Rashleigh, [1908] 1 Ch. 681), such a bonus is an estate or interest in settled land, and, if the terms of the covenant to settle after-acquired property do not cover interests in settled land, the bonus is not caught by the covenant (Re Annaly's (Lady) Trusts, Annaly (Lady) v. Bourke (1904), 92 L. T. 13; Re Power's Estate, [1907] 1 I. R. 51).

(q) Dickinson v. Dillwyn (1869), L. R. 8 Eq. 546; Carter v. Carter (1869), L. R. 8 Eq. 551. In two cases, where the construction of the covenant was somewhat doubtful, it was held not to attach to any gifts from the husband to the wife (Coles v. Coles, [1901] 1 Ch. 711; Kingan v. Matier, [1905] 1 I. R. 272), but this is not a rule of construction (Re Ellis's Settlement, Ellis v. Ellis, [1909] 1 Ch. 618; Re Plumtre's Marriage Settlement, *Underhill v. The fictitious survivorship created by the Wills Act, 1837 (7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 26), s. 33 (see title WILLS), does the covenant relates only to property coming from a specified source (b). On the same principle, a covenant to settle property to be acquired during the intended coverture does not attach to property the title to which has accrued after the making of a decree for judicial separation (c), or, perhaps, of a decree nisi for divorce (d). This reasoning does not, however, apply to covenants by the husband to settle property coming to him in right of his wife, and such property is bound even if acquired by him after the termination of the coverture (e).

not prolong the coverture so as to bring within the terms of the covenant property actually acquired after the termination of the coverture (Pearce v. Graham (1863), 9 Jur. (N. S.) 568; see Re Blundell, Blundell v. Blundell, [1906] 2 Ch. 222, 229).

Ellis*, supra, was an order of an Italian court, which did not have the effect that an order of the English Divorce Court has under the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1857 (20 & 21 Vict. c. 85), s. 25, of putting the wife in the position of a feme sole as regards property; and see title CONFLICT OF LAWS, Vol. VI., pp. 277—280.

(d) Re Pearson's Trusts (1872), 26 L. T. 393. In Sinclair v. Fell, [1913] 1 Ch. 155, however, WARRINGTON, J., held that funds coming to a wife after the decree nisi, but before the decree was made absolute, came to her “during the intended coverture,” and were caught by the covenant, on the ground that the cases of Norman v. Villars (1877), 2 Ex. D. 359, C. A., and Hulse v. Tavernor (1871), L. R. 2 P. & D. 259, decided that marriage continues during the interval between a decree nisi and a decree absolute, and that Re Pearson's Trusts, supra, must be considered as overruled. Re Pearson's Trusts, supra, was apparently decided in reliance on Prole v. Soady (1868), 3 Ch. App. 220; see title HUSBAND AND WIFE, Vol. XVI., pp. 334, 593. Prole v. Soady, supra, and Wilkinson v. Gibson (1867), L. R. 4 Eq. 162, decided that the right of a husband to deal with his wife's property ceases from the date of the decree nisi (Allcard v. Walker, [1896] 2 Ch. 369, 384). If this view is correct, the decision in Re Pearson's Trusts, supra, may be justified by the test applied in Davenport v. Marshall, supra, at p. 85, that is to say, on the footing that the intention is to exclude the husband, and, if no question arises of excluding him because he is already excluded owing to the decree nisi, the covenant is not intended to apply and is inoperative.

(e) Hughes v. Young (1863), 9 Jur. (N. S.) 376; Fisher v. Shirley (1889), 43 Ch. D. 290; see Prebble v. Boghurst (1818), 1 Swan. 309 (where a covenant to settle all lands of which the covenantor should at any time during his natural life become seised was given its natural meaning).

A similar rule applies where there is a gift of property on such trusts as the covenantor shall appoint, with a gift over in favour of the covenantor in default of appointment. In Re Gerard (Lord), Oliphant v. Gerard (1888), 58 L. T. 800, NORTH, J., held that the covenant did not attach, and that the power could, consequently, be so exercised as to defeat it. In Re O'Connell, Mawle v. Jagoe, [1903] 2 Ch. 574, KEKEWICH, J., relying on Steward v. Poppleton, [1877] W. N. 29, took the contrary view, but in Tremayne v. Rashleigh, [1908] 1 Ch. 681, EVE, J., followed Townshend v. Harrowby, supra, distinguishing Steward v. Poppleton, supra,

Reversionary

Existing

993. A covenant which binds the wife to settle all her present and future property binds reversionary interests or contingent reversionary interests, whether in real or personal estate, to which she is then entitled or which she acquires during coverture, notwithstanding that the reversion does not fall in or the contingency happen during the coverture (g). It similarly binds defeasible interests then possessed or acquired by her during coverture, provided that such interests eventually, either during or after the coverture, fall into possession (h). Even if there are technical difficulties in the way of getting a conveyance, such property is bound in the hands of everyone, including the heir-at-law or the legal personal representatives of the husband or wife, as the case may be (i).

Present interests, whether in possession or remainder, are not bound by a covenant to settle property to which the covenantee is to become entitled during the coverture (k). Nor does an interest in remainder or reversion in existence at the time of the marriage become subject to a covenant to settle future property merely by reason of a change in the interest, as, for example, if a contingent interest becomes vested during the coverture (l), but if such an interest, whether vested subject to a liability to be divested or contingent, falls into possession during the coverture, it is bound by the covenant (m).

Blockley* (1884), 49 L. T. 805. It is, however, in every case a question of the language of the particular instrument; see Graffey v. Humpage (1838), 1 Beav. 46; James v. Durant (1839), 2 Beav. 177; S. C., sub nom. James v. James, 9 L. J. (CH.) 85; Blythe v. Granville (1842), 13 Sim. 190; MacLurcan v. Lane, Melhuish v. MacLurcan (1858), 5 Jur. (N. In these cases covenants or agreements by the husband, or to which he was a party, to settle property to which the wife, or the husband in her right, during the intended coverture should become entitled, were held to include property to which the wife was entitled at the date of the covenant, the words of futurity being satisfied by the interest acquired by the husband immediately on marriage. To some extent at

amount is reached (a), nor in making the computation may there be taken into consideration the value of property which cannot be affected by the covenant at all (b), or to which the covenantor becomes entitled under the same instrument, but not at one and the same time (c). If property in excess of the specified amount is bequeathed upon such trusts as the covenantor shall appoint, with a gift over to a stranger in default of appointment, it is open to the covenantor to defeat the covenant by a series of appointments in his own favour, each of less than the specified amount (d). If, however, a covenantor has by his own act reduced below the specified amount a fund which would otherwise be bound, it is not withdrawn from the operation of the covenant (e).

In estimating whether the specified amount is reached, the beneficial receipt of the covenantor and not the amount of the gift must be considered (f). Where the interest is reversionary, the value is estimated not by its actual value as a reversion, but by the value it would have if in possession, though in fact it is not so (g). A reversionary interest which falls in after the termination of the coverture is not brought within the operation of the covenant because the sum then received exceeds the specified amount (h).

996. It is usual to except out of the operation of the covenant jewels and personal chattels, but this must be done by express words, as no such exception is implied (i).

An exception of property otherwise "settled" is sometimes inserted; in such a case all property given to the wife for her separate use is excluded (k). Even without such express exception the covenant does not attach to property given subject to an effectual restraint on anticipation, which is equivalent to a restraint on alienation (l). But, if the covenant, on its true construction, does attach to property subsequently acquired by the wife, the intention of the donor of the property that it shall not be bound cannot operate to exclude it (n).

future property which may devolve on the wife shall be brought into settlement binds—

SUB-SECT. 7.—General Words of Agreement.

What parties bound by the covenant.

999. Having regard to the different effects of a covenant by the husband alone and a covenant binding on both husband and wife, the question frequently arises on the construction of covenants to settle after-acquired property whether the covenant is the covenant of the husband alone or of both the husband and wife. If there is a joint covenant in express terms by both husband and wife, no difficulty can arise; but if there is a covenant in express terms by the husband alone, it is necessary to go further and consider by whom is the act to be done that is covenanted to be done. Whenever the covenant or agreement is simply and in terms the covenant or agreement of the husband, the husband alone is bound; but where the covenant in terms is not a mere exclusive covenant of the husband, but is an agreement between all the parties, which agreement, being under seal, is in point of fact a covenant by all the parties, then it is not merely limited to a covenant by the husband, but all parties who have entered into the agreement are bound to perform it (u).

agreement.

1000. In deciding whether the covenant is by the husband alone or by all parties to the settlement, if the covenant is prefaced by the words "it is hereby agreed and declared," these words operate to show that what is comprised in the clause of which these words are the commencement is what all parties intend and agree shall be done. They do not, however, by themselves amount to a covenant by all the agreeing parties, but the party who is to do the thing is the party who is alone bound to perform the agreement (a). If, therefore, the covenant is a covenant by the husband that he will settle or concur in settling, it is a covenant by him alone, notwithstanding that it is prefaced by words of general agreement (b).

settle his future property (c), or that property coming to the wife, or to him in her right, shall be settled, the agreement has been treated as an agreement of both parties (d). In the absence of words of general agreement, a covenant by the husband alone is his contract only (e), but joint and several covenants to settle by the husband and wife bind both parties (f). If, however, the wife is a party to and assents to the deed, then a covenant by the husband alone, even though it is not prefaced by words of general agreement, that he will settle the wife's property (g) or that the husband and wife shall settle the wife's property (h), or even that the wife's property shall be settled (i), has been held to amount to a covenant by the husband and wife and to bind her property.

In the case of settlements made on or after the 1st January, 1908, it seems that a covenant by the husband binds the wife's property if, being of full age, she executes the settlement or confirms it after attaining full age (k).

SUB-SECT. 8.—Effect of Married Women's Property Acts.

1002. A covenant by a wife to settle after-acquired property, being an agreement for a settlement respecting the property of a married woman, is not affected by the Married Women's Property Act, 1882 (l).

It was originally held that a covenant by the husband to settle after-acquired property, even though unaccompanied by any obligation binding the wife, attached to and bound as against the wife all property which but for the statute (m) would have come to the husband jure mariti (n). No settlement or agreement for a Part IV.—Capacity of Parties.

SECT. 1.—In General.

Capacity in general.

1003. In general, any person who can hold and dispose of property can make a settlement of property (r).

Aliens.

Real and personal property of every description may be taken, acquired, held, and disposed of by an alien in the same manner in all respects as by a natural-born British subject (s).

Bankrupts.

The property of any person who has been adjudicated bankrupt passes from him and vests in the trustee in his bankruptcy (t). It follows that he cannot make any disposition of his property by way of settlement, and any disposition, if made, can be impeached by the trustee (u).

(o) The date when the Married Women's Property Act, 1907 (7 Edw. 7, c. 18), came into operation. Before the 1st January, 1908, the general personal estate of a female infant was bound by a settlement made on her marriage (Simson v. Jones (1831), 2 Russ. & M. 365, 376). This rule was not altered by the passing of the Married Women's Property Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 75) (Stevens v. Trevor-Garrick, supra; Buckland v. Buckland, supra); and see title INFANTS AND CHILDREN, Vol. XVII., p. 102. In cases where the female infant's property was bound, subsequent repudiation by her did not affect the settlement (Stevens v. Trevor-Garrick, supra; Buckland v. Buckland, supra; compare Re Daniel's Trust (1853), 18 Beav. 309). The rule never applied to a wife's real property or to personalty given to her for her separate use (Simson v. Jones, supra). As to non-separate personal property of the wife, see title HUSBAND AND WIFE, Vol. XVI., pp. 325 et seq.

(u) See title BANKRUPTCY AND INSOLVENCY, Vol. II., p. 183, and the cases there cited.

A convict (a) is incapable of alienating or charging any property or of making any contract (b). This disability endures until the death of the convict or the completion of his sentence or until his pardon (c), but is suspended while he is lawfully at large under any licence (d). SECT. 1.

Convicts.

A settlement by a lunatic or idiot in consideration of marriage is good if the other party is not aware of the settlor's insanity (e). A voluntary settlement by a lunatic, or even a settlement for valuable consideration, if the other contracting party is aware of his insanity, is voidable and may be set aside (f). Lunatics.

A woman married on or after the 1st January, 1883, may dispose, by will or otherwise, of all her real and personal property, whenever acquired, as if she were a feme sole, and a woman married before that date may so dispose of all real and personal property her title to which accrued after that date (g). Married women.

SECT. 2.—Infants.

SUB-SECT. 1.—Settlements Subject to Confirmation.

1004. An infant, whether male or female, cannot, apart from statute, make a binding settlement or agreement for a settlement of his or her real estate (h), and a male infant never has been and a female infant is no longer bound by a settlement or agreement for a settlement of personal estate (i). If a settlement or agreement does not bind an infant, no validity is given to it by the consent of the parent or guardian or by the intervention of the court, apart from statute (k). Infants.

If the settlement or agreement is for the benefit of the infant, as it would probably be considered to be, it is not void but only voidable (l), and may be confirmed by the infant on attaining full age (m). The proposals for the settlement of the property, both of the infant and of the other party to the intended marriage, must also be submitted to the judge (l), who refers the matter to chambers (m).

1008. The court approves such terms of settlement as it authorises in the cases of its wards (n), that is to say, as a general rule, it gives its sanction to any arrangement which a prudent Seaton* (1888), 13 App. Cas. 61; and see p. 559, ante), nor does it remove the general incapacity of an infant to alienate his or her interest, so as to enable him or her to exercise during minority a disposing power conferred by the settlement (Re Armit's Trusts (1871), 5 I. R. Eq. 352). As to disentailing assurances, see title INFANTS AND CHILDREN, Vol. XVII., pp. 103, 104; compare Re Scott, Scott v. Hanbury, [1891] 1 Ch. 298.

father would approve of (o). In ordinary cases the husband would probably take the first life interest in his own property, and the wife the first life interest in hers for her separate use without power of anticipation (p): then would follow the usual trusts for the issue of the marriage (q). In default of issue, the husband's property is generally settled on him absolutely, and the property of the wife as she shall appoint by will, and in default of appointment on her absolutely should she survive her husband, otherwise on her statutory next of kin (r).

clauses.

The court has sanctioned the insertion of a covenant to settle after-acquired property of the infant (a), and habitually provides for the event of a second marriage (b). The court has also approved of a name and arms clause, but has declined to sanction a proviso that no person professing the Roman Catholic religion should take any interest under the settlement (c). The court has also declined to allow a limitation in favour of collaterals, or a benefit conferred on the guardian of the infant whose property is settled (d). As a rule, the court sanctions a fair range of investments (e).

For the exclusion of the husband where the marriage involves contempt of court, see title INFANTS AND CHILDREN, Vol. XVII., p. 149.

(p) The court generally introduces a restraint on anticipation, but various circumstances may exist which may induce the court not to adopt that course (Blackie v. Clark (1852), 15 Beav. 595, 607).

Part V.—Consideration for Settlements.

SECT. 1.—In General.

1010. Settlements may either be for valuable consideration or voluntary (g). In general, unless the consideration is plainly illusory (h), the court does not inquire into its adequacy (i), and treats the settlement as made for value (k).

SECT. 1.
In General.
Consideration for settlements.

SECT. 2.—Marriage.

1011. Marriage by itself, irrespective of any pecuniary benefit or consideration, constitutes a valuable consideration for a settlement (l). However, to make the consideration good, the marriage contemplated must be one which the parties are legally capable of contracting (m). If the contemplated marriage is one which cannot be legally contracted, the settlement is at best a voluntary settlement (n). In such a settlement trusts to take effect from and after the solemnisation of the marriage will fail in toto, marriage being construed to mean a legal and effectual marriage, and evidence of the knowledge and intention of the parties not being admissible to show that the words used mean something else (o). Moreover, if the domicile of the parties remains unchanged, it

The necessary concurrence of a husband and wife to a deed, or at least to the levying of a fine of lands in which they were jointly interested, upon which fine the operation of the deed depended, and the consent of each to the alterations made by the deed and fine, was a valuable consideration to support it in favour of the other (Parker v. Carter (1845), 4 Hare, 400, 409); and a wife’s equity to a settlement has supported a settlement made by her husband upon her (Fenner v. Taylor (1833), 2 L. J. (CH.) 99). makes no difference that the marriage is legal in the country in which it is celebrated (p).

If, however, a settlor who is particeps criminis makes an effectual and completed gift in favour of the other party, the courts will not assist him to set the deed aside merely on the ground of the illegality of his intentions, and his representatives are in no better position (q).

settlor (h); and they cannot enforce a contract for settlement against the settlor (i), though a completed trust in favour of volunteers cannot be set aside by a settlor (k).

1013. If the order of the limitations in a settlement is such that the limitations which are not within the marriage consideration are covered by those that are, so that those which are within the marriage consideration cannot take effect in the form and manner provided by the instrument without also giving effect to the others, then the marriage consideration extends to all the limitations (l).

It has also been held that in a settlement, in contemplation of marriage, of the estate of the husband or wife, he or she to whom the estate to be settled belongs, being the grantor of the estates created by the settlement, cannot be deemed to have thereby purchased any one of them, but the party to whom the estate does not belong may be regarded as having purchased by the marriage all those limitations of the estate for which he or she can be proved, or fairly inferred, to have stipulated, such as the limitations in favour of themselves, respectively, or their issue (m); and so with respect to limitations in favour of the collateral relations of the party to whom the estate does not belong, it may be presumed that such party stipulated, as part of the marriage bargain, for their Vernon* (1732), 1 Bro. Parl. Cas. 267, and Lechmere v. Carlisle (Earl) (1733), 3 P. But trustees with whom a contract is made are entitled to enforce a contract to create a trust contained in a marriage settlement for the benefit of the wife and the issue of the marriage (*Pullan v. (1584—5) 27 Eliz. c. 4, but the principle might be held to apply in other instances. In Cotton v. King (1726), 2 P. Wms. 358, and King v. Cotton (1732), 2 P. Wms. 674, the question appears to have been whether a second husband could set aside a voluntary settlement executed by his wife before the marriage in favour of the children of her first marriage, and it was held that he could not.

Clarendon (Earl)* (1852), 10 Hare, 126 (husband who settled his own property held not to be a purchaser in respect of an ultimate limitation to himself in fee); Re Browne's Estate (1863), 13 I. Ch. insertion in the settlement, and so may properly be regarded as having purchased them on behalf of those who are intended to be benefited thereby. But an intended wife cannot be inferred to have stipulated on behalf of the relations of the intended husband, nor the intended husband on behalf of the relations of the intended wife (n).

1014. If third parties, that is to say, persons other than the intended husband and wife, whose concurrence is necessary to give effect to the settlement, join as parties to it, their concurrence is sufficient to constitute a consideration for trusts in favour of other branches of the family or of strangers (o).

So, too, if one agrees with another to make a provision for a volunteer in consideration of the other doing the like, the contract is not voluntary (p), and, if it is enforced by either party, the volunteer gets the benefit of it (q), though the volunteer could not enforce it against either of the contracting parties, since they are at liberty either to vary or abandon their contract (r).

SECT. 4.—Separation.

Separation

1015. If a husband and wife agree to live apart and a deed is executed in pursuance of such agreement, and the parties live apart from the time of the execution of the deed, there is consideration for the deed, and neither party can be heard to say that it was not executed for value (s).

SECT. 5.—Resettlements.

Resettle-
ments.

(s) Re Weston, Davies v. Tagart, [1900] 2 Ch. 164; see Aldridge v. Aldridge (1888), 13 P. D. 210. The law as stated in the text seems to express correctly the modern view. The former view was that a separation deed was voluntary, unless there was some valuable consideration on both sides apart from the mere covenants and promises to live apart and not molest one another; as to this, see title HUSBAND AND WIFE, Vol. XVI., pp. 443, 444; and see title FRAUDULENT AND VOIDABLE CONVEYANCES, Vol. XV., pp. 82, 83. SECT. 6.—*Voluntary Settlements.*SUB-SECT. 1.—In General.

1017. If an effectual settlement is made by the settlor having done everything which, according to the nature of the property to be settled, is necessary to transfer the property and render the settlement binding upon him (b), the court decrees the performance of the trust thereby created, although the settlement is gratuitous and not for valuable consideration, but such a settlement may be set aside either at the instance of creditors (c), or by subsequent purchasers for value (d), or by the trustee in bankruptcy of the settlor (e).

Assuming, however, that a voluntary deed is unaffected by any statutory enactment and is complete, bonâ fide, and valid, there is no distinction between such a deed and one executed for valuable consideration. The estates and limitations created in such a deed have the same operation and effect as in a deed executed for value, and must be construed in the same manner, and it carries with it all the same incidents and rights attached to the property conveyed as are carried by a deed executed for value, the grantee in this respect standing exactly in the same situation as if he had paid value for the property conveyed (f).

SUB-SECT. 2.—Post-nuptial.

(g) See p. 534, ante. For forms for post-nuptial settlements, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XIII., pp. 607, 608. The settlement is only protected so far as it corresponds with the ante-nuptial articles (Jason v. Jervis (1685), 1 Vern. 284; Cormick v. Trapaud (1818), 6 Dow. 60, H. L.); see Hogarth v. Phillips (1858), 4 Drew. 360 (where a post-nuptial settlement contained a recital of an ante-nuptial agreement, but it was proved that none had been made). A settlement made after a marriage in Scotland does not become an ante-nuptial settlement by reason of the re-celebration of the marriage in England (Ex parte Hall (1812), 1 Ves. & B. 112).

a voluntary settlement (h). If, however, the settlement is the result of a bargain made after the marriage between husband and wife, each of them having interests, no matter how much, or of what degree, by which their respective interests are altered, then the post-nuptial settlement is not without valuable consideration (i).

An advance by a stranger to pay the settlor's debts is sufficient valuable consideration to support a post-nuptial settlement in favour of his wife and children (k).

To whom consideration extends.

Although a post-nuptial settlement may thus be made for valuable consideration as between husband and wife, the consideration does not extend to the children of the marriage, who are volunteers and cannot enforce the settlement, unless they are parties to it (l), or there is an executed trust in their favour (m).

SUB-SECT. 3.—Self-protective.

Protection of settlor.

1019. Settlements are sometimes made for the protection of the settlor himself (n). Such a settlement is liable to be impeached on any of the grounds on which any other voluntary settlement may be impeached (o). It may also be set aside at the instance of the settlor, and, in cases where it is executed shortly after the coming of age of the settlor, it is difficult to support it (p). If the settlor is competent to understand and does understand the deed, it will not be set aside merely because it contains provisions which are unusual, or which the court may think ought not to have been inserted (q); but those who induce the execution of the deed are bound to show either that the deed is in all respects proper, or, if it contains anything special or unusual, that the settlor understood and approved of it (r), and, if it should appear that the settlor did not understand, the settlement will be set aside (s). Where the settlor has understood the settlement, but his attention has not been called to the omission of any power of disposition in default of issue, the settlement may be rectified by the insertion of such a power (t). It is desirable, but not necessary, that a settlement of this nature should contain a power of revocation (a).

SECT. 6.
Voluntary Settlements.

SUB-SECT. 4.—In Favour of Objects of Settlor's Bounty.

1020. In cases where a voluntary settlement is made for the purpose of conferring a benefit on some person other than the settlor, the relation between the settlor and the object of his bounty may be of such a confidential character as to give rise to a presumption that the grant is the result of undue influence brought to bear by the grantee (b). If no such confidential relation exists, and the presumption does not arise, it is still incumbent on the person claiming under the settlement to show that the transaction was fair and proper and was understood by the settlor (c). Thus, where a settlement has been clearly improvident, as, for example, when the bulk of the settlor's property was settled so as to deprive him of all interest in (d) or all control over the management of (e) the settled property, it has been set aside.

Presumption of undue influence.

Burden of proof.

The absence of a power of revocation does not invalidate a voluntary settlement, but it is a circumstance to be taken into account, and is a circumstance of more or less weight according to the facts of the particular case (f).

revocation.

Part VI.—Beneficial Interests Arising under Settlements of Personalty.

SECT. 1.

SECT. 1.—Life Interests.

Life interests.

1021. In a marriage settlement of personalty the first life interest in the settled property is usually taken by the husband or wife according as he or she brings the property into settlement. If both bring property into settlement, each, as a rule, takes the first life interest in the property settled by or on behalf of him or her; and, after the death of either spouse, the survivor (g) is generally given a life interest in the entire fund (h).

Wife's interests.

The wife's life interest, whether in property brought into the settlement by herself or by her husband, is generally expressed to be for her separate use (i) subject to restraint on anticipation (k).

Protected life interests of husband.

1022. An owner of property cannot settle it so as to reserve to himself a life interest determinable on his bankruptcy (l), though he may settle his own property so as to prevent himself from alienating or charging his life interest therein (m). A person bringing property into settlement may settle it so as to give to any other person taking an interest under the settlement a life interest determinable on bankruptcy (n), and it is by no means unusual to give the husband such a protected life interest in the property brought into the settlement by his wife (o).

(g) A divorced woman survives her coverture (Re Crawford's Settlement, Cooke v. Gibson, [1905] 1 Ch. 11).

(h) See Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XIII., pp. 289 et seq. Receipt of income by trustees is not payment thereof to a beneficiary (Johnstone v. Lumb (1846), 15 Sim. 308).

(o) For a form, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XIII., p. 449. Where the husband took a life interest determinable on bankruptcy followed by a gift after his death on failure of issue of the marriage to the wife's next of kin, the husband's trustee in bankruptcy was held entitled to the income during the interval between the husband's bankruptcy and death (Upton v. Brown (1879), 12 Ch. D. 872; see Frank v. Mackay (1873), 7 I. R. Eq. 287). Where the trust was after the death of the wife to pay the income to the husband until he should become bankrupt or until his death, and after the decease of the survivor of the husband and wife the children of the marriage took absolutely, the husband having become bankrupt and survived the wife, the children were held entitled to the income between the death of the wife and the limitation.

Such a determinable interest is generally given by directing that the trustees shall hold the income in trust for the husband for life or until he shall do or attempt to do or suffer something whereby the same or part of the same would, if belonging absolutely to him, become forfeited to, vested in or payable to some person or persons other than himself (p). Such a clause, though future in terms, applies to a bankruptcy existing at the date of the settlement or at the time when the interest would, but for the bankruptcy, have fallen into possession (a). If the forfeiture is expressed to take effect on alienation only, a proceeding in invitum, such as the filing by a creditor of a bankruptcy petition, does not operate as a forfeiture (b). The filing by a debtor of a petition, which is not followed by adjudication, does not work a forfeiture of his life interest under a limitation “until he should do or suffer something whereby the income, if payable absolutely to him, would become vested in any other person” (c). The word “suffer” or any similar word, put in contradistinction to the word “do,” applies to a proceeding in death of the husband (Re Akeroyd's Settlement, Roberts v. Akeroyd, [1893] 3 Ch. 363, C. A.; compare O'Donoghue v. O'Donoghue, [1906] 1 I. R. 482). The gift over takes effect on bankruptcy in the lifetime of the wife (Re Akeroyd's Settlement, Roberts v. Akeroyd, supra; Re Muggeridge's Trusts (1860), John. 625).

(p) Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XIII., pp. 447, 460. A settlement on marriage of an interest determinable on alienation does not terminate such interest (Lockwood v. Sikes (1884), 51 L. T. 562; Re Selby, Church v. Tancred, [1903] 1 Ch. 715; but see Re Porter, Coulson v. Capper, [1892] 3 Ch. 481); but a covenant in a separation deed by a husband that the wife shall receive the income of the settled property is an equitable assignment of his interest so that a forfeiture occurs (Re Spearman, Spearman v. Lowndes (1900), 82 L. T. 302, C. A.). No forfeiture is committed by giving effect to a power of advancement contained in the settlement which confers the determinable life interest (Re Hodgson, Weston v. Hodgson, [1913] 1 Ch. 34). As to the construction of forfeiture clauses on alienation or bankruptcy under wills, see title WILLS.

(a) See title BANKRUPTCY AND INSOLVENCY, Vol. II., p. 148. Secus, if the bankruptcy is annulled in the interval between the time when the title to the fund accrues to the bankrupt and the time when it would have become payable to him but for the bankruptcy (ibid.). The object of construing words which grammatically refer only to the future as including the past is to give effect to the intention manifested, and past charges are not therefore made a ground of forfeiture in the face of a recital in the settlement that charges had been created (West v. Williams, [1899] 1 Ch. 132, C. A.).

(b) Lear v. Leggett (1830), 1 Russ. & M. 690; Pym v. Lockyer (1841), 12 Sim. 394. The fact that the income is expressed to be given to the husband and his assigns during his life does not bring an involuntary alienation within the clause (Re Kelly's Settlement, West v. Turner (1888), 59 L. T. 494), but a charging order obtained by a creditor terminates an interest limited until the execution of some assignment or act whereby the interest might be incumbered (Montefiore v. Behrens (1865), L. R. 1 Eq. 171). On the other hand, a gift over, if the beneficiary should be precluded from personal enjoyment by any legal disability, takes effect only on a personal disability being imposed by the law in invitum, such as bankruptcy or conviction for felony, not on a disability voluntarily created, such as an alienation or charge (Re Carew, Carew v. Carew, [1896] 2 Ch. 311, C. A.).

(c) Re Moon, Ex parte Daves (1886), 17 Q. B. D. 275, C. A.; compare Re Weibking, Ex parte Ward, [1902] 1 K. B. 713 (where it was held that the words “become bankrupt” meant “be adjudicated a bankrupt”); but see Re Walker, Ex parte Gould (1884), 13 Q. B. D. 454; Re Amherst's Trusts (1872), L. R. 13 Eq. 464.

invitum (d), and includes the case of a charging order obtained by a creditor against the trust fund (e), or the termination of the life interest after divorce under an order of the Divorce Court (f). The word "forfeited" in a gift over in case the settled property should be "forfeited to or become vested in any other person" means liable to be taken away, not merely actually taken away (g). A trust until insolvency means until the beneficiary is unable to pay his debts (h).

Life interests
by implication.

1023. A settlement on a husband and wife during their joint and natural lives has been held to mean during their joint lives and the natural lives of each of them (i).

Where there has been a trust of income for the separate use of the wife, with a gift over in the event of her dying in her husband's lifetime, the wife has been held to take a life interest by implication (k).

In some cases, on the construction of the particular instrument, trusts for the benefit of a parent and children have been held to confer only a life interest on the parent (l).

Limitations conferring absolute interests.

1024. A settlement of personal property on a person for life, with remainder to his or her executors and administrators, gives the donee of the life interest the property absolutely, the limitation to executors and administrators being the same as to personal property as a limitation to heirs as to real estate (m), and this is so notwithstanding the interposition between the life interest and the ultimate remainder of a power of appointment by the donee of the life interest by deed or will (n), or by will only (o). There is, however, a difference between a limitation to executors and administrators and a limitation to next of kin, and where property was settled on a wife for life, and then as she should appoint by will, and in default of appointment for her next of kin, it was held that she took only a life interest with a power of appointment by will (p).

SECT. 1.
Life Interests.

SECT. 2.—Powers of Appointment.

1025. As a rule, in personalty settlements the settled fund is held by the trustees after the death of the survivor of the husband and wife upon trust for the children or more remote issue of the marriage in such shares and for such interests as the husband and wife by deed, revocable or irrevocable, jointly appoint, and in default of such appointment as the survivor by deed, revocable or irrevocable, or by will or codicil, shall appoint (q). The extension of this power to the more remote issue of the marriage was rendered necessary by the inconvenience of a limitation to children of the marriage only, which prevented parents from providing for their grandchildren (a), so that the issue of a child predeceasing the parent might be left unprovided for, it being impossible to appoint either to the issue or to the personal representatives of the deceased child (b). The donee of the power must be careful in exercising it to select only such objects of the power as are within the limits prescribed by the rule against perpetuities (c).

Powers of appointment and revocation.

If the appointment under such a power is made by will and the appointee dies in the lifetime of the donee of the power, the appointed share lapses and goes as unappointed among the surviving objects of the power (d).

Death of appointee during life of donee.

1026. The power is usually expressed to be to appoint to one or more exclusively of the others or other of the children or issue, although every power is now primâ facie exclusive (e).

Usual form.

A power to appoint to children at such ages as the donee of the power shall appoint authorises an appointment to a child en ventre sa mère at the date of the appointment (f), and such a child can take by virtue of an appointment made under a power to appoint to issue born before the date of appointment (g).

Maintenance, advancement.

The donee is generally authorised to make provision for the maintenance, education, and advancement of the objects of the power. The statutory powers as to maintenance(h) are available as to interests taken by infants under a power of appointment, but the donee of the power can only make provision for advancement under express authority for the purpose. A power of appointment by will given to a husband and wife is not well exercised by an appointment made during the joint lives by the will of the actual survivor(i).

SECT. 3.—Hotchpot Clause.

The hotchpot clause.

1027. What is called a hotchpot clause(k) precludes appointees of a share of the fund from participating in the unappointed fund without treating the appointed shares as received in or towards satisfaction of the shares to which they would be entitled if the whole fund were to go in default of appointment(l).

If the power of appointment extends to issue more remote than children, the hotchpot clause should be expressly made to apply to such issue(m).

Application.

1028. The hotchpot clause applies to appointments of life or reversionary interests which must be valued for the purpose in the best way possible; and, if the parties cannot agree, there must be an inquiry at chambers to determine such value(n).

The ordinary hotchpot clause in settlements does not apply to advancements(o).

clause applies only to the fund settled by the deed containing it (p); and where a settlement declared express trusts of one fund, with a hotchpot clause referring to that fund, the hotchpot clause was held not to be incorporated with reference to a second and distinct fund by a general reference to the trusts, powers, provisoes, and agreements expressed in reference to the former fund (q). A settlement, however, may in the absence of express words contain a plain indication of intention that the hotchpot clause shall apply to all funds thereby settled (r).

SECT. 3.
Hotchpot Clause.

1030. If a will contains a hotchpot clause, advances to children made by a testator during his lifetime or by the trustees of his will after his death, but before the actual distribution, must be brought into account (s). The clause only applies as between children, and cannot be used to enlarge the share of a beneficiary who is not a child (t).

SECT. 4.—Trusts in Default of Appointment.

1031. In default of and subject to any appointment the settled property is generally, in settlements made on marriage, directed to go to all the children or any the child of the marriage (u) who being sons or a son shall attain the age of twenty-one years, or being daughters or a daughter shall attain that age or marry under that age, and if more than one in equal shares (a). (u) An ultimate trust for children of the intended husband has been held to include children by a subsequent marriage, notwithstanding a limitation to him in default of children of the then intended marriage (Isaac v. Hughes, Same v. Same (1870), L. R. 9 Eq. 191); and a trust for children to be born of the marriage includes children in existence at the date of the settlement (Slingsby v. — (1718), 10 Mod. Rep. 398; Hewet v. Ireland (1718), 1 P. Wms. 426); and see Cook v. Cook (1706), 2 Vern. 545.

(a) See Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XIII., p. 427. Where no provision was made for children, but the settled property was to go as the survivor of the husband and wife should appoint, it was held that they were able to put an end to the settlement by a joint appointment (Macarmick v. Buller (1787), 1 Cox, Eq. Cas. 357). If limitations or trusts giving a vested interest at birth are employed, they are accompanied by a kind of shifting clause, which is called an accruer clause. By this clause, on the death of a child under twenty-one, and, if a daughter, without being married, his or her share devolves on the other children or child. In construing a clause of this nature there is no distinction between a deed and a will (Re Friend's Settlement, Cole v. Alcott, [1906] 1 Ch. 47);

the shares of children makes the attainment of the age of twenty-one or marriage (as to daughters) the decisive test as to whether the children shall take or not (b). The rule of convenience which has been established in the case of wills (c) that, where there is a provision for members of a class contingently on their attaining twenty-one simply, so soon as any child would, if the class were not susceptible of increase, be entitled to call for payment, the class shall become incapable of increase, applies also to settlements, at any rate if made by voluntary deed (d), though by reason of the previous life estate in the parent it is not as a rule called into play in a marriage settlement.

A trust in a marriage settlement in favour of children at any later age than twenty-one is void for remoteness (e).

Marriage

1032. The provision for daughters is sometimes made dependent on their marrying with the consent of their parents, or of the trustees of the settlement (f). In such a case, if the consent required is that of a class of persons who, without the fault or default of the beneficiary, have ceased to exist and cannot be brought into existence, as in the case of the consent of the parents being required and one or both being dead at the time of the marriage, the consent may be dispensed with (g); but the consent is not dispensed with on the ground that the class of persons whose consent is required is not actually in existence at the time of marriage, if such a class could have been brought into existence, as where the consent required is that of trustees or guardians (h).

A direction that the shares of daughters shall be settled is inserted only to provide for the daughters' children, if any, and if any daughter has no children the object for cutting down her interest is gone, and she takes absolutely (i).

and see Cole v. Sewell (1848), 2 H. L. Cas. 186, 236. The court construes "survivors" as "others" if there is a sufficient context to enable this to be done (Re Friend's Settlement, Cole v. Alcott, [1906] 1 Ch. 47; Re Palmer's Settlement Trusts (1875), L. R. 19 Eq. 320), though otherwise the words must bear their grammatical meaning (Cole v. Sewell, supra); see title WILLS. Survivorship has also been referred to the period of vesting (Re Acott's Settlement (1859), 28 L. J. (CH.) 383), and of distribution (Reid v. Reid (1862), 30 Beav. 388). R. 406); see title PERPETUITIES, Vol. XXII., p. 338. A reference to marriage without more has been held to mean marriage during minority (Lang v. Pugh (1842), 1 Y. & C. Ch. Cas. 718).

(f) Such a condition is enforceable if it is accompanied by a gift over on marriage without the required consent (Re Whiting's Settlement, Whiting v. De Rutzen, [1905] 1 Ch. 96, C. A.); and see titles GIFTS, Vol. XV., p. 423; WILLS.

1033. As in the case of portions (k), so in the case of provision for issue, the rule is that if the settlement clearly and unequivocally throughout all its provisions makes the right of a child depend upon its surviving both its parents, the court has no authority to control that disposition (l); if, however, the settlement is in any of its provisions ambiguously expressed, so as to leave it in any degree uncertain whether it was intended that the right of a child should depend upon the event of its surviving both its parents, then the court is bound by authority to declare, upon what may be called the presumed intention in instruments of this nature, that the interest of a child, though not to take effect in possession until after the death of both parents, did, upon the limitations in the settlement, vest in sons at twenty-one and in daughters at twenty-one or marriage (m).

Vesting.

1034. Where trusts are declared in favour of the issue of a marriage the question frequently arises whether the meaning of the word is confined to children of the marriage, or whether and to what extent it includes grandchildren. The word "issue" occurring in a deed and in a will (n) prima facie includes all descendants, and must be construed in its largest sense (o). If, however, issue are pointed out as persons to take with reference to the share of the parent a gift which, so far as regards the parent, fails, they take on the principle which may be called the quasi-representative principle; that is to say, the children of each parent whose share fails take that parent's

Ir. 345; compare Bree v. Perfect (1844), 1 Coll. 128. The doctrine of the court is to accelerate, if possible, the period of vesting unless there is something in the document to show an intention to postpone enjoyment until the happening of some event personal to the parties interested themselves (Darley v. Perceval, [1900] 1 I. R. 129); and see title WILLS.

(n) With regard to wills the court always looks at the intention of the testator, and adopts in practice, if not in theory, a more benignant rule of construction than in the case of an executed settlement, which it always takes as it finds it (Re Warren's Trusts (1884), 26 Ch. D. 208, 217). For cases under wills where the word "issue" has been restricted to children, see Re Hopkins' Trusts (1878), 9 Ch. D. 131; title WILLS. The word has also been restricted to children in marriage articles, which are treated only as a memorandum of instruction (Swift v. Swift (1836), 8 Sim. 168; Thompson v. Simpson (1841), 1 Dr. & War. 459; Campbell v. Sandys (1803), 1 Sch. & Lef. 281).

share, but grandchildren are not admitted to take in competition with children (p).

There may also be such a context in a deed as to limit the word "issue" to children (q).

A substitutional gift in favour of the issue of a named parent, in the event of such parent dying in the settlor's lifetime, does not fail by reason of the parent being dead at the date of the settlement (a).

1035. When a settlement, by which the property is given to a class, contains no gift over in default of appointment, but gives a power to appoint in what shares and in what manner the members of that class shall take, the property vests, until the power is exercised, in all the members of the class, and they all take in default of appointment; but, if the instrument does not contain a gift of the property to any class, but only a power to give it among the members of the class as the donee of the power may think fit, those only can take in default of appointment who might have taken under the exercise of the power. In the latter case the court may imply an intention to give the property in default of appointment to those only to whom the donee of the power might give it (b). It follows that, in the former case, the representatives of a member of the class who dies in the lifetime of the donee of the power are entitled to participate in the property, even if the power of appointment is only testamentary (c). In the latter case, the representatives are entitled to participate if the power is one which the donee could have exercised in his lifetime (d), but not if the power is purely testamentary (e).

No trust was implied in favour of issue where a settlement of the personal estate of a female infant, executed on her marriage, gave an interest to the issue in the event of the husband surviving the wife, but made no provision for the contrary event, which happened (f); nor where there was a gift over in default of 1036. Primâ facie any general description of descendants, or a class of descendants, such as “child,” “son,” or “issue,” means legitimate descendants (h). There is, however, no objection to provision being made by deed (i) for illegitimate children born at the date of the settlement (k), provided that they are sufficiently identified as the personæ designatæ (l); but a provision by deed for future illegitimate children is void as being contrary to public policy (m), and it makes no difference whether such provision is made by the father or by the mother (n).

1037. A settlor may of course declare any ultimate trusts of a fund settled by him, but as a rule the aim of the trusts in default of issue contained in a settlement is to return the settled property to the destination it would have had if no settlement had been made (o).

The wife's fund is generally settled on such trusts as the wife shall by will or codicil appoint, and in default of and subject to any such appointment, if the wife shall survive the husband, in trust for the wife for her separate use (b), but so that during coverture she shall not have power to alienate the interest thereby given her otherwise than by testamentary appointment (c), but if the husband shall survive the (o) Trusts in default of issue may arise on the dissolution of a marriage, there being no issue of the marriage (Bond v. Taylor (1861), 2 John. & H. 473). A gift over on the death of issue under age was held to take effect on there being no issue of the marriage (Osborn v. Bellman (1860), 2 Giff 593).

(a) See Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XIII., p. 417.

(b) It has been held that a trust for such children of a future marriage as the wife, if she survives her husband, shall by will appoint does not interfere with her right to the trust funds under an absolute trust for her if she survives her husband and there is no issue of the intended marriage (Hanson v. Cooke and Hanson (1825), 4 L. J. (O. S.) (CH.) 45).

wife, then in trust for such person or persons as under the Statute of Distribution (d) would have become entitled thereto at the death of the wife, if she had died a spinster absolutely entitled thereto intestate and domiciled in England, and if there should be more than one as tenants in common in the shares in which they would have taken under the same Statute (e).

Failure to give an absolute interest to a married woman in the event of her surviving her husband, so that the next of kin acquire an indefeasible interest, has been held a ground for rectification upon the unsupported testimony of the wife that her intention was only to protect the settled property during coverture (f).

1038. If the settlement gives the wife only a life interest with a power of appointment by will, and there is a trust for the next of kin in the event of her husband surviving her, the trust for the next of kin cannot be revoked or defeated by the wife during her life (g).

If the wife survives her husband, she takes an absolute interest in personalty settled upon trust for her for life, and in default of appointment by will in trust for her executors and administrators (h); while if she predeceases her husband and dies intestate, the property passes to her administrator, who may be the husband (i), and not to her next of kin to the exclusion of her husband (k).

A limitation to the executors of a living person after the deaths of two other persons does not fail by reason of the deaths of such last-mentioned persons in the lifetime of the first (Horseman v. Malkin, supra). In Smith v. Dudley (1838), 9 Sim. 125, a trust of the wife's property for the executors or administrators of the wife's own family was held to be a gift to her next of kin, but in the same case a trust of the husband's property for his executors

A trust for the next of kin of the wife, without more, is not a trust for the next of kin according to the Statute of Distribution (m), but a trust for her nearest blood relations, so that brothers and sisters take to the exclusion of the children of deceased brothers and sisters (n). If, however, there is a reference to the Statute, either express or implied (o), those persons take who would have taken under the Statute had the wife died intestate (p).

1040. If the trust for next of kin contains any reference, express or implied, to the Statute of Distribution (m), the next of kin take as tenants in common (q), but in the absence of such a reference the usual rule in construing deeds applies, and they take as joint tenants (r). The description of next of kin of the wife can in no way apply to the husband, who cannot take under any such gift or limitation (s); nor (t) is he a person entitled under the Statute of Distribution (m). Similarly a wife is not next of kin to her husband (u). The trust being generally for persons who would be entitled under the Statute of Distribution (a) if the wife had survived her husband and had then died intestate, in cases where the wife predeceases her husband the question has frequently arisen whether the class is to be ascertained at the death of the wife or at the death of the husband. As a general rule, when a trust is created in favour of persons who take under the Statute of Distribution (b), and the only hypothesis stated is the death of some person intestate possessed of the personal property settled by the instruments creating the trust, the persons who take are the persons determined by the Statute and ascertained at the time, that is to say, at the death of the person in question (c). The trust, however, may be so worded as to show that the class of persons to be ascertained is not to be ascertained when the death did happen, but at some other time, as if the death had happened at such other time (d). The question in each case is a question of grammatical construction, and the authorities are not easy to reconcile, but on the whole the balance of judicial opinion in construing trusts for the persons who would be next of kin of a wife if she survived her husband has been in favour of ascertaining the class at the death of the husband (e).

(e) Thus in Pinder v. Pinder (1860), 28 Beav. 44, where the trust was after the decease of the husband and failure of issue for the persons who would then be entitled to the personal estate of the wife in case she had survived her husband and died possessed of the same intestate, ROMILLY, M.R., was of opinion that the only fair way of reading the words was as if they ran "to the persons who would be entitled to the personal estate of the wife, in case she had survived her husband, and had then died intestate, possessed of the same estate," and that the class to take was the class of persons who would have taken if the wife had died at a time other than that at which she did die, that is, the day after her husband's death. In Chalmers v. North (1860), 28 Beav. 175, where the trust was for such persons as at the decease of the wife would under the Statute have been entitled to her personal estate, as her next of kin, in case she had survived her husband and had afterwards died intestate, the same judge came to the same conclusion. In Druitt v. Seaward, Re Ainsworth, Ainsworth v. Seaward (1885), 31 Ch. D. 234, where the ultimate trust under a will was for the persons who under the Statute would have been entitled thereto in case the testator's daughter having survived her husband had then died possessed thereof and intestate, PEARSON, J., held that the next of kin living at the wife's death were entitled, and expressed disapproval of the reasoning in Chalmers v. North, supra. In Re Bradley, Brown v. Cottrell (1888), 58 L. T. 631, where the trust was for the persons who under the Statute would, on the decease of the wife, have been entitled if she had survived her husband and had then died possessed thereof and intestate, STIRLING, J., followed *Druitt v. 1041. If the trust is for the statutory next of kin of the wife if she had died intestate and “without having been married” or “without ever having been married,” it has now been settled, after some conflict of judicial opinion, that the words should receive their ordinary and natural meaning, which would exclude issue of the wife, whether issue of the intended marriage who fail to attain a vested interest (f), or issue by a former (g) or subsequent marriage (h). There may, however, be a context (i) or special circumstances in connexion with the particular settlement that may lead to the conclusion that it cannot have been the intention to exclude children of the wife (k). If the words used are as if she had died intestate and “unmarried,” the word “unmarried,” in the absence of any context, is taken to bear its primary meaning of “never having been married” (l). “Unmarried” is, however, a word of flexible meaning, and may be construed according to the obvious intention the Statute would then be entitled in case the wife having survived her husband were to die possessed thereof and intestate, KAY, J., declined to follow Druitt v. Seaward, Re Ainsworth, Ainsworth v. Seaward (1885), 31 Ch. D. 234, and Re Bradley, Brown v. Cottrell (1888), 58 L. T. 631, and held that the persons to take were those who would have been the wife’s next of kin if she had died intestate immediately after her husband. In Re Peirson’s Settlement, Cayley v. De Wend (1903), 88 L. T. 794, where the trust was for the persons who under the Statute would be entitled in case the wife having survived her husband had died possessed of the trust funds, BYRNE, J., followed Pinder v. Pinder (1860), 28 Beav. 44. Pinder v. Pinder, supra, has thus been followed for more than fifty years, and it seems probable that, should the question be raised in the Court of Appeal, Druitt v. Seaward, Re Ainsworth, Ainsworth v. Seaward, supra, and Re Bradley, Brown v. Cottrell, supra, will be overruled.

(f) Re Deane’s Trusts, [1900] 1 I. R. 332; Re Brydone’s Settlement, Cobb v. Blackburne, [1903] 2 Ch. 84, C. A.; Re Smith’s Settlement, Wilkins v. Smith, [1903] 1 Ch. 373. The two last-mentioned cases, following the decision of JESSEL, M.R., in Emmins v. Bradford, Johnson v. Emmins (1880), 13 Ch. D. 493, negative the view which was taken in several cases (Re Ball’s Trust (1879), 11 Ch. D. 270; Upton v. Brown (1879), 12 Ch. D. 872; Re Arden’s Settlement, [1890] W. N. 204; Stoddart v. Saville, [1894] 1 Ch. 480; Re Mare, Mare v. Howey, [1902] 2 Ch. 112), that a general rule was laid down in Wilson v. Atkinson (1864), 4 De G. J. & Sm. 455, C. A., that such words of limitation were introduced merely to exclude the husband of the wife, and not to exclude any persons who might be her descendants.

(i) As in Wilson v. Atkinson, supra (where the trust was followed by a declaration that an illegitimate daughter should for the purposes of the trust be deemed to be a lawful child of the wife, the settlement containing no express provision for children or issue).

(k) Such as the absence of any provision for the children or issue of the marriage (Re Ball’s Trust, supra; Stoddart v. Saville, supra; Re Arden’s Settlement, supra; Re Forbes, Errington v. Sempell, [1899] W. N. 6). It may be said, and doubtless was the case, that these cases proceeded on the rule supposed to have been laid down in Wilson v. Atkinson, supra; but in Re Deane’s Trusts, supra, at p. 335, these cases are cited as examples of cases in which the absence of a context may in the particular instrument lead to the same result as the context led to in Wilson v. Atkinson, supra.

of the persons using the word (m). Accordingly, where the effect of giving the word its primary meaning would be to favour collaterals at the expense of lineals, the court has interpreted it as meaning "not having a husband living at her death," thus admitting issue (n) and excluding an aftertaken husband (o).

A trust for the wife's next of kin on the death or remarriage of the husband, who took an interest for life or till remarriage if he survived his wife, takes effect on the cesser of the prior interests, and the marriage having been terminated by divorce, the next of kin took on the death of the wife in the lifetime of her husband (p).

Trusts for the representatives, or personal representatives, or legal personal representatives of a person have the same meaning and effect as trusts for the executors or administrators (r), unless sufficiently strong grounds can be found in the particular instrument for holding that the words are not used in their primary signification, but mean the next of kin (s).

Part VII.—Beneficial Interests Arising under Settlements of Realty.

SECT. 1.—Pin Money.

SECT. 1.

Pin Money.

Pin money.

Secured on real estate.

Payable out of personal estate.

1043. Pin money is an allowance made by a husband to his wife for her separate personal expenses (t). This allowance is generally secured by the limitation to the trustees during the joint lives of the husband and wife of a yearly rentcharge secured on the real estate of the husband in trust for the separate and inalienable use of the wife (u). Such a rentcharge accrues from day to day, and no provision for its apportionment is required (v). As a rule, the statutory means of compelling payment (w) are relied on, and no express provisions for that purpose are inserted in the settlement. It is usual to protect the trustees by providing that they shall only be bound to perform their trust at the express request of the wife (x). If the pin money is to be paid out of the husband's personalty, the trustees are directed out of the income thereof to be received by them to pay to the wife a yearly sum during the joint lives of the husband and wife for her separate use without power of anticipation (a).

SECT. 2.—Jointure.

1044. A jointure is primâ facie a provision for a wife after the death of her husband (b). Jointure.

Such provision is made out of the lands of the husband, and is usually declared to be in lieu of dower and freebench (c). It is generally created by limiting to the use of the wife, if she shall survive her husband, a yearly rentcharge without power of anticipation during the then intended coverture (d). How secured.

Jointure. The rentcharge need not be made apportionable (e), and, except in cases where the jointure is created under a power contained in an instrument executed before 1882 (f), the statutory means of recovering it may be relied on (g).
Recovery.

SECT. 3.—Annuities.

- Annuities. 1045. If it is desired that a certain income may be secured to a person out of the rents and profits of land for life, or some other period, it is usual to limit the land to trustees to the use that the proposed annuitant shall receive a yearly rentcharge of the proposed amount (h).
Duration. The limitation should state the period during which the rentcharge is payable, but it is plain that in the case of a rentcharge arising out of land (i) the grant determines with the life of the grantee, unless the rentcharge is limited to him and his heirs (j).
Recovery. It is no longer usual to insert express provisions as to the recovery of rentcharges, reliance being placed on the remedies afforded by statute (k).

SECT. 4.—Estates for Life.

- Estates for life. 1046. In settlements of realty the first life interest is usually given to the settlor, whether husband or wife, though sometimes where the wife is settlor the first life estate is given to the husband (l).
Waste. Such life estate is generally expressed to be without impeachment of waste, so as to enable the tenant for life for the time being

(i) In the case of an annuity arising out of personal estate, a gift of an annuity simply is a gift for life only, but the words used may cause the gift to be construed in a more extended sense (Blewitt v. Roberts (1841), Cr. & Ph. 274; Kerr v. Middlesex Hospital (1852), 2 De G. M. & G. 576; Dawson v. Robinson (1871), 25 L. T. 486). Estates for Life.

SECT. 5.—Portions.

SUB-SECT. 1.—In General.

1047. Portions for children are generally understood to be sums of money secured to them out of property springing from or settled upon their parents (n). Such sums of money are commonly secured by limiting the settled lands to trustees for a long term upon trust by mortgage, or sale thereof, or otherwise, to raise sums for the younger children of the marriage. The portions are directed to be held in trust for such children on their attaining twenty-one, or, if females, marrying under that age, in such shares and proportions as the husband and wife may jointly appoint by deed, and subject thereto as the survivor may by deed or will appoint, and in default of any such appointment for the qualified children in equal shares (o). Nature and general terms.

SUB-SECT. 2.—What Children are Portionists.

1048. The object of the portions term being to make provision for the children other than the one who takes the settled estate, questions have frequently arisen as to who are the portionists when the position of the children has been changed, as, for instance, by the death of the firstborn son. Where the trusts of the term have been for the younger children, or the children other than an eldest son (p), or the children other than a son or sons who should by means of the settlement become entitled to the first estate of freehold or inheritance, it has been decided that the questions who is an eldest son and who are younger children ought primâ facie to be decided at the time of the distribution of the portions fund (q), and in General rule as to meaning of "eldest son."

(m) Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XIII., pp. 296, 308, 356, 360. As to waste and the rights of a tenant for life generally, see pp. 600 et seq., post; and see titles EQUITY, Vol. XIII., p. 90; REAL PROPERTY AND CHATTELS REAL, Vol. XXIV., pp. 167, 175, 176.

(n) Jones v. Maggs (1852), 9 Hare, 605. Portions charged by a father under a power contained in a settlement made by himself and a son take priority over any estate given to the son, unless a contrary intention is expressed or implied in the settlement (Mills v. Mills (1846), 3 Jo. & Lat. 242). As to powers of charging portions generally, see title POWERS, Vol. XXIII., pp. 82 et seq.

(o) See Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XIII., pp. 297, 311. Where the ultimate trust of the sum raised was that it should go as part of the personal estate of the settlor, the sum, having been raised, was held to devolve as personalty, notwithstanding that when it was raised the settlor could not be compelled to pay it and that the estate charged with it might not have been well discharged (Tucker v. Loveridge (1858), 2 De G. & J. 650 C. A.). As to ademption of legacies by portions, see titles EQUITY, Vol. XIII., p. 128; WILLS.

(p) If the portions are provided for children "other than an eldest or only son," daughters take portions as being others than an eldest or only son, but a provision for children "besides an eldest or only son" requires the existence of a son to bring it into operation (Walcott v. Bloomfield (1843), 4 Dr. & War. 211; Simpson v. Frew (1856), 5 I. Ch. R. 517; Re Flemyng's Trusts (1885), 15 L. R. Ir. 363; L'Estrange v. Winniett, [1911] 1 I. R. 62).

SECT. 5.
Portions.

construing the words "eldest son" the court is not bound to say that "eldest son" is the person who originally answered that description, as being the firstborn son, but that it really means the person who may have become, in the events that have happened, an eldest son, and who as such eldest son comes into actual enjoyment of the bulk of the estate (r); and a daughter taking the estate has been treated as an eldest son (s).

Exclusion of rule.

The vesting of a portion by appointment or otherwise does not exclude this rule (t); but a payment when made in accordance with the terms of the settlement, or, where the period of distribution has been accelerated by the release of the prior life estate, upon the eldest son actually succeeding, is final and irrevocable (a), and the application of the rule may be excluded by the terms of the settlement (b).

1049. If the firstborn son joins with his father in resettling the estate, a younger son who actually comes into possession of the estate by virtue, not of the limitations of the original settlement, but of the subsequent dealings, is entitled to his portion as a younger son (c); so, also, where a settlement contained a power of revocation and reappointment to new uses, a younger son, to whom the estate was appointed, was held not to have taken any estate under the settlement in such a sense that he should be deemed an eldest son (d). test being that no child who takes the bulk of the estate shall take any benefit from the portions, the Court of Chancery has further held that, if under a settlement the firstborn child does not take the family estate, but it goes to a younger brother, the elder born is not to be regarded as the elder son, but the younger brother who is in possession of the family estate is to be regarded as the elder, and the actual elder brother as the younger in order to introduce him as a younger brother into the benefit of the portions provided for the younger children (e).

The fact that the persons to take or be excluded are designated by name may or may not make a difference, according as the view is taken, on the construction of the particular instrument, that the named individual is intended, or that the named person is included or excluded as fulfilling a certain qualification (f).

SUB-SECT. 3.—Amount of Portions.

1051. The amount to be raised for portions is commonly made to vary with the number of children to be provided for (g), and questions have arisen, in cases where the number of portionists has been reduced before the period of distribution, whether the amount to be raised depends upon the original number of children or the number who actually take. The answer to this question is a matter of construction of each particular settlement. It may, however, be said that if the court finds upon the construction of a settlement that the intention of the parties was that, subject to the provisions therein, the whole of the settled property should be settled for the benefit of an eldest or only son, nothing can be taken from him but according to the intent of those provisions. Consequently, in the case, for instance, of an eldest and only son, another child having died at an immature age, the court is justified in saying that the trusts do not come into operation at all, because the money is not payable to anybody except to the legal personal representative of the deceased child (h). On the other hand, when the trusts are

D. 363); and an eldest son who, by virtue of his ownership of the estate itself and the right which he had concurrently with his father to charge the inheritance, has charged the inheritance with a sum equal to, or more than the amount of, his just share of the fund provided for the younger children, cannot claim to be a younger son and share again, taking a double portion of the fund (*Collingwood v. certain, and the amount to be raised is certain, and the events have happened on the occurrence of which the trusts are expressed to come into operation, then the whole amount is raised for the benefit of the surviving portionist (i). A portion which has once become vested is not divested by the death of the portionist before the period of distribution (k). The court, in order to give effect to the intention, which is presumed in the case of a marriage settlement, to make provision for every child of the marriage who requires it, may construe the instrument as regulating the provision according to the number of children attaining vested interests, and not according to the number of children born, though to do so may be a departure from the strict grammatical construction (l).

SUB-SECT. 4.—Time for Raising Portions.

The raising of portions.

1052. Questions have frequently arisen as to the time when portions are to be raised, especially in cases where the portion vests in the lifetime of a parent, but is directed to be raised by means of a term to commence after the death of the parent. The question depends upon the construction of the language of the settlement in each case (m), but if, according to construction, the period has arrived when the portion is directed to be raised and paid, it must be raised although the act of doing so involves a considerable sacrifice and waste of property (n).

The results of the cases on this point have been summed up as follows (o):—

Fixed period.

Where a term is limited in remainder to commence in possession after the death of a parent, yet if the trust is to raise a portion payable at a fixed period, the child shall not wait for the death of the parent before the portion is raised, but at the fixed period may compel a sale of the term (p).

The court ought to hold an equal mind in construing the instrument, and ought not to be eager to lay hold of circumstances (Codrington v. Foley (Lord), supra, approved in Smyth v. Foley, supra, at p. 158, and differing from Stanley v. Stanley (1737), 1 Atk. 549); see Hall v. Carter (1742), 2 Atk. 354 (where it was stated that the court would lay hold of the slightest circumstance in a settlement that showed an intention to postpone raising portions during the life of the father and mother).

Morgan* (1839), 2 Dr. & Wal. 330; Michell v. Michell (1842), 4 Beav. 549. A portion to be raised by means of a term ceases to be raisable when the term comes to an end (Re Marshall's Estate, [1899] 1 I. R. 96).

Where the period is not fixed by the original settlement, but depends on a contingency, the rule applies as soon as the contingency happens (q).

SECT. 5.
Portions.

Where not only the period, but the class of children in favour of whom the portions are to be raised, depends on a contingency, as where the term is limited to take effect in case the father dies without issue male by his wife, on the contingency happening on the death of either parent without issue male, the portions are to be raised immediately, and the term is saleable in the lifetime of the surviving parent (r).

Contingent period.

Contingent period and class.

Portions are not raised in the lifetime of the parents if there is a clear indication in the settlement to the contrary (s).

Lifetime of parents.

The court has declined to anticipate the time of payment in raising portions for the benefit of the heir (t); but, where some members of a class of portionists have become entitled to their shares, the court has directed the entire sum to be raised, the portions of the younger children being invested in Consols, they taking the benefit or the loss caused by any rise or fall (a). Each case would, however, doubtless depend on its own particular circumstances.

Anticipation in favour of class.

SUB-SECT. 5.—Method of Raising Portions.

1053. Where a trust of a term for raising portions directs a particular method of raising them, it implies a negative that they shall not be raised in any other way (b). If no method is directed, they may be raised by a sale or mortgage (c).

Method of raising portions.

If portions are originally charged on land, the land must bear the burden; they cannot be raised out of personalty (d).

SECT. 5.

Portions.

Direction to raise out of rents and profits.

If there is a direction to raise portions out of rents and profits, the court gives a liberal construction to the words and directs a sale (e), unless there are words to restrain the meaning and confine them to the receipts of the rents and profits as they accrue (f). The fact that a term is reversionary does not prevent a sale or mortgage thereof to raise portions (g).

Where the ordinary profits of a term cannot raise the portions, timber may be felled or a mine worked (h).

Alternative methods of raising.

If the power is to raise by sale or mortgage, or out of the rents and profits, the burden may be cast by the exercise of the trustees' discretion either on the inheritance or on the tenant for life. The question depends on the intention of the settlor as shown in the particular instrument, but the rule is that if trustees have a power to raise certain sums it is their duty to charge the principal of those sums on the inheritance and to secure the application of the annual profits during the tenancy for life to keep down the interest (i).

Sale.

A sale may be ordered at the instance of the heir as well as of the portionists (k).

Several mortgages.

Portions for different children may be raised by several mortgages of different parts of the estate, and there is no necessity to comprise Hutchinson* (1823), 1 Sim. & St. 276).

(f) Green v. Belchier, supra. Thus, a direction to raise portions out of rents, issues and profits, as well as by making leases for three lives, has been held to negative a power to raise them by sale or mortgage (Ivy v. Gilbert (1722), 2 P. Wms. 13; Mills v. Banks (1724), 3 P. Wms. 1; see Evelyn v. Evelyn (1732), 2 P. Wms. 659; and compare Ridout v. Plymouth (Earl) (1740), 2 Atk. 104; *Stone v. SUB-SECT. 6.—Vesting of Portions.

1054. If a portion charged on, or made payable out of the rents and profits of, land is made payable at a certain age, or on marriage, or other event personal to the party to be benefited, and such party dies before that time arrives, the portion must not be raised out of the land, but sinks for the benefit of the inheritance (n).

Portion payable on event personal to portionist.

If no time for payment is specified in the case of portions charged on land, they vest on the attainment of majority or marriage, on the principle that a portion is not to be held to vest till it is wanted (o). On the other hand, if portions are directed to be raised out of the rents and profits of land, but no time is mentioned for payment, they are payable presently and become an immediate vested interest, and the representatives of a child who dies in infancy are entitled to such child's portion (p).

Where no time specified.

Portions which are not charged on land, but are made payable out of personalty, even though the time of payment is fixed for twenty-one or marriage, vest at birth (q), unless the settlement contains a direction, either express or to be implied, to the contrary (r).

1055. If payment of the portion is postponed until the happening of an event referable not to the person of the party to be benefited, but to the circumstances of the estate, such as the death of the tenant for life, the portion is raisable after the death of the tenant for life, although the term out of which it has to be raised may never arise owing to the party to be benefited not being in esse at the time of the death of the tenant for life (s), there being a strong presumption that in marriage settlements the shares of children are to become vested when they are wanted, that is to say, in the case of sons at twenty-one and of daughters at twenty-one or marriage (t).

The same rule applies where the portion is payable out of personalty (a).

Intention of
prevails.

The rule is, however, a rule of construction only, and if the settlement clearly and unequivocally makes the right of a child to a provision depend upon its surviving both or either of its parents, a court of equity has no authority to control that disposition, and in such cases the representatives of children dying in the lifetime of their parents do not participate in the fund, even though such deceased children may have attained twenty-one or married (b).

What amounts to a clear and unequivocal expression of intention depends on the language of the particular instrument in question, but a provision for the issue of children dying in their parents' lifetime will lead the court to exclude the rule (c).

but not from the time when the title to the portion vests (f). The interest should be paid annually and not allowed to accumulate (g).

SECT. 5.
Portions.

Where there is a power of charging interest on a portion it is considered as maintenance (g), and no interest is given on arrears (h).

1057. The donee of a power to charge has a right to fix the rate of interest (i), but this rule does not apply to a case where the trustees have a trust vested in them to raise a specific sum of money, and the only power given to anybody in connexion with the money so raised is to state in what proportion the money is to be divided between the parties and at what time it shall be payable (k).

Rate of interest.

In the absence of any express direction a portion carries interest at the rate current in the country where the land charged is situate, which rate in England is 4 per cent. (l) and in Ireland 5 per cent. (m).

Current rate.

SECT. 6.—Interests in Remainder.

1058. Subject to the foregoing interests, real estate is commonly limited by a marriage settlement to the use of the first and all other sons of the intended marriage successively according to seniority in tail male (n), with remainder to the use of the daughters of the marriage in tail with cross remainders between them, but sometimes provision is made for sons of a subsequent marriage in priority to daughters of the intended marriage (o).

Ultimate
limitations in settlement
of realty.

If it is not desired to preserve the estate in its entirety for an eldest son, the more usual course at the present day is to convey the land to trustees by the same or a separate deed upon trust for sale, and then to declare the trusts of the proceeds as in a settlement of personalty (p), but sometimes the land is limited to issue as both spouses or the survivor of them shall appoint, and in default of appointment to the use of the children of the marriage as tenants in common in tail(q) with cross remainders between them(r).

1059. In the case of a deed, unlike the case of a will, cross remainders cannot be raised by implication, however plainly the intention of the parties may have been expressed, for it is essential that there should be apt words of limitation(s). If, however, a deed contains express limitations by way of cross remainders, so that the court is not asked to supply words of limitation, the same rule of construction applies to both deeds and wills, and the court gives effect to the plain intention of the parties(t).

Thus, on a gift over on the death of a child without issue to the survivors or survivor of the children, the word "survivors" has been held to mean "others" in order to give effect to the obvious intention of the instrument(u). So, too, where cross remainders in tail had been clearly created by apt words of limitation as to the share or shares of any child or children dying without issue, and the question was as to what was included under the words "share" or "shares," the court, on the whole context, held them to apply to accrued as well as to original shares(v); and where equitable interests in a term pur autre vie were limited to several persons as tenants in common in quasi-tail, cross remainders in quasi-tail were implied between the tenants in common(w).

SECT. 7.—Ultimate Limitations.

limitations.

1060. The ultimate limitation in a settlement of realty, as in a settlement of personalty(a), is generally designed to bring the settled property back to its original ownership. It is usually expressed to be to the use of the settlor and his heirs and assigns for ever or to the use of the settlor in fee simple(b). Since the year 1833, the settlor under such a limitation takes the ultimate estate as a purchaser by virtue of the settlement and is not entitled

SECT. 7.
Ultimate Limitations.

Part VIII.—The Tenant for Life and the Remainderman.

1061. A legal tenant for life is entitled as of course to the possession and receipt of the rents and profits of the settled estate (f).

Legal and equitable tenants for life.

An equitable tenant for life is not entitled as of right to possession, but he may obtain possession by applying to the Chancery Division of the High Court for and obtaining an order giving him possession. The trustees of the settlement ought not to hand over the possession except under such an order, or, if they choose to act without the leave of the court, they should take such security as will indemnify them thereafter for any breach by the tenant for life of those duties which the trustees ought themselves to perform (g).

The question of granting possession is in every case one for the discretion of the court, which has not been affected by the passing of the Settled Land Acts (h), though these Acts afford an additional ground for exercising the discretion in favour of a person who is a tenant for life (i) or has the statutory powers of a tenant for life (j). It is no objection that such person is a female (k), and in one case the assignee of the tenant for life was let into possession (l). The court requires the applicant to enter into a stringent undertaking to indemnify the trustees (m). It is no longer the usual practice to require security from a tenant for life on his being let into possession (n); but security has been ordered where the court was dissatisfied with the applicant's means (o), and when the land was subject to a term in the trustees to manage and apply the net income in paying off mortgages, the court also required from the tenant for life an undertaking to apply the surplus income, after discharging the expenses of management and keeping down the interest on mortgages, in paying off mortgages (p).

Application
to court.

The application to the court may be by summons (q). The trustees are necessary respondents, though if one of them is a beneficiary it is preferable that the others should be separately represented (r). A mortgagee of the interest of the tenant for life ought to be a party, but not in ordinary circumstances a reversioner (s).

SECT. 2.—Custody of Title Deeds.

Legal tenant
for life.

1062. A legal tenant for life of freeholds is entitled to the custody of the title deeds as a matter of right (t) and can recover possession of them from a contingent remainderman (a). The court does not interfere with this right, except in cases where he has been guilty of misconduct, so that the safety of the deeds has been endangered (b), or where the rights of others intervene, and it becomes necessary for the court to take charge of the title deeds in order to carry out the administration of the property (c).

A., per LINDLEY, L.J., at p. 557. A husband who is entitled to the rents and profits of land in right of his wife, she being tenant for life but not to her separate use, is entitled to possession of the title deeds (Re Pyatt, Ex parte Rogers (1884), 26 Ch. D. 31, C. A.); but his trustee in bankruptcy has no absolute right to the custody (ibid.). This case is, however, likely to be infrequent having regard to the Married Women's Property Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 75).

(a) Allwood v. Heywood, supra. As to custody of title deeds generally, see title REAL PROPERTY AND CHATTELS REAL, Vol. XXIV., pp. 239, 240.

(b) The fact that the tenant for life has taken the deeds out of the jurisdiction may be a ground for thinking that there is danger to them if they remain in his custody (Jenner v. Morris (1866), 1 Ch. App. 603); but the mere fact that he has for many years been resident abroad is no objection (Leathes v. Leathes (1877), 5 Ch. D. 221). If the dicta in Reeves v. Reeves (1725), 9 Mod. Rep. 128; Ivie v. Ivie (1738), 1 Atk. 429; and Smith v. Cooke (1746), 3 Atk. 378, 382, assert an unqualified right in the remainderman to have the title deeds brought into court, they will not now be followed; see Ford v. Peering (1789), 1 Ves. 72.

(c) Leathes v. Leathes, supra, dissenting from the view taken in Pyncent v. Pyncent (1747), 3 Atk. 571, and Warren v. Rudall, Ex parte Godfrey 1063. If the legal estate is in the trustees, the trustees are entitled to the title deeds while they have any active duties to perform (d); and, under the rule that where two have an equal interest in a deed, he who has it may keep it (e), a trustee is not entitled to have the deeds removed from the custody of a co-trustee (f).

SECT. 2.
Custody of Title Deeds.

Legal estate in trustees.

1064. An equitable tenant for life who had obtained possession of the title deeds has been allowed to retain them (g).

Equitable tenant for life.

As observed above (h), since the passing of the Settled Land Acts (i) there is a presumption in favour of the right of a tenant for life as therein defined (which definition clearly includes an equitable tenant for life (k)) to be let into possession. This right carries with it the right to custody of the title deeds (l), except in a case where the interest of the tenant for life has been mortgaged (m). The tenant for life, however, must undertake not to part with the deeds without the written consent of the trustees, and to produce the same on all reasonable occasions (n).

Undertaking.

(1860), 1 John. & H. 1, that the court never interferes as between a father, tenant for life, and a son entitled in remainder, but will interfere in the case of a stranger tenant for life. Where a sale has been ordered to raise portions, but the tenant for life refuses to produce the title deeds of the estate, a receiver of the rents and profits may be appointed; see Brigstocke v. Mansel (1818), 3 Madd. 47. If a suit is pending the court considers where, having regard to the purposes of the suit, the deeds can most conveniently be kept (Stanford v. Roberts (1871), 6 Ch. App. 307). Where deeds have been brought into court for the purposes of an action by the tenant for life, the court on the conclusion of the proceedings has ordered them to be delivered to him again (Webb v. Lymington (Lord), Webb v. Webb (1875), 1 Eden, 8; Duncombe v. Mayer (1803), 8 Ves. 320; see Langdale (Lady) v. Briggs (1856), 8 De G. M. & G. 391, C. A. (where this was done by consent on such terms as might be sufficient for the protection and security of the trustees and other persons beneficially interested); but see Hicks v. Hicks (1785), 2 Dick. 650; Jenner v. Morris (1866), 1 Ch. App. 603). The court, however, only delivers deeds out to the party who has deposited them (Plunkett v. Lewis (1847), 6 Hare, 65).

SECT. 3.

Waste.

SECT. 3.—Waste.

SUB-SECT. 1.—Tenant for Life Impeachable for Waste.

Voluntary
waste.

1065. A tenant for life (o), unless made unimpeachable for waste (p), may not commit what is called voluntary waste, that is to say, any act which is injurious to the inheritance, either, first, by diminishing the value of the estate, or, secondly, by increasing the burden upon it, or, thirdly, by impairing the evidence of title (q). Thus, he may not plough up ancient pasture (r), pull down buildings, even though ruinous, without rebuilding, or erect new buildings, or suffer such new buildings, if erected, to be wasted (s). He may not open new mines, quarries or clay-pits, or work old abandoned pits or mines (a), but he may work mines or pits which have been previously opened in the sense that they have been worked, not necessarily for profit, so long as such previous working or use is not limited to any special or restricted purpose, such as the purpose of fuel or repair to some particular tenements (b).

timber.

A tenant for life, even if he is impeachable for waste, can cut timber necessary for repairs in the exercise of his right to estovers or botes (c); he can also cut trees, with certain exceptions (d), other than timber trees (e), or trees which would be timber if they were over twenty years of age, but timber trees under twenty years of age may be cut down in the course of the proper management of the estate for the purpose of allowing the growth of other timber (f). If timber is decaying, or injurious to the growth of other trees, so that to cut it is beneficial to the inheritance (g), the court can authorise a tenant for life to cut the timber. Where timber is properly cut under an order of the court, or otherwise (h), the proceeds follow the interests of the estate, that is to say, they are invested and the income given to the tenant for life impeachable for waste in the first place (i). On the death of such tenant for life, the proceeds become the property of the first tenant for life unimpeachable for waste (k), or the owner of the first estate of inheritance, whichever estate first comes into possession (l).

A tenant for life impeachable for waste, who takes upon himself to cut and sell timber without authority, does it at his peril, and can never be permitted to derive any advantage from his wrongful act (m). In such a case the timber cut or its produce belongs to the owner of the first vested estate of inheritance (n), notwithstanding that other persons may come into existence who would be entitled to a first estate tail, and the existence of an intervening estate of freehold in a tenant for life without impeachment of waste does not prevent this (o); but if in such a case there is fraudulent collusion between the tenant for life and the owner of the inheritance in remainder, the court interferes, and orders the value of the timber which was wrongfully cut to be impounded and held for the benefit of the estate and all persons interested in it (p).

Windfalls.

Where timber is blown down in a storm, it belongs, at law, to the owner of the first vested estate of inheritance (q), but the rule is, in the absence of improper conduct on the part of the tenant for life, to treat the produce of such timber trees as capital and allow the income to the tenant for life (r). If trees on a settled estate, other than timber, are blown down, courts of equity, so far as may be, struggle to prevent accident interfering with the rights of the parties, and endeavour to place the tenant for life and the remaindermen in the same position as if the windfall had not occurred (s). Generally, a tenant for life is entitled to have the benefit of the sale of all such trees blown down by the wind as he would be entitled to cut himself (t).

SUB-SECT. 2.—Tenant for Life Unimpeachable for Waste.

Tenant for life without impeachment for waste.

1066. If the tenant for life is made, as is the more usual course at the present day, tenant for life without impeachment of waste, he has as great power to commit legal waste as a tenant in tail has (a). He is entitled, therefore, to open new mines or pits, and to fell timber, and the produce of minerals or timber belongs to him, whether severed from the estate by his act or not, but not until severance (b). It follows that on a sale of the estate with timber he is not entitled to the produce of the timber (c). The exemption from liability for waste is a special power given to the tenant for life to appropriate part of the inheritance, and may be controlled or qualified, either impliedly or expressly, by special powers given to the trustees (d), or it may be restricted by exceptions (e). If the words are “without impeachment of any action of waste,” no action can be brought, but it would seem that the tenant for life is not entitled to the thing severed (f). The privilege “without impeachment of waste” is annexed to the privity of the estate (g); it is consequently lost by change of the estate, as where a lessee for years accepts a confirmation to him for his life (h), but it devolves on the assignee of the estate (i).

(c) Doran v. Wiltshire (1792), 3 Swan. 699; Bridges v. Stephens, supra. This remains the law though the sale is made not under a power contained in the settlement, but under the statutory powers conferred by the Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38) (Re Llewellyn, Llewellyn v. Williams (1887), 37 Ch. D. 317). Formerly, where trustees sold settled lands under a power in the settlement, and the tenant for life, being unimpeachable for waste, sold the timber standing thereon for his own benefit, it was held to be a bad execution of the power so as to avoid the sale, but the law in this respect has been altered by the Law of Property Amendment Act, 1859 (22 & 23 Vict. c. 35), s. 13; and see title POWERS, Vol. XXIII., p. 57.

Wickham* (1815), 19 Ves. 419 (where the tenant for life was held entitled to the interest of money produced by the sale of decaying timber cut by the order of the court)); without impeachment of or for any manner of waste, save and except spoil or destruction, or voluntary or permissive waste, or suffering houses and buildings to go to decay, and in not repairing the same (Vincent v. Spicer (1856), 22 Beav. 380 (where it was declared that the tenant for life was entitled to cut such timber as the owner of an estate in fee simple, having not only a due regard to his own interest, but to the permanent advantage of the estate, might properly cut in due course of management)). But where a power was given to demise minerals, but so that the lessees should not be punishable for waste, the proviso was held to be repugnant to the power (*Daly v. unconscientious or unreasonable use of his legal power as goes to the destruction of the thing settled (l). Thus the courts have restrained a tenant for life unimpeachable for waste from pulling down the mansion-house (m), or other houses (n), from grubbing up a wood so as to destroy it absolutely (o), from cutting underwood or saplings of insufficient growth, or at unseasonable times (p), and from cutting down timber planted or left standing for shelter or ornament (q) of the settled property (r).

Fixtures.

Fixtures which have become part of the inheritance cannot be removed by a limited owner without the commission of waste (s).

A tenant in tail after possibility of issue extinct, although from the nature of his estate unimpeachable for voluntary waste (t), has been restrained by the courts from committing equitable waste (u).

Ornamental
timber.

1068. In determining whether timber is or is not ornamental, the question for the court is not whether it is or is not ornamental in the opinion of the court, but whether on the evidence it was planted or left by the owner of the estate for the time being for the purposes of ornament or shelter (v). The taste of a testator, like his will, binds the parties, and if the object in planting timber, or leaving timber standing, is ornamental, the timber is protected whether the object is achieved or not (a).

The test to be applied in each case is whether the settlor has by his disposition, or by his acts, indicated that there shall be a continuous enjoyment in succession of that which he has himself enjoyed, in which case it is against conscience that a tenant for life, claiming under his disposition, should by the exercise of a legal power defeat that intention. If, therefore, a testator or settlor occupies a mansion-house with trees planted or left standing for ornament around or about it, or keeps such a mansion-house in a state for occupation, and devises or settles it so as to go in a course of succession, he may reasonably be presumed to anticipate that those who are to succeed him will occupy the mansion-house; and it cannot be presumed that he meant it to be denuded of that ornament which he has himself enjoyed. The court, therefore, in such a case protects the trees against the acts of the tenant for life (b). What would be done by a prudent owner in the ordinary and proper course of management, is no measure of the obligation upon a tenant for life without impeachment of waste with reference to timber planted or left standing for ornament (c), and decaying timber, even though injurious to other trees, cannot be cut down if it is ornamental (d). If, however, a tempest has produced gaps in a piece of ornamental planting, the cutting of a few trees to produce a uniform and consistent, instead of an unpleasant and disjointed, appearance would not be construed waste (e), and the cutting of decayed wood, which is beneficial to the ornamental timber that remains, may be directed by the court (f) or even done by the tenant for life (g).

This protection has been extended to groups of firs planted two miles away from a mansion-house (Downshire (Marquis) v. Sandys (Lady), supra), and to rides and avenues cut through a wood at a considerable distance from the mansion-house, though not to the whole wood (Wombwell v. Belasyse, supra). But a whole wood may be considered ornamental (Marker v. Marker (1851), 9 Hare, 1, 21; see Ford v. Tynte (1864), 2 De G. J. & Sm. 127, 131, C. A.), though in such a case the court directs an inquiry as to what trees can be felled without impairing the beauty of the place as it stood at the time of the settlement (Marker v. Marker, supra; Ashby v. Hincks (1888), 58 L. T. 557). The protection of the court has also been extended to trees planted for the purpose of excluding unsightly objects (Day v. Merry (1810), 16 Ves. 375 a), and even to trees in a park and pleasure grounds which surrounded a mansion that had been pulled down under a power in the settlement (Wellesley v. Wellesley (1834), 6 Sim. 497); but no judgment was delivered in this case, and it does not appear whether the decision went on the ground that the mansion-house might be rebuilt, or that the trees in question were ornamental to villas that had been erected on the property. A tenant for life who wrongfully pulls down a mansion-house does not thereby acquire a right to cut ornamental timber (Morris v. Morris (1847), 15 Sim. 505; see Leeds (Duke) v. Amherst (Lord) (1846), 14 Sim. 357); but trees originally planted for the ornament of a mansion-house that has been pulled down by a settlor without any intention of rebuilding are not protected as ornamental timber between the parties claiming under him (Micklethwait v. Micklethwait, supra). Trees planted for profit are not ornamental timber (Halliwell v. Phillips (1858), 4 Jur. (N. S.) 607); in one case, however, the protection was extended to fruit trees in a garden as being ornamental to the house (Anon. (1705), Freem. (CH.) 278).

SUB-SECT. 4.—Permissive Waste.

Liability for permissive
waste.

1069. A tenant for life, whether legal or equitable, is not liable for permissive waste (h), that is, an omission whereby damage results to the premises, such as suffering houses to fall into decay (i). If, however, the settlor has imposed a condition that the tenant for life shall keep the premises in repair, there is a personal liability which can be enforced in a court of equity (k), even in respect of dilapidations existing at the time when the settlement came into force (l). Damages may be recovered in respect of such a liability from the estate of the tenant for life after his death, the proper measure of such damages being such sum as is reasonably necessary to put the

The principle applies equally in the case of land settled by the instrument creating the settlement and of land purchased under a direction contained in such instrument (*Re Freman, Dimond v. premises in the state of repair in which the tenant for life ought to have left them (m).

SECT. 3.
Waste.

Settled
leaseholds.

1070. An equitable tenant for life of settled leaseholds is not liable to the remainderman for permissive waste in the absence of an express condition that he shall keep the settled leaseholds in repair (n); nevertheless he, and every successive owner of the lease, is bound as between himself and the estate of the settlor to perform the covenants in the lease, including the covenant to repair, and indemnify the estate against any breach thereof (o). This liability of the tenant for life is unaffected by the fact that he is entitled, not to the clear rack-rent of the property, but only to a small improved ground rent (p). He is not, however, bound to make good the settlor's deficiencies, and put premises into repair which were out of repair at the time when the settlement came into force (q).

SECT. 4.—Right to Income.

1071. A tenant for life of settled property is entitled both to the ordinary income of the property, including the income of a fund set aside to provide for portions payable on his death (r), and to all casual profits (s) which accrue during the time of his tenancy for life, unless the settlement provides otherwise.

In general.

1072. On the same principle, the tenant for life of an estate on which there are mines opened, or contracted to be leased by the settlor (t), receives the royalties payable in respect of the minerals gotten, though they are really instalments of the purchase-money of part of the inheritance (u).

even though the lease is granted under the statutory powers (w). Money paid to a legal tenant for life as the consideration for accepting the surrender of a lease also belongs to that life tenant (a). But compensation money paid in respect of the extinction of the licence of a public-house (b) is treated as capital.

Where interest is directed by a will to be accumulated beyond the legal period (c), the interest on the original sum and the accumulations after that period and until the time of payment must be invested as capital, and a tenant for life of residue is only entitled to the income arising therefrom (d).

1073. If stocks or shares of a public company (e) are settled, the tenant for life is entitled to all dividends declared out of current profits at whatever rate (f), and whether described as extraordinary or special dividends (g) or bonuses (h). The rights of the tenant for life to the entire dividend declared are not affected by the fact that the profits out of which the dividend is declared include money received by the company in respect of an old debt (i), or profits made in past years which have been put by under the name of a reserve fund (k).

A bonus declared by a company in consideration of a release of certain preferential rights attached to shares, has been held to be capital, but the reason for this would seem to be that it was a payment subsequent to a testator's death in respect of a release given by him during his life; see *Bates v. (l) This power is now possessed by all companies limited by shares, if authorised by their articles (Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908 can either distribute its profits as dividend or convert them into capital, and if the company validly exercises this power, such exercise of its power is binding on all persons interested under the testator or settlor in the shares, and consequently what is paid by the company as dividend goes to the tenant for life, and what is paid by the company to the shareholder as capital, or appropriated as an increase of the capital stock in the concern, enures to the benefit of all interested in the capital (m). Accordingly, where a company having these powers issued new shares, which represented a portion of their current earnings that had been applied to necessary works, such new shares were held to be capital (n); and where a company declared a bonus dividend out of accumulated profits, and at the same time made an issue of new shares for a corresponding amount among its shareholders in proportion to the existing interests, and applied the bonus dividend in paying the calls on such new shares, there was an effective appropriation by the company of the undivided profits dealt with as an increase of the capital stock in the concern (o).

It is a question of fact in each case whether a company has or has not capitalised its profits (p). Both the form and substance of the transaction must be looked at, and where a company has power to increase its capital and appropriate its profits to such increase, it cannot be considered as having converted any part of its profits into capital when it has made no such increase (q). It follows that in the case of such a company the mere carrying over of profits to a reserve fund (r), or the temporary devotion of them to capital purposes (s),

tion of profits a question of fact.

(8 Edw. 7, c. 69), s. 41 (1); see title COMPANIES, Vol. V., p. 95. In cases formerly where a company did not possess this power, but had accumulated profits and used them in fact for capital purposes, and afterwards distributed these profits among its proprietors, the profits so distributed were treated as accretions to capital, so that the tenant for life was only entitled to the income thereof (Brander v. Brander (1799), 4 Ves. 800; Irving v. Houston (1803), 4 Pat. App. 521, H. L.; Paris v. Paris (1804), 10 Ves. 185; Clayton v. Gresham (1804), 10 Ves. 288; Witts v. Steere (1807), 13 Ves. 363; Ward v. Combe (1836), 7 Sim. 634; Re Hodgins, Ex parte Hodgins (1847), 11 I. Eq. R. 99). The fact that the distribution of accumulated profits was by way of a cash bonus, and not of shares, was held to be too slight a circumstance to take the case out of this general rule (Paris v. Paris, supra). Where a company, which, having originally no power to increase its capital, was subsequently authorised by Act of Parliament to do so, apportioned the additional capital eo nomine among its shareholders, the accretion was considered capital (Hooper v. Rossiter (1824), 13 Price, 774).

(m) Bouch v. Sproule (1887), 12 App. Cas. 385. If the intention on the part of the company to capitalise is clear, the fact that the shareholders have an option to take cash or new shares does not affect the position as between the tenant for life and the remainderman (Re Evans, Jones v. Evans, [1913] 1 Ch. 23). If the option in such a case is vested in trustees, there is no right to elect between them and their cestuis que trust, and they must take the dividend in the capitalised form (Re Evans, Jones v. Evans, supra).

does not suffice to convert them into capital. Payments off by the company of subscribed capital are capital (a), unless such payments are invalid by reason of failure on the part of the company to observe the necessary formalities, in which case they belong as income to the tenant for life (b).

Option in favour of shareholder.

If an option is given to the shareholder to take either a cash dividend or shares, the court determines from the scheme as a whole whether the profits dealt with are or are not capitalised (c). However, in the latter case the tenant for life is not entitled to the entire value of the shares allotted in respect of dividend, but only to so much of the proceeds of realisation of such shares as represent the dividend, and the balance ought to be applied as capital (d).

Express provision in settlement.

Of course, if the settlement contains an express declaration that bonuses shall be treated either as income or capital, the rights of the tenant for life are governed by such declaration (e).

Distribution of assets on winding up.

1075. The tenant for life is in ordinary cases only entitled to the income derived from dividends and bonuses declared by the company as a going concern, and assets distributed in a winding up on a company ceasing to exist are capital, even though such assets, or a portion of them, represent undivided profits which the company, while it existed, could have distributed as dividend or bonus (f).

Options to take shares.

1076. Unless a settlement contains an express clause authorising the trustees to relinquish in favour of the tenant for life any preferential right that may accrue to them in respect of settled shares to take new shares in a company, they must exercise their option to take new shares on behalf of all their beneficiaries, and such new shares or any moneys received by sale of the option or the shares are capital (g). If the calls on such new shares are paid out of income, the tenant for life has a lien on them for the amount so paid (h).

of their holding of settled shares, fees received by them were held to be capital (i).

1077. If a share in a partnership business is settled, or if settled funds are properly employed in a partnership business, the question what is income and what is capital must be determined by the articles of partnership, and all that is divided between the partners as profit goes to the tenant for life (k). What is properly retained as capital in the business is treated as capital, and belongs to the remainderman, only the interest thereon being payable to the tenant for life (l). Where a tenant for life is entitled to the profits arising from a business carried on by the trustees, they may be justified in deducting a reasonable and proper annual sum for depreciation (m).

1078. In the case of property settled by deed the tenant for life is entitled to the entire income of the property settled, though it is of a wasting nature, such as leaseholds (n).

In the case, however, of a residuary gift by will of property of a wasting nature to several persons in succession, there is a presumption that the testator intended the property to be enjoyed in accordance with his gift, and effect can only be given to this intention by converting the wasting property into securities of a permanent nature for the benefit of all persons interested (o).

This rule applies to unauthorised securities retained by trustees pending conversion, whether they are of a wasting nature or not, and the tenant for life is only entitled to the income of them as notionally converted at the testator's death (p).

This case was not cited in the case of Re Dover Coalfield Extension, Ltd., [1908] 1 Ch. 65, C. A., and cannot be taken to be overruled by that decision. The argument that the trustees could not have earned the fees unless they had been qualified to act by virtue of their trust shares was met in the case of Re Dover Coalfield Extension, Ltd., supra, by the answer that they became directors at the express request of their cestui que trust (ibid., at p. 70), which would not apply to an ordinary case of a trustee of settled shares.

capital, the remaindermen have no claim against the tenant for life for any interest which has been received by him from the unauthorised investment in excess of what he would have received from an authorised investment (q).

SECT. 5.—Apportionment.

In general.

1079. Unless the settlement (r) expressly stipulates that no apportionment shall take place (s), all rents, annuities, dividends, and other periodical payments in the nature of income are considered as accruing from day to day, and on the death of the tenant for life are apportionable accordingly (t) between his personal representatives and the remainderman (u).

What profits
tionable.

1080. Apportionment by virtue of the statute takes place in respect of all rents (a), which expression includes rent-service, rentcharge, and rent-seck, and also tithes, and all periodical payments or renderings in lieu of or in the nature of rent or tithe (b), annuities including salaries or pensions (b), dividends on stock (c), and all payments made by the name of dividend, bonus or otherwise out of the revenue of trading or other public companies (d), whether such payments are usually made or declared at any fixed times or otherwise (e).

Hill* (1881), 50 L. J. (CH.) 551, may be distinguished on the ground that it related to accumulations of profits which were treated as accretions to capital (Slade v. Chaine, supra, at pp. 528 et seq.); but if it is in conflict with the foregoing cases it must be taken to be overruled. As to cases where a loss results from an unauthorised investment, see pp. 622, 623, post.

(s) Apportionment Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 35), s. 7. There must either be an express direction against apportionment or terms of gift so clear as necessarily to exclude apportionment; an inference to be collected from the general terms of the will is not sufficient (Tyrrell v. Clark (1854), 2 Drew. 86: decided on similar language in the Apportionment Act, 1834 (4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 22)). For examples of "express stipulations," see Re Cleveland's (Duke) Estate, Wolmer (Viscount) v. Forester, [1894] 1 Ch. 164, C. A.; Re Lysaght, Lysaght v. Lysaght, [1898] 1 Ch. 115, C. Profits arising from a private trading partnership (f) or a newspaper carried on by trustees (g) are not apportionable; there is no apportionment in respect of any sum duly or properly paid or accruing due before the happening of the event which is said to require the apportionment (h); and annual sums made payable on policies of assurance of any description are not apportionable (i).

SECT. 5.
Apportionment.

Profits not apportionable.

1081. As a general rule, on a sale of investments, whether for purposes of reinvestment or distribution, the court declines to make any apportionment between the tenant for life and the remainderman of the proceeds of sale on account of income accrued but not payable at the time of sale, inasmuch as to do otherwise would be to impose a heavy burden on testators' estates (j). This rule is not affected by the Apportionment Act, 1870 (k), and it is applied in cases where the tenant for life has died between the last payment of income and the sale (l). Apportionment has, however, been allowed in special circumstances, as, for instance, where the sale has been by order of the court for the benefit of the estate, or to facilitate distribution among the beneficiaries (m). If a purchase of stock carries with it the right to receive dividends which have been earned and declared but not paid, there is no question of apportionment, and the tenant for life is not entitled to be paid by the trustees the amount of such dividends (n).

Sale of investments.

Purchase of investments.

1082. An apportioned part of any continuing rent, annuity, dividend, or other payment is payable or recoverable when the entire portion of which such apportioned part forms part becomes due or payable, and not before, and in the case of a rent, annuity, or other payment determined by re-entry, death, or otherwise, when the next entire portion of the same would have been payable, if the same had not so determined, and not before (o).

Recovery of apportioned part.

1083. The personal representatives of the tenant for life have the same remedies for recovering apportioned parts as for the entire portions, except that entire or continuing rents are to be recovered by the person who, if the rent had not been apportionable, would have been entitled to such entire or continuing rent, and the tenant for

life.

1084. In the absence of special contract or obligation (q), a tenant for life is not bound to insure the settled premises (r). Accordingly, where policies have been effected and kept up by or on behalf of a tenant in tail, who is under no obligation to insure and, being an infant, cannot be credited with any intention of making the policy moneys a present to the settled estate, the policy moneys belong absolutely to the infant tenant in tail (s). In the case of a tenant for life without impeachment of waste, the absence of liability to insure carries with it a right to receive money forthcoming by reason of the insurance which he is under no liability to effect (a), and this is so both in the case of an insurance of buildings and of chattels

(q) As to the obligation on the tenant for life to insure buildings comprised in an improvement executed under the statutory provisions, see Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 28; title LAND IMPROVEMENT, Vol. XVIII., p. 293. If he is under an obligation to insure or trustees have power to insure, the insurance is for the benefit of the persons successively entitled, and does not belong to any one of them (Re Bladon, Dando v. Porter, [1911] 2 Ch. 350, per NEVILLE, J., at p. 354). A tenant for life of settled leaseholds must bear the obligation of the covenants in the lease which have to be performed by the lessee for the benefit of the lessor, including insurance if there is a covenant to insure (Re Betty, Betty v. A.-G., [1899] 1 Ch. 821; Re Gjers, Cooper v. Gjers, [1899] 2 Ch. 54), and the expenses of such insurance are payable out of income (Re Redding, Thompson v. Redding, [1897] 1 Ch. 876); but see Kingham v. Kingham, [1897] 1 I. R. 170. A tenant for life is not bound to keep furniture insured (Re Betty, Betty v. A.-G., supra).

(a) Gausson v. Whatman (1905), 93 L. T. 101. A contract of insurance being a contract of indemnity, as between the contracting parties, the insured is only entitled to recover the amount of his loss, and, accordingly, a tenant for life who has insured for the full value of a house may only be able to recover the full amount of the policy in an action between himself and the insurance company by proving that his intention is to cover not merely his own limited interest, but the interest of all others who are interested in the property (Castellain v. Preston (1883), 11 Q. B. D. 380, C. A.). It does not, however, follow that if the insurance company pays the entire sum over to such a limited owner without raising any question as to the extent of his interest, he thereby becomes a trustee of the sum for all persons interested in the property. Gausson v. Whatman, supra, has decided the contrary, and the decision seems supported by the analogy of a person effecting for his own benefit a policy on a life in which he has no insurable interest, in which case it has been held that the fact that the insurance company might have had a good defence to an action on the policy conferred no rights on the representatives of the person on whose life the policy was effected (Worthington v. Curtis (1875), 1 Ch. D. 419, C. A.; followed in A.-G. v. Murray, [1904] 1 K. B. 165, C. A.). A condition in a settlement that a tenant for life shall keep the settled property in good and tenantable repair creates an obligation upon him to rebuild premises destroyed by fire (Re Skingley (1851), 3 Mac. & G. 221; Gregg v. Coates, Hodgson v. Coates (1856), 23 Beav. 33).

settled to devolve with land (b). The remaindermen have, however, a statutory right to require insurance moneys on buildings to be applied in replacing the buildings insured (c), and if they exercise this right the tenant for life is not entitled to a charge for the amount so applied (d).

1085. In the absence of an express direction by a settlor to the contrary, it is presumed that the settled property is intended to descend intact. Income must, therefore, bear all ordinary outgoings of a recurrent nature, such as rates and taxes (e), rents reserved by the lease under which settled leaseholds are held (f), and fee-farm rents and quit-rents to which the settled property is subject. The tenant for life must also bear the costs of legal proceedings for his sole benefit in respect of his life interest (g).

On the other hand, the corpus of a trust estate must be resorted to for all costs, charges, and expenses properly incurred for the benefit of the whole estate (h), including the costs of legal proceedings for the administration and protection thereof (i), even though such proceedings are instituted by the tenant for life primarily for his own benefit (k), and the cost of appointing new trustees (l).

is necessary for the trustees to appear (Re Evans' Trusts (1872), 7 Ch. App. 609); the costs of an application in an administration action for payment of income (Eady v. Watson (1864), 12 W. Fuller* (1861), 1 John. & H. 379, 383; Re Tennant (1889), 60 L. T. 488); costs of rendering an income account unnecessarily demanded by a tenant for life in an administration action (Croggan v. Allen (1882), 22 Ch. D. 101); the costs of a reference to inquire whether a tenant or life was capable of managing her own affairs, her income being reduced in the event of her being declared incapable (Winthrop v. Winthrop (1846), 15 L. J. (CH.) 403); the expenses of a receiver of the rents (Bainbridge v. Blair (1835), 4 L. J. (CH.) 207; Shore v. Shore (1859), 4 Drew. 501).

(h) Thus, the costs of carrying into execution the trust of a will (Bainbridge v. Blair, supra), and the expenses of a yearly audit and stocktaking, where capital is left in a business (Re Bennett, Jones v. Bennett, [1896] 1 Ch. 778, C. A.) are payable out of corpus.

A.; Re Ormrod's Settled Estate, [1892] 2 Ch. 318; Re Blake (a Lunatic) (1895), 72 L. T. 280, C. A.; as to costs of proceedings for the protection of settled land, see, further, pp. 649, 650, post). But expenses incurred by trustees in compelling lessees of settled land to perform their covenants to repair have been directed to be raised by mortgage of the settled land, so that the tenant for life and the remainderman should bear them in fair proportion (Re McClure's Trusts, Carr v. Commercial Union Insurance Co. (1906), 76 L. J. (CH.) 52).

(k) E.g., questions as to the proper investment of trust funds (Hume v. Richardson (1862), 8 Jur. (N. S.) 686; *Beauclerk v. A.), and costs incurred by him in settling foreclosure actions brought by the mortgagees (More v. More (1889), 37 W. R. 414; see Selby v. Selby (1838), 2 Jur. 106); costs of proceedings taken by the tenant for life for the protection of the settled estate (Re De la Warr's (Earl) Estates (1881), 16 Ch. D. 587); and see pp. 649, 650, post. But where the sole question has been one of apportionment between the tenant for life and the remainderman, the costs have been apportioned also (Reeves v. Creswick (1839), 3 Y. & C. (EX.) 715; Re Chesterfield's (Earl) Trusts (1883), 24 Ch. D. 643, 654). Where the settlor has appointed a single trustee, the costs of appointing an additional trustee are payable out of corpus (Grant v. Grant (1865), 34 Beav. 623; Re Ratcliff, [1898] 2 Ch. 352; but see Re Brackenbury's Trusts (1870), L. R. 10 Eq. 45; Finlay v. Howard (1842), 2 Dr. & War. 490); and where trustees rightly retired in consequence of the acts of the tenant for life, the costs were directed to be paid out of income (Coventry v. Coventry (1837), 1 Keen, 758); and see title TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES.

Costs which ought to be borne by capital may be retained out of income by the trustees until they can be raised out of capital (m), but the tenant for life is entitled to have such costs defrayed by an immediate sale (a).

Fines, fees, and expenses on the admission of new trustees to copyholds must be borne by the tenant for life and those in remainder in proportion to their respective interests (b).

SUB-SECT. 2.—Duty of Tenant for Life to Keep Down Interest.

1086. Apart from any question arising on the special terms of the instrument creating the settlement, a tenant for life is under no obligation to discharge any portion of the principal of paramount incumbrances (c), but he is bound as between himself and the remaindermen (d) to keep down the interest accruing during his lifetime to the extent of and out of the rents and profits received by him (e). If the rents are at any time insufficient to keep down the interest, subsequent rents arising during the lifetime of the tenant for life are applicable to liquidate arrears accruing during his own life tenancy (f), and, if part of the property is sold, principal, interest and costs due on the mortgage being then paid off out of the proceeds, the rents of the unsold portion subsequently received by the tenant for life remain liable as between himself and the remainderman to recoup amounts paid out of capital in satisfaction of arrears of interest (g).

The obligation to keep down interest applies though there is an ultimate limitation to the tenant for life in fee (h), or though he has an absolute power of appointment, by reason of which he might make the estate his own (i). A purchaser of the estate of the tenant for life, although himself the mortgagee, is bound to discharge his obligations (k).

If real estate is charged by will with payment of debts, and subject thereto is settled, every tenant for life must keep down all the interest upon all the debts bearing interest which are ascertained to be a charge upon such estate (l) from the day of the testator's death (m), and also pay all interest payable on any legacies charged on the estate (n).

The liability of the tenant for life is not personal, but is a charge on his estate, and if he fails to keep down interest, future rents and profits payable during his tenancy for life are liable to recoup to the remainderman the full amount of his default (o), and he is not entitled to have any portion of the settled estates sold for the purposes of paying off interest and arrears (p). He may, however, have an incumbrance paid off by sale if the rents are insufficient to keep down the interest (q).

The remainderman is entitled to be recouped arrears of interest out of the assets of a deceased tenant for life to the extent of the rents received during the life-tenancy (r), subject to any set-off that there may be in respect of capital charges paid by the tenant for life (a). He is not entitled, however, to have arrears of interest which have accrued during a previous life-tenancy discharged by a subsequent tenant for life out of the rents and profits.

Such arrears are primarily a charge on the inheritance (b), and if paid by the subsequent tenant for life are repayable to him out of capital (c).

1088. If several estates are included in the same settlement, the tenant for life is bound out of the whole rents and profits to keep down the interest on charges on all the estates (d), and if a charge in respect of which arrears have arisen is paid off by means of a sale of one of the estates, he remains liable to make good the arrears out of subsequent rents received by him from any of the estates (e).

SUB-SECT. 3.—Annuities.

1089. On a gift of real estate charged with annuities, the tenant for life is bound to keep down the annuities (f); and, if he fails to do this, and the estate is sold to pay the arrears, the remainderman is entitled to have the capital recouped out of interest on the surplus of the purchase-money accruing during the life tenancy (g). But arrears unpaid at the death of a tenant for life become a charge upon and must be raised out of corpus, and the succeeding tenant for life is only bound to keep down interest thereon (h).

Annuities.

If the annuity charged on the settled estate is a debt of the settlor, the tenant for life and the remainderman must contribute to the annuity proportionately (i).

Annuity created by settlor.

SUB-SECT. 4.—Discharge of Incumbrances by Tenant for Life.

1090. A tenant for life in possession of an estate subject to a charge bearing interest, who pays the interest, although the rents and profits are insufficient to enable him to do so, may make himself an incumbrancer for the excess of his payments beyond the amount of the rents and profits; but, if he pays the interest during his life without any intimation that the rents and profits are insufficient, or that he has any intention of charging the corpus of the estate with any deficiency, his legal representatives cannot after his death set up any such charge (k).

proof.

A tenant for life who pays off a capital charge on the inheritance is primâ facie entitled to that charge for his own benefit (l); and the presumption applies equally in favour of the tenant for life if the charge is paid off by the trustees out of rents and profits (m). If successive tenants for life pay off a mortgage by instalments, the money must be repaid to them rateably in proportion to the payments made by them, and not divided among them in order of priority (n).

1091. A tenant for life is under no obligation to prove his intention to pay off the charge for his own benefit (o). The simple payment of the charge by him is sufficient to establish his primâ facie right to have the charge raised out of the estate; he is under no obligation or duty to make any declaration, or to do any act demonstrating his intention (p). In every case, what the court has to ascertain is the intention of the party paying off the charge. In the absence of evidence the intention must be gathered from what it was his interest to do, but any evidence to the contrary must be regarded (q), and the smallest demonstration that he meant to discharge the estate is sufficient (r). Such a demonstration may be made by acts as well as by words of the tenant for life, which, being against interest, are legitimate evidence even after the event (s). The burden of proving an intention to exonerate the estate, however, lies on the remainderman (a), and evidence drawn from recitals in a deed, or the form of reconveyance, may be in its turn rebutted by a long series of acts consistent only with an intention to keep the charge alive (b), or by the personal evidence of the tenant for life (c).

(c) Gifford (Lord) v. Fitzhardinge (Lord), [1899] 2 Ch. 32. On the other hand, an assignment of a charge to a trustee for the benefit of the tenant for life has been held not to keep the charge alive in the face of evidence contained in his will that he regarded it as extinguished (Re Lloyd's Estate, [1903] 1 I. R. 144). For a case where an intention to keep a charge alive was evidenced by the will, see Lysaght v. Lysaght (1851), 4 Ir. Jur. 110.

The fact that the tenant for life who pays off the charge and the remainderman stand in the relationship of parent and child is material if there is anything else to rebut the presumption that the tenant for life paid the charge off for his own benefit, but is not by itself sufficient to rebut it (d).

1092. A tenant for life who extinguishes a charge on the estate in a mistaken belief as to his own rights, is entitled on discovering his error to keep the charge alive against the inheritance (e), and a vague intention of not requiring repayment, if he should find that he could conveniently do without it, does not convert the payment into a gift for the benefit of the inheritance (f).

SECT. 8.—Adjustment of Losses between Tenant for Life and Remainderman.

1093. A tenant for life under an ordinary settlement of personal property is entitled to the whole income arising from authorised investments, notwithstanding any shrinkage or decrease of the capital value, but he is not entitled to share in any augmentation of the capital value (g); and so, in the case of the settled property producing a diminished or no income, the loss must be borne by the tenant for life, and he has no claim to have it, or any portion of it, made good out of capital (h). Thus, a tenant for life has no claim against capital in respect of loss of income by the reduction of dividends on Government stock (i), or the non-payment of interest on railway bonds where the covenant is to pay out of net earnings available, and no earnings are available, though the bonds are cumulative (k). Any loss arising from the misappropriation by a trustee of the rents of settled property must be borne by the tenant for life (l).

If, however, the authorised investment is a security, such as a mortgage, not only for principal but also for interest, then, notwithstanding any payment of interest to the tenant for life, he has a right as against the remainderman to have arrears of interest charged upon the security, and the proceeds of the insufficient security must be apportioned in the proportions which the amount due for capital and the amount due to the tenant for life for arrears of interest bear to one another (m). This right to apportionment is not defeated by a provision that no property not actually producing income shall be treated as producing income (n). In cases where the mortgagees enter into possession of the mortgaged property, the rents thereof, pending realisation, ought to be applied in the first place in payment of arrears of interest, and subject thereto in payment to the tenant for life of sums not exceeding the interest on the mortgages, any excess being applied as capital (o). Interest on arrears of interest is not allowed (p), but where a mortgage contained a proviso for reduction of interest on punctual payment the arrears were calculated on the full rate of interest (q).

Loss on
investment.

1094. A loss arising on the ultimate realisation of a security covering both principal and interest, the security not being an authorised investment, but one which cannot be immediately realised, must be shared between the tenant for life and the remainderman in the same way as they would have shared it if the loss had occurred when they first became entitled in possession to the fund, the principle being that neither shall gain an advantage over the other (r). In such cases a calculation is made of what principal sum, if invested at the date when the conversion should have taken place, would amount with interest to the sum actually recovered. Interest on this principal sum, or, in other words, the difference between such principal sum and the amount actually recovered, goes to the tenant for life and the rest is treated as principal (s).

Bebb, Re Rowlls, Walters v. Treasury Solicitor*, [1900] 2 Ch. 107, C. A. Where the sale of a leasehold circus forming part of a testator's residuary estate was postponed for the benefit of the estate, the annual profit, if any, or loss thereon was apportioned between income and capital by calculating what sum, accumulating at compound interest at 4 per cent., with yearly rests from the day appointed for conversion, would, together with such interest and accumulations, after deducting income tax, have been equivalent to the amount of such profit or loss, and crediting to or charging against capital the sum so calculated, and crediting to or

The same principle has been applied to a case of a trustee wrongfully selling out an authorised investment in Consols and investing the proceeds in an unauthorised equitable mortgage. The total amount of dividends on the Consols that the tenant for life would have received if the wrongful investment had not been made and the value of the Consols at the death of the tenant for life, which was the proper time of distribution of the fund, were ascertained, and the loss was divided between the estate of the tenant for life and the remainderman in the proportion which the total dividends that the tenant for life would have received on the Consols bore to the value of the Consols at the death, the executor giving credit for interest actually received, but not being liable to refund any overpayment, as the tenant for life was in no way responsible for or cognisant of the breach of trust (a). If the tenant for life in such a case was responsible for the breach of trust, the remainderman would have the right to have the income received refunded to capital (b).

charging against income the rest of such profit or loss; see Re Hengler, Frowde v. Hengler, [1893] 1 Ch. 586. There does not seem to be any other case in which this principle has been applied in the apportionment of a loss, and it is difficult to see why the rents of an unsaleable leasehold were not borne by income; see Lonsdale (Earl) v. Berchtoldt (Countess) (1857), 3 K. & J. 185; Allen v. Embleton (1858), 4 Drew. 226; Re Owen, Slater v. Owen, [1912] 1 Ch. 519.

Part IX.—Statutory Powers in Relation to Settled Property.

SECT. 1.

Under the Settled Land Acts.

“Settlement.”

SECT. 1.—Under the Settled Land Acts.

SUB-SECT. 1.—Definitions.

1096. For the purposes of the Settled Land Acts (e) (sometimes referred to in this part of this title as “the Acts”), a “settlement” (f) is any deed, will, agreement for a settlement or other agreement, covenant to surrender, copy of court roll, Act of Parliament, public or private (g), or other instrument, or any number of instruments (h), under or by virtue of which instrument or instruments any land (i), or any estate or interest in land, stands for the time being limited to or in trust for any persons by way of succession (k).

(ii.) Settled Land.

1097. “Settled land” is land (l), and any estate or interest therein

(e) In this title the Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), Settled Land Act, 1884 (47 & 48 Vict. c. 18), Settled Land Acts (Amendment) Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 30), Settled Land Act, 1889 (52 & 53 Vict. c. 36), and Settled Land Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 69), are referred to as the “Settled Land Acts.”

(f) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 2 (1). This definition of settlement is incorporated into the Finance Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. 30), s. 22 (1); see title ESTATE AND OTHER DEATH DUTIES, Vol. XIII., p. 184, note (p). As to settlement by way of trust for sale, see p. 625, post.

(g) Vine v. Raleigh, [1896] 1 Ch. 37. An Act, however, which neither incorporates nor affects the limitations of a settlement, but merely confers powers of management upon the trustees thereof, is not part of the settlement (Talbot v. Scarisbrick, [1908] 1 Ch. 812).

(h) As to compound settlements, see pp. 670 et seq., post.

(i) A deed settling land upon trust for sale, with a direction to apply the sale money or the income thereof for the benefit of some person or persons for life with remainders over, is a settlement within the Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38) (ibid., s. 63); and a settlement of pure personality, where a power is given to invest in land, comes within the Acts as soon as land is purchased (Re Childs' Settlement, [1907] 2 Ch. 348).

(k) The words “stands . . . limited . . . by way of succession” have no technical force, and include the case of a jointure and portions for younger children limited to arise on or after the death of a tenant for life, and the terms of years limited to trustees to secure them (Re Mundy and Roper's Contract, [1899] 1 Ch. 275, C. A.), even in cases where the tenant for life is also entitled, subject to the jointure and portions, to the remainder in fee (Re Phillimore's Estate, Phillimore v. Milnes, [1904] 2 Ch. 460; Re Marshall's Settlement, Marshall v. Marshall, [1905] 2 Ch. 325). They do not, however, include an instrument by which land stands limited to, or in trust for, one and the same person for various estates and interests by way of succession (Re Pocock and Pranker's Contract, [1896] 1 Ch. 302), or by which land is limited to A. B. and his successors, vicars of X. (Ex parte Castle Bytham (Vicar), Ex parte Midland Rail. Co., [1895] 1 Ch. 348; Re Bath and Wells (Bishop), [1899] 2 Ch. 138), nor do they include the case of an owner in fee simple whose estate is subject to the charge of an annuity (Re Collis's Estate, [1911] 1 I. R. 267).

(l) This includes incorporeal hereditaments and an undivided share in land (Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 2 (10), (i.); see which is the subject of a settlement (m), the question whether any land is “settled land” being determined by the state of facts, and the limitations of the settlement, at the time of the settlement taking effect (n). The fact that part of an estate is settled land does not make the whole estate settled land (o).

Land, or any estate or interest in land, which by virtue of any instrument or instruments is subject to a trust or direction for sale (p), and for the application or disposal of the money to arise from the sale, or the income of that money, or the income of the land until sale for the benefit of any person for his life, or any other limited period, or for the benefit of two or more persons concurrently for any limited period, and whether absolutely or subject to a trust for accumulation of income for payment of debts, or for other purpose, is deemed to be settled land (q).

(m) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 2 (3). An estate or interest in remainder or reversion not disposed of by a settlement, and reverting to the settlor, or descending to the testator's heir, is an estate or interest coming to the settlor or heir under or by virtue of the settlement, and comprised in the subject of the settlement (ibid., s. 2 (2)), so that, where a reversion in fee is left in a settlor, a tenant for life, or a person having the powers of a tenant for life, under the Acts can sell and make a good title to the fee simple (Re Hunter and Hewlett's Contract, [1907] 1 Ch. 46; compare Re Bond, Panes v. A.-G., [1901] 1 Ch. 15).

(n) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 2 (4). As to the origin of this provision, see Re Ailesbury (Marquis) and Iveagh (Lord), [1893] 2 Ch. 345, 354. In Re Bective Estate (1891), 27 L. R. Ir. 364, the opinion was expressed that land which was originally settled land continued to be so notwithstanding that there was no tenant for life or person having the powers of a tenant for life.

(o) Re Bective Estate, supra.

(p) The trust or direction for sale need not be express (Re M'Curdy's Settled Estate (1891), 27 L. R. Ir. 395), but it must not be postponed so that it may never arise (Re Horne's Settled Estate (1888), 39 Ch. D. 84, C. A.; Re Goodall's Settlement, Fane v. Goodall, [1909] 1 Ch. 440). A trust, however, to sell as and when the trustees think fit is within the provision (Re Crips, Crips v. Tod (1906), 95 L. T. 865), and so is a trust for sale with the consent of the tenant for life (Re Wagstaff's Settled Estates, [1909] 2 Ch. 201; see Re Childs' Settlement, [1907] 2 Ch. 348; Re Iever's Settlements, [1904] 1 I. R. 492; Re Tuthill, [1907] 1 I. R. 305).

(r) “Possession” includes receipt of income (Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 2 (10) (i)).

(s) Ibid., s. 2 (5). A person who is entitled to reside in a house for life is a tenant for life within this provision, even though extensive powers of management are given to trustees (Re Llanover's (Baroness) Will, Herbert v. Freshfield, [1902] 2 Ch. 679; affirmed, [1903] 2 Ch. 16, C. A.).

life for the purposes of the Settled Land Acts (t), but such tenant for life may be constituted by two or more persons entitled as tenants in common, or as joint tenants, or for other concurrent estates or interests (u). Such persons must, however, be both beneficially entitled to possession and entitled for their lives, so that a tenant for life under the Settled Land Acts (t) is not constituted by the several objects of a discretionary trust for distribution of the rents and profits during the life of one of them (a).

If there is a tenant for life within the foregoing definitions, he is deemed to be such notwithstanding that under the settlement, or otherwise, the settled land, or his estate or interest therein, is charged or incumbered (b).

To ascertain whether there is a tenant for life the court looks only at the provisions of the instrument creating the trust for sale, and if under that instrument there is no person entitled to the income of the land till sale or the income of the proceeds of sale, there is no tenant for life (e). If the instrument does not dispose of the income of the land till sale, but makes a tenant for life of the proceeds of sale, such person, being by implication entitled to the income of the land till sale (f), is deemed to be tenant for life (g).

A term of years, however, whatever its length be, if it is merely a security for charges, does not prevent the person entitled to the income subject to the term from being in possession within the meaning of this provision (Re Jones (1884), 26 Ch. Persons life.

(4) A tenant for years determinable on life, not holding merely under a lease at a rent (r) ;

(5) A tenant for the life of another, not holding merely under a lease at a rent (s) ;

(6) A tenant for his own or any other life (t), or for years determinable on life (a), whose estate is liable to cease in any event during that life, whether by expiration of the estate, or by conditional limitation, or otherwise, or to be defeated by an executory limitation, gift, or disposition over, or is subject to a trust for accumulation of income for payment of debts or other purpose (b) ;

(r) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 58 (1) (iv.). A person entitled to receive, if she shall so long live, the rents payable by a tenant for years under an ordinary lease at a rent during the continuance of that tenant's term is not a tenant for years determinable on life within ibid., s. 58 (1) (iv.) or under ibid., s. 58 (1) (vi.) (Re Hazle's Settled Estates (1885), 29 Ch. D. 78, C. A.); and see the text, infra.

(s) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 58 (1) (v.); see title REAL PROPERTY AND CHATTELS REAL, Vol. XXIV., pp. 178, 179. The next of kin of a testator, who become entitled pur autre vie to receive the rents and profits of real estate purchased under a power in the will by virtue of the avoidance by the Accumulations Act, 1800 (39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 98), of a direction to accumulate, have collectively the powers of a tenant for life under this provision (Vine v. Raleigh, [1896] 1 Ch. 37). It was held in this case that the person having the statutory powers was constituted by the surviving next of kin and the legal personal representatives of deceased next of kin, but this view was not followed, so far as the legal personal representatives were concerned, in Re Jemmett and Guest's Contract, [1907] 1 Ch. 629, where it was held that only persons beneficially entitled come within the purview of the Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 58. The assignee of the whole estate of a tenant for life under a settlement is a tenant for the life of another, not holding under a lease at a rent, but probably he would be held by reason of the provisions of ibid., s. 50 (see pp. 636, 637, post), not to be a person having the statutory powers.

(t) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 58 (1) (vi.). A person entitled during his own or another's life to receive surplus rents from trustees who are in possession of the estates is not within this provision (Re Llanover (Baroness), Herbert v. Ram, [1907] 1 Ch. 635; Re Jones (1884), 26 Ch. D. 736, C. A.); but residuary legatees were held to be within it where there was a trust to pay an annuity to the testator's widow during widowhood and accumulate the residue of the rents during her life, even before twenty-one years had elapsed from the testator's death (Re Drinkwater's Settled Estates (1905), 49 Sol. Jo. 237). A person entitled to occupy a house during pleasure has during such occupation the powers of a tenant for life under this provision (Re Paget's Settled Estates (1885), 30 Ch. D. 161; Re Eastman's Settled Estates, [1898] W. N. 170; Re Carne's Settled Estates, [1899] 1 Ch. 324; Re Llanover's (Baroness) Will, Herbert v. Freshfield, [1902] 2 Ch. 679; affirmed, [1903] 2 Ch. 16, C. A.), unless he has precluded himself for the time being from occupying personally, e.g., by concurring in a lease of the house (Re Edwards' Settlement, [1897] 2 Ch. 412): there must, however, be a direction to permit a specified person to reside in a specified house (Re Bond's Estate, Burrell v. Bond (1904), 48 Sol. Jo. 192).

(a) It should be noted that the words "not holding merely under a lease at a rent" are not inserted here.

(b) This includes the case of a widow to whom land was devised during widowhood for the maintenance of herself and her children (Re Pollock, Pollock v. Pollock, [1906] 1 Ch. 146), and also the case of a person whose estate was suspended in the event, which happened, of a claim being enforced against the testator's estate (Williams v. Jenkins, [1893] 1 Ch. 700).

(7) A tenant in tail after possibility of issue extinct (c);

(8) A tenant by the curtesy (d), whose estate is to be deemed an estate arising under a settlement made by his wife (e);

(9) A person entitled to the income of land under a trust or direction for payment thereof to him during his own or any other life (f), whether subject to expenses of management or not (g), or until sale of the land, or until forfeiture (h) of his interest therein on bankruptcy or other event (i).

1102. If a person seised of or entitled in possession to land in his own right (k) is an infant, the land is settled land, and the infant is deemed to be the tenant for life thereof (l).

The words "other purpose" do not mean only a purpose ejusdem generis with the payment of debts, so where a testator made his son tenant for life subject to a trust for accumulation till he attained twenty-seven, the son, on attaining his majority, was held to be a person having the powers of a tenant for life within this provision (Re Llewellyn, Llewellyn v. Llewellyn, [1911] 1 Ch. 451, following Annesley v. Woodhouse, [1898] 1 I. R. 69, and Re Martyn, Coode v. Martyn (1900), 69 L. J. (CH.) 733, and distinguishing *Re Strangways, Hickley v. (d) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 58 (1) (viii.); see title REAL PROPERTY AND CHATELS REAL, Vol. XXIV., pp. 183 et seq.

(f) An interest arising under an intestacy does not come within these words (Re Llanover (Baroness), Herbert v. Ram, [1907] 1 Ch. 635). If, however, there is a direction to pay the income to a person for life, the instrument need not create a succession within the Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 2 (1) (Re Pocock and Pranker's Contract, [1896] 1 Ch. 302); see p. 624, ante. If there is a trust or direction to pay the income to several persons, they have together the powers of a tenant for life (Re Bennet, Bennet v. Bennet, [1903] 2 Ch. 136). A terminable life interest is within the provision (Re Sumner's Settled Estates, [1911] 1 Ch. 315, not following Re Llanover (Baroness), Herbert v. Ram, supra, on this point).

(g) As to what may be included in expenses of management, see Re Bentley, Wade v. Wilson (1885), 54 L. J. (CH.) 782.

(h) Forfeiture is a loss of the right to possess, and it includes cesser, or determination on bankruptcy, alienation, remarriage, or any other event (Re Sumner's Settled Estates, supra).

(i) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 58 (1) (ix.). The fact that the whole income is exhausted by charges does not prevent the person who would be entitled to it, if there were any, from having the powers of a tenant for life under this provision (Re Jones (1884), 26 Ch. D. 736, C. A.; Re Cookes' Settled Estates, Cookes v. Cookes, [1885] W. N. 177). A person entitled in remainder after a valid trust for accumulation has not the powers of a tenant for life, his estate not being in possession (Re Strangways, Hickley v. Strangways, supra); secus, if the term is in the nature of an incumbrance which may be redeemed at any moment (Re Clitheroe Estate (1885), 31 Ch. D. 135, C. A.).

(k) The estate must not be contingent (Re Horne's Settled Estate (1888), 39 Ch. D. 84, C. A.); but an infant who has a vested equitable estate in land, liable to be divested on death under the age of twenty-one, is within this provision (Re James (1884), 51 L. T. 596). The shares of infants under the Statute of Distribution (22 & 23 Car. 2, c. 10) in lands forming part of a partnership estate, which lands have not been converted, but are retained in specie, are within these words (Re Wells (1883), 48 L. T. 859).

life, is an infant, or if an infant would, if he were of full age, be a tenant for life or have the powers of a tenant for life (m), the powers of a tenant for life may be exercised on behalf of the infant by the trustees of the settlement (n), and if there are none, then by such person (o) and in such manner as the court, on the application of a testamentary or other guardian or next friend of the infant, either generally or in a particular instance orders (p).

1103. Where a married woman who, if she had not been a married woman, would have been a tenant for life or had the powers of a tenant for life, is entitled for her separate use, or is entitled by virtue of any statute, passed or to be passed, for her separate property, or as a feme sole, then she, without her husband, has the powers of a tenant for life (q). If she is otherwise entitled, she and her husband together have the powers of a tenant for life (r).

All provisions referring to a tenant for life and a settlement and settled land extend to the married woman without her husband, or to her and her husband together as the case may require, and to the instrument under which her estate or interest arises and to the land therein comprised (s).

The married woman may execute, make, and do all deeds, instruments, and things necessary or proper for giving effect to these provisions (t), and a restraint on anticipation does not prevent the exercise of any of her statutory powers (a).

(m) This includes the case of an infant entitled to an estate tail contingently on attaining twenty-one (Re Brabazon's Estate, [1909] 1 I. R. 209).

(n) As to who are trustees of the settlement, see pp. 631, 632, post. The words include trustees appointed by the court for the purposes of the Acts under the Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 38 (Re Dudley's (Countess) Contract (1887), 35 Ch. D. 338). Where the infant was domiciled in Australia, the court, on proof that a sale was for the infant's benefit, appointed trustees, who were resident in Australia, to carry out the sale and receive the purchase-money (Re Simpson, Re Whitchurch, [1897] 1 Ch. 256, C. A.).

(o) The court has declined to appoint a person who was a co-owner of the property, but has appointed an independent person and directed the infant's share of the proceeds of sale to be paid into court (Re Greenville Estate (1883), 11 L. R. Ir. 138).

(p) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 60; see, further, title INFANTS AND CHILDREN, Vol. XVII., pp. 94, 95. As to infant married women, see note (q), infra.

(q) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 61 (2). Ibid., ss. 1—60, do not apply in the case of a married woman (ibid., s. 61 (1)): the case of an infant married woman, therefore, seems not to be included. A married woman absolutely entitled, subject to a restraint on anticipation, is not a tenant for life by reason of the estate by the curtesy given to her husband by the common law (Bates v. Kesterton, [1896] 1 Ch. 159); but a married woman entitled for life for her separate use, without power of anticipation, with a general power of appointment by will and a gift over, in default of appointment, to herself in fee has the powers of a tenant for life (Re Pocock and Prankerd's Contract, [1896] 1 Ch. 302). As to the rights of a married woman over property generally, see title HUSBAND AND WIFE, Vol. XVI., pp. 321 et seq., 376 et seq.; and, as to restraint on anticipation, see ibid., pp. 359 et seq.

1104. Where a tenant for life, or a person having the powers of a tenant for life, is a lunatic (b), the powers of a tenant for life may be exercised in his behalf by the committee or quasi-committee of his estate under an order of the judge in lunacy (c), which may be made on the application by summons, unless the judge otherwise directs (d), of any person interested in the settled land or of the committee of the estate (e).

(b) It was originally held that there was no jurisdiction to authorise the exercise of the statutory powers except where the lunatic had been so found by inquisition and a committee appointed (Re Baggs, [1894] 2 Ch. 416, n.; Re S. S. B. (a Person of Unsound Mind not so found by Inquisition), [1906] 1 Ch. 712, C. A.; Re De Moleyns' and Harris's Contract, [1908] 1 Ch. 110; but see Re X. (a Person through Mental Infirmary incapable of Managing his Affairs), [1894] 2 Ch. 415, C. A.; Re Salt, [1896] 1 Ch. 117, C. A.). Now, however, the powers of management of committees with respect to property have been extended to quasi-committees (Lunacy Act, 1908 (8 Edw. 7, c. 47), s. 1).

(c) See Lunacy Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 5), s. 108; title LUNATICS AND PERSONS OF UNSOUND MIND, Vol. XIX., pp. 412, 413.

(e) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 62; see, further, title LUNATICS AND PERSONS OF UNSOUND MIND, Vol. XIX., pp. 444 et seq. As to the committee entering into covenants for title, see ibid., p. 456; and see title SALE OF LAND, p. 427, ante.

(f) Trustees of a term with power to raise money by mortgage or any other means have not a power of sale of the settled land (Re Carne's Settled Estates, [1899] 1 Ch. 324).

(g) Settled Land Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 69), s. 16. "Comprised in" means "at any time comprised in," and, therefore, includes land not originally subject to the trusts of the settlement, but subsequently purchased by the trustees out of personalty (Re Moore, Moore v. Bigg, [1906] 1 Ch. 789).

(h) If a compound settlement (see pp. 670, 671, post) consisting of an original settlement and a resettlement is created by a tenant for life and a tenant in tail male, who are together owners with absolute dominion over the settled estates, they are competent to appoint trustees of the compound settlement for the purposes of the Settled Land Acts (Re Spearman Settled Estates, [1906] 2 Ch. 502), but not if they are not in complete control of the property, e.g., by reason of a jointure and portions subsisting under the original settlement, which have priority over the resettlement (Re Spencer's Settled Estates, [1903] 1 Ch. 75).

(i) See note (e), p. 624, ante.

(j) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 2 (8); and see p. 661, post. Trustees for the purposes of the Acts are trustees of the settlement, not of the lands subject thereto: consequently, trustees appointed to be trustees for the purposes of the Acts by the court in Ireland of a settlement which then comprised only land in Ireland did not cease to be trustees of the settlement for the purposes of the Acts by reason of the sale of all the land sale, or power of consent to the exercise of a future power of sale, are included (k), and it is immaterial that the power or trust is to take effect only after the death of one of the trustees (l), or that one or both the trustees are themselves tenants for life (m).

The fact that the trust or power is only exercisable with the consent of the tenant for life does not make any difference (n).

The power of sale must be general and not limited, that is, it must be a power exercisable at any time and for any purpose, and not a power exercisable in a contingency and for a particular purpose (o).

If realty is settled by reference to the trusts of personalty, a power to vary investments makes the trustees of the personalty trustees with a power of sale of the settled realty (p), and a power to vary or transfer securities has been held to imply a power to sell ground rents which were an investment authorised by the settlement (q).

1106. The statutory provisions as to the trustees of a settlement apply to the surviving or continuing trustees of the settlement for the time being (r), except that capital money arising under the Act (s) must not be paid to fewer than two persons as trustees of a settlement, unless the settlement authorises the receipt of capital trust money of the settlement by one trustee (t).

Ir. 172, it was held that trustees having a power of sale which could only be exercised with the consent of a person other than the tenant for life, which consent could not be obtained, were not trustees for the purposes of the Acts, and they were appointed such. This case was, however, decided before Constable v. Constable, supra, and it seems doubtful whether it would now be followed, at any rate in England.

A power in the settlement to the trustees or trustee to act and to receive or give receipts for capital money has been held to enable a sole surviving trustee to give receipts for capital money arising under the Act (Re Garnett Orme and Hargreaves' Contract, supra). In all cases where the donee of the power of appointing new trustees can either appoint under the Trustee Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 53), s. 10, or under the combined effect of that provision and the Public Trustee Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 5), s. 5 (see title TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES), in the event of the Public Trustee being appointed sole trustee of the settlement, either by the donee of the power or by the court, the settlement must be read as

As regards land in the County Palatine of Lancaster, the powers of the court may be exercised by the Court of Chancery of the County Palatine (b).

The Settled Land Act Rules, 1882, r. 2, applies to an application for payment out of court of capital money arising under the Act (see note (f), infra), even though the sum exceeds £1,000, but if a sum which is derived from a different source and exceeds £1,000 is in court, a petition should be presented for its payment out, though the money is applicable as capital money arising under the Act (see note (f), infra) and it is proposed so to apply it (Re Torry Hill Estate, Pemberton v. Pemberton, [1909] 1 Ch. 468). As to the procedure, see title PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE, Vol. XXIII., pp. 131, 191, 192.

(e) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 46 (6). Costs have been allowed where the application was unsuccessful (Re Horne's Settled Estate (1888), 39 Ch. D. 84, C. A.), and, on the other hand, the costs of a successful application have been ordered to be paid by the tenant for life (Re Bagot's Settlement, Bagot v. Kittoe, [1894] 1 Ch. 177). Where trustees are the applicants the ordinary rule as to their costs is followed. Where trustees concurred in an application as to improvements without appearing separately, the court declined to allow their costs out of the estate; see Re Broadwater Estate (1885), 33 W. R. 738, C. A. Where trustees acted reasonably in taking different views, they were allowed separate costs; see Re Ailesbury's (Marquis) Settled Estates, [1892] 1 Ch. 506, 548, C. A.

(f) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 2 (9). For purposes of convenience capital money arising under the Settled Land Acts, or any of them (see note (e), p. 624, ante), is also thus referred to in this title.

money arising under the Settled Land Acts (g), and receivable for the trusts and purposes of the settlement, and may arise in the following ways:—

(1) By reason of the exercise of the statutory powers (h).

(2) Where, under a settlement, money is in the hands of trustees, and is liable to be laid out in the purchase of land to be made subject to the settlement (i), then in addition to such powers of dealing therewith as the trustees may have independently of statute, they may, at the option of the tenant for life (j), invest or apply the same as capital money arising under the Act (k).

Money liable to be laid out in the purchase of land to be made subject to the settlement includes money bequeathed to trustees on trust to be laid out in land in strict settlement (l), the proceeds of sale of settled land directed by an order of court to be invested in Consols pending the purchase of other hereditaments to be settled in the same manner as the land that was sold (m), money the investment of which in land is deferred (n), a sinking fund to replace a sum raised by mortgage for the purposes of improvements on settled estates (o), and money subject to some disposition under which it may be, although it is not bound to be, laid out in the purchase of land (p), or of some particular parcel of land (q), or of freehold ground rents (r).

money may be invested or applied as capital money arising under the Act, on the like terms, if any, respecting costs (a) and other things, as nearly as circumstances admit, and, notwithstanding anything in the Settled Land Acts (b), according to the same procedure as if the modes of investment or application authorised by the Settled Land Acts (b) were authorised by the statute under which the money is in court (c). Such money may be paid out to the trustees of the settlement at the request of the tenant for life (d). Reason must be shown for supposing that the payment will be to the advantage of the settlement. There is no jurisdiction to impose as a condition of such payment out that the trustees shall give notice to the remainderman of all proposed investments or other applications of the money, although it may be right that they should give such notice (e).

SUB-SECT. 2.—Characteristics of Statutory Powers.

(i.) Fiduciary.

1110. In exercising the statutory powers (f) a tenant for life must regard the interests of all parties entitled under the settlement, and is deemed in relation to such exercise to be in the position and to have the duties and liabilities of a trustee for those parties (g). It follows that a purchaser who knows that the tenant for life is exercising a statutory power improperly, and is aware that what the tenant for life is doing would amount to a breach of trust, has a right to decline to complete (h).

The tenant

It is no objection to a proposed transaction that it will benefit the glebe land (Ex parte Castle Bytham (Vicar), Ex parte Midland Rail. Co., [1895] 1 Ch. 348), and of land belonging to a municipal corporation (Ex parte City of London Corporation, Ex parte West Ham Corporation (1901), 17 T. L. R. 232).

(g) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 53. The tenant for life, is however, a trustee for the parties interested under the settlement only according to their rights as created by the settlement: the statutory provision does not create in favour of the remaindermen a trust to apply any moneys in a manner in which the settlor has not directed that they shall be applied (Re Lacon's Settlement, Lacon v. Lacon, [1911] 2 Ch. 17, C. A.).

tenant for life personally, and may be to the detriment of the remaindermen (i), especially where the evidence adduced on behalf of the remaindermen is speculative evidence of a future increase of the value of the settled property, for it is the right of the tenant for life to derive any benefit he can from his estate (k). But he must not act unjustly towards those whose interests he is bound to protect (l), including the tenants on the estate (m) and existing incumbrancers (n). Moreover, the exercise by the tenant for life of his powers must be bonâ fide for the benefit of the estate as a whole, and not for the purpose of obtaining a benefit for himself or some person connected with him, such as his wife, at the expense of the remaindermen (o); and he is not justified in forwarding his private views to their detriment (p). It necessarily follows that, if a bribe is given to induce the tenant for life to exercise his powers, the transaction can be set aside by the remaindermen, whether they are damnified or not (q).

The statute, however, although it imposes on the tenant for life the duties of a trustee, does not confer on him the rights of a trustee as to, for instance, his costs (r).

(ii.) Inalienable.

1111. A tenant for life may make any arrangement that he pleases for disposing of his beneficial interest (s), but a contract by him not to exercise his statutory powers is void (t). The statutory powers are incapable of assignment (a), or release, and do not pass to an assignee of the tenant for life, but remain exercisable by the tenant for life after and notwithstanding any assignment, by operation of law or otherwise, of his estate or interest under the settlement (b), even though the effect of the assignment may be partially (c) or wholly (d) to merge the life estate, provided that the settlement still subsists (e), but, if the effect of the merger of a first life estate is to accelerate and bring into possession a second life estate, the person entitled thereto becomes tenant for life with all the statutory powers (f).

The rights, however, of an assignee for value (g) are not to be affected without his consent (h), except that, unless the assignee is actually in possession, his consent is not requisite for the making of leases by the tenant for life, provided that such leases are in conformity with the statutory requirements (i).

1112. Notwithstanding anything in a settlement, the exercise by a tenant for life of his statutory powers cannot occasion a forfeiture (k). If in a settlement, whether made before or after, or partly before and partly after, the commencement of the Settled Land Acts (l), a provision is inserted purporting or attempting, by way of direction, declaration or otherwise, to forbid a tenant for life to exercise any statutory power, or attempting, or tending, or intended, by a limitation, gift, or disposition over of settled land, or of other real or any personal property (m), or by the imposition of any condition (n), or by forfeiture, or in any other manner whatever, to

(h) The consent of a mortgagee of a tenant for life need not be given by his concurrence in the conveyance on sale (Re Dickin and Kelsall's Contract, [1908] 1 Ch. 213): it is sufficient if it be given in writing, which writing may be the contract for purchase, if the mortgagee himself is the purchaser (Re Kingsley and Holder's Contract (1903), 115 L. T. Jo. 201). A tenant for life who has assigned his life estate and agreed to exercise his statutory powers when requested to do so by his assignee, is entitled to obtain proper advice on being requested to exercise the powers, but not to initiate a scheme (*Re Hope, Tarleton v. prohibit or prevent him from exercising, or to induce him to abstain from exercising, or to put him in a position inconsistent with his exercising any statutory power, that provision, so far as it tends to have such operation, is deemed to be void (o), and an estate or interest limited to continue so long only as a person abstains from exercising any power takes effect as an estate or interest to continue for the period for which it would continue if that person were to abstain from exercising the power, discharged from liability to determination or cesser by or on his exercising the same (p).

Effect of gift over on non-compliance with condition.

It follows that a gift over on failure to comply with a condition as to residence in a particular house may be defeated by the exercise of the statutory powers (g), and it is immaterial that the gift over is of property settled by a person other than the original settlor by an instrument other than the original settlement (r). Such a condition, however, is void only so far as it is a fetter on the exercise of the statutory powers (s), and a testator can oblige a tenant for life to reside in a mansion until it shall be disposed of by exercise of the statutory powers, and his failure to comply with this condition causes him to forfeit his interest (a).

(i.) Notice.

Notices.

1113. A tenant for life, when intending to make a sale, exchange, partition, lease, mortgage, or charge, must give notice (b), which may be notice of a general intention (c), of his intention in that behalf

(o) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 51 (1). A provision that the tenant for life of a leasehold house while in occupation thereof shall be free from all outgoing does not tend to induce the tenant for life to refrain from exercising the statutory power of sale, notwithstanding that on a sale the equivalent of this benefit would be lost (Re Simpson, Clarke v. Simpson, [1913] W. N. 25).

(b) The notice must be given by registered letters addressed to the trustees, severally, and to the solicitor for the trustees, if any such solicitor is known to the tenant for life (Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 45 (1)). A distinction is drawn between the making of the sale, exchange, partition, lease, mortgage or charge, and the making of the contract, and if the notice is given before either one of these two things it is good (Marlborough (Duke) v. Sartoris (1886), 32 Ch. D. 616, 621), and it is no objection that the notice given did not expire till after the contract became binding between the parties (ibid.). As to the giving of notice by the committee of a lunatic tenant for life, see title LUNATICS AND PERSONS OF UNSOUND MIND, Vol. XIX., p. 444.

(c) Settled Land Act, 1884 (47 & 48 Vict. c. 18), s. 5, which altered the law as laid down in Re Ray's Settled Estates (1884), 25 Ch. D. 464. At the

Such a lease may be made without notice, and notwithstanding that there are no trustees of the settlement for the purposes of the Settled Land Acts (e).

SECT. I.
Under the Settled
Land Acts.

The notice is not a mere formality, as if the tenant for life attempted to commit a fraud, for example, by proposing to sell the property for something very much below its real value, it would be the duty of the trustees to come to the court and ask for an injunction (f). Consequently, if there are no trustees for the purposes of the Settled Land Acts (g), a tenant for life may be restrained from exercising any of the powers mentioned until trustees have been appointed (h), and, if the sanction of the court is required to such exercise, an application for leave will be ordered to stand over till trustees have been appointed (i).

Notice not a mere formality.

1114. A person dealing in good faith with the tenant for life is not concerned to inquire respecting the giving of any notice to the trustees (k). Default in giving notice to the trustees is not a defect in the title of the tenant for life (l), nor is the non-existence of trustees, unless the transaction involves the payment of capital money, which must be paid either to the trustees or into court at the option of the tenant for life (m), and, since he can only exercise his option if there are trustees, the person paying the capital money is thus bound to ascertain that there were trustees to whom it might be paid (n). But a person dealing with the tenant for life, if he knows that there are no trustees, is probably justified in refusing to complete, even though no capital money has to be received by them (o); and a purchaser who knows that there are no trustees in existence cannot be compelled to pay his purchase-money into court, though he would get a good title if he did so in ignorance of the non-existence of the trustees (p). An agreement

(d) Settled Land Act, 1884 (47 & 48 Vict. c. 18), s. 7 (i). The effect of this provision is that the person deemed to be tenant for life is not entitled as a matter of course to an order (Re Tuthill, [1907] 1 I. R. 305), but if the court thinks that he is the proper person to exercise the power, the trustees are displaced (Re Harding's Estate, [1891] 1 Ch. 60; Re Bagot's Settlement, Bagot v. Kittoe, [1894] 1 Ch. 177). The court, in the exercise of its jurisdiction under this provision, has declined to sanction a lease when part of the consideration for the lease was that the lessee should expend a specific sum on repairs such as a landlord is usually expected to do (Re Daniell's Settled Estates, [1894] 3 Ch. 503, C. A.), though consent is not refused merely because a tenant for life will obtain a personal advantage by the exercise of the power (Re Iever's Settlements, [1904] 1 I. R. 492, (3 Edw. 7, c. 37), s. 48, becoming the absolute property of the tenant for life; but see Re Tuthill, supra). the trustees of the settlement, nor any person other than a person having leave, may execute any trust or power created by the settlement for any purpose for which leave is by the order given to exercise a statutory power (h). The order may be registered as a lis pendens against the trustees of the settlement (i), but until registration any person dealing with the trustees, or any other person acting under the trusts or powers of the settlement, is not affected by the order (k).

An application for an order may be made by the tenant for life, or by the persons who together constitute the tenant for life, and an application to vary or rescind an order, or to make any new or further order, may be made also by the trustees of the settlement, or by any person beneficially interested under the settlement (l).

(1) To the cutting and sale of timber by the tenant for life (p).

(q) "Lease" includes the lease of an easement over the park or grounds (Sutherland (Dowager Duchess) v. Sutherland (Duke), [1893] 3 Ch. 169, 194; Pease v. Courtney, [1904] 2 Ch. 503, 510).

(r) A house usually occupied as a farm-house, or a house the site of which and the pleasure grounds and park and lands, if any, usually occupied therewith, do not together exceed twenty-five acres in extent, is not to be deemed a principal mansion-house (Settled Land Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 36), s. 10 (3)). If two estates are settled by the same settlement, with a mansion-house on each, there may be two principal mansion-houses on the settled land (Gilbey v. Rush, [1906] 1 Ch. 11), but it is competent for the court at any time to say whether or not a particular house is the principal mansion-house, and the court, having regard to the state of facts existing at the date of the application to it, may come to the conclusion that a house, though formerly a principal mansion-house, has ceased to be such (Re Wythes' Settled Estates, [1908] 1 Ch. 593).

(s) The word "park" is not used in the sense of an ancient legal park, but according to its ordinary meaning in common parlance (Pease v. Courtney, [1904] 2 Ch. 503). The park need not be usually occupied with the principal mansion-house, the words "usually occupied therewith" applying merely to the words "lands, if any," immediately preceding them (ibid.; but see Bruce (Lord Henry) v. Ailesbury (Marquis), [1892] A. C. 356, 360).

1117. The consent of the trustees must be the consent of both trustees (u), given at the time and with reference to the particular transaction proposed, but it need not be in writing, and it is immaterial whether it is expressed orally or otherwise to the parties. Provided that it is given to the actual transaction proposed, it makes no difference that it was given in the belief that the house affected was not the principal mansion-house (a).

1118. The court in sanctioning a sale is bound to consider the interests of the persons entitled under the settlement, but in the Settled Land Acts (b) the paramount object of the legislature is the well-being of the settled land, and the public interests, in the sense of the interests of those who live upon the soil, ought to outweigh all considerations of sentimental interest in the family (c). The facts that the estate is not an old family estate and that the settlor has directed a sale on the death of the tenant for life may make the court readier to consent to a sale (d), but, on the other hand, the consent is not refused merely because the settlor in creating the settlement has annexed a qualification that the mansion-house shall not be sold (e), or a condition as to residence (f). If, however, the tenant for life has mortgaged his life interest to its full value, the court declines to make an order to sanction a sale without the consent of the mortgagees being obtained thereto, and without full information as to the proposed sale (g).

1119. The same principles apply to the exercise of the statutory power of leasing, the consent of the court being required to any exercise of such power, and a condition as to residence is inoperative to prevent such exercise (h).

SECT. 1.
Under the Settled
Land Acts.

1121. The investment or other application by the trustees must be made according to the direction of the tenant for life (o). The trustees are bound to see that the proposed application is for an authorised object, and they are entitled to be satisfied that the direction is given on proper professional advice (p), but, so long as the tenant for life really and honestly exercises his discretion, he cannot be controlled by the trustees or by the court (q). The court may, however, interfere to prevent a tenant for life, who in these matters is in the same position as a trustee, from investing on a security which is not suitable, even although it is within the words of the power (r).

Application
by, and duty of, trustees.

In default of any direction by the tenant for life, the investment or other application must be made according to the discretion of the trustees, subject to any consent required or direction given by the settlement with respect to the investment or other application by the trustees of trust money of the settlement (s).

Discretion of trustees.

All investments must be in the names or under the control of the trustees (s).

Investment.

If the capital money is paid into court, the investment, or other application under the direction of the court, must be made on the application of the tenant for life or of the trustees (t). The money is not justified in paying purchase-money by the direction of the tenant for life not to the trustees but to an incumbrancer in order to pay off an incumbrance which is prior to the settlement, even where the purchase-money is insufficient to discharge the incumbrance (Re Norton and Las Casas' Contract, [1909] 2 Ch. 59). (p) Re Coleridge's (Lord) Settlement, [1895] 2 Ch. 704; Re Hotham, Hotham v. Doughty, [1902] 2 Ch. 575, C. A. may be paid out to the trustees of the settlement for the purposes of the Settled Land Acts (u), although the tenant for life has in the first instance exercised his option to have it paid into court (a); but there is no jurisdiction to order capital money to be paid to trustees residing abroad, even though all the beneficiaries are resident in a foreign country (b).

An investment, or other application, of capital money cannot, during the life of the tenant for life, be altered without his consent (c).

1122. If capital money arising under the Act (d) is purchase-money paid in respect of a lease for years, or life, or years determinable on life, or in respect of any other estate or interest in land less than the fee simple, or in respect of a reversion dependent on any such lease, estate, or interest, the trustees of the settlement, or the court, and, in the case of the court, on the application of any party interested in that money, may require and cause it to be laid out, invested, accumulated and paid in such manner as in the judgment of the trustees or of the court will give to the parties interested in that money the like benefit therefrom as they might lawfully have had from the lease, estate, interest or reversion in respect whereof the money was paid or as near thereto as may be (e).

1123. Capital money arising under the Act (d) may, subject to payment of claims properly payable thereout and to the application thereof for any special authorised purpose for which it was raised (f), be applied for the following purposes:—

(1) In payment for any authorised improvement (g) in accordance Cottrell* (1885), 28 Ch. D. 628); and see title COMPULSORY PURCHASE OF LAND AND COMPENSATION, Vol. VI., p. 123. A mortgage of a long term is a mortgage affecting the inheritance (l). A mortgage of part of the land may be discharged out of capital money arising from another part (m), even when the two parts are settled by different instruments (n), or in the actual event devolve on different persons (o); and capital money arising from the proceeds of sale of chattels settled to devolve with land may be applied in discharge of incumbrances affecting the inheritance of the land, by reference to the limitations of which, though by another instrument, the chattels are settled, notwithstanding that different persons may become entitled to the proceeds of the chattels and to the land (p).

(l) Re Frewen, Frewen v. James, supra, where NORTH, J., held that a mortgage of a long term was an incumbrance affecting the inheritance on two grounds: (1) that if the mortgagee foreclosed he would have the power of acquiring the fee as being possessed of a long term not subject to any equity of redemption, and if he did acquire the fee it could not be said that his incumbrance was one which did not affect the inheritance; (2) that the tenant for life had the power of selling the entire fee free from incumbrances. With regard to the second reason, the mortgage having been to secure a sum of money actually raised by way of portions under a power in that behalf contained in the settlement, the tenant for life seems not to have had the power to sell the land discharged from it (Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 20 (2) (ii.); Re Keck and Hart's Contract, [1898] 1 Ch. 617, 624). The first reason seems to apply only to a term which, as originally created, was for not less than 300 years, as otherwise it could not be enlarged into a fee simple; see title REAL PROPERTY AND CHATTELS REAL, Vol. XXIV., p. 268. But inasmuch as a mortgage of a term, however short, seems to be an incumbrance on the settled land which could be discharged by a mortgage of the fee (see Settled Land Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 69), s. 11; p. 661, post), it is possible that the court would allow such a mortgage to be discharged out of capital money, on the principle that what may be done in two steps may be done in one.

So much of a charge on land (q) for expenses incurred by a local authority in sewerage, paving, and flagging new streets as represents capital, although payable by instalments, may be paid out of capital money (r), but not a terminable rentcharge of which the tenant for life is bound to pay the instalments (s), unless it has been created in pursuance of an Act of Parliament with the object of paying off any money advanced for the purpose of defraying the expenses of an authorised improvement (t).

The tenant for life may direct the application of capital money arising under the Act (a) in discharge of incumbrances, notwithstanding that his interest is subject to a term created by the settlement for that purpose, provided that his direction is bonâ fide and in the interest of all parties (b). A purchaser is not, however, justified in paying his purchase-money, at the request of the tenant for life, to an incumbrancer who has priority over the settlement (c).

1124. Capital money arising under the Act (a) may also be applied:—

(1) In investment on Government securities, or on other securities on which the trustees of the settlement are by the settlement or by law authorised to invest trust money of the settlement, or on the security of the bonds, mortgages, or debentures, or in the purchase of the debenture stock, of any railway company in Great Britain or Ireland incorporated by special Act of Parliament and having for ten years next before the date of investment paid a dividend on its ordinary stock or shares, with power to vary the investment into or for any other such securities (d).

(2) In payment to any person absolutely entitled or empowered to give an absolute discharge (e).

agricultural improvements (a), or in the provision of dwellings for the working classes (b), or in paying estate duty in respect of property comprised in the settlement (c).

(iii.) Expenses Incurred in the Execution of the Acts.

Costs incurred by tenant for life.

1125. The tenant for life is entitled to be paid out of capital money arising under the Act (d) the costs incurred but not recovered by him of an unsuccessful action by the remaindermen to prevent his exercising his statutory power of sale (e), and also the costs of a wholly or partially unsuccessful attempt to sell (f). If the tenant for life consists of several persons, each is entitled to employ his own solicitor in completing a sale, and to have his separate costs out of the purchase-money (g). An estate agent's commission for procuring a building lease for a long term is payable out of capital money (h), but commission on a short letting is an income charge, which cannot be thrown on capital (i); and an intention to deal with portions of an estate does not enable a tenant for life to obtain out of capital money payment of the costs of making an elaborate survey of the whole estate (k). The costs of obtaining the consent of the mortgagees of the life estate to a sale, although costs incidental to the exercise of the statutory power, ought not as a rule to be directed by the court to be paid out of capital money (l); and the tenant for life must bear the cost of obtaining vacant possession of settled land for the purpose of executing an authorised improvement (m).

Costs of
to court.

1126. The court may, if it thinks fit, in its discretion order the costs of any application to it under the Settled Land Acts (n) to be paid out of the settled property (o). When the court directs that any costs be paid out of settled property, the same are, subject to the direction of the court, to be raised and paid out of capital money

SECT. 1.
Under the Settled
Land Acts.

1127. Increment value duty or reversion duty (r) which becomes payable on a sale or lease under the statutory powers, is presumably costs, charges and expenses incidental to the exercise of the statutory powers, and therefore payable out of capital (s).

Duties on land values.

1128. If the tenant for life, or any person having the powers of a tenant for life, or the trustee, is the person who is liable to pay any sums on account of either increment value duty or reversion duty (r), he is entitled to charge by deed upon the land or interest in land any amount paid by him or which he may then be or may become liable to pay in respect of those duties, and the amount of any expenditure which he may have reasonably incurred in connexion with the valuation (t), and the benefit of such charge may be transferred like a mortgage (u). But no deed executed for this purpose takes effect until notice has been given to the trustees of the settlement for the purposes of the Settled Land Acts (a).

(r) See title REVENUE, Vol. XXIV., pp. 557 et seq., 571 et seq. Underdeveloped land duty is payable out of income; see ibid., pp. 575 et seq.

(s) Increment duty on a sale is clearly so payable; see Re Smith-Bosanquet's Settled Estates (1912), 107 L. T. 191; so also is increment value duty, in respect of leased or worked minerals, and payable annually under the Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s. 22; see ibid., s. 39 (1). Mineral rights duty is primarily payable out of income, but, if the duty assessed is represented in part by annual increment value duty paid in the same year in respect of minerals, to this extent the mineral rights duty appears to be payable out of capital (ibid., s. 22 (6)); and see title REVENUE, Vol. XXIV., pp. 569, 581). It is doubtful whether reversion duty can strictly be said to be costs, charges, or expenses incidental to the exercise of the statutory powers; but a charge by the tenant for life for reversion duty would be an incumbrance redeemable out of capital, and probably the court would allow that to be done in one step which could be done in two (see note (l), p. 645, ante).

(t) As to the valuation, see title REVENUE, Vol. XXIV., pp. 559 et seq., 571 et seq. Probably this includes the costs of the opposition by the tenant for life to an unfair valuation. The question, however, whether a valuation ought to be made for this purpose is one of discretion, and if honestly exercised the court does not interfere with it (Re Knollys' Trusts, Saunders v. Haslam, [1912] 2 Ch. 357, C. A.).

T. 280); but see title LUNATICS AND PERSONS OF UNSOUND MIND, Vol. XIX., defence, petition to Parliament, parliamentary opposition or other proceeding taken or proposed to be taken for protection of settled land, or of any action or proceeding taken or proposed to be taken for recovery of land (c) being or alleged to be subject to a settlement, and may direct that any costs, charges or expenses incurred or to be incurred in relation thereto, or any part thereof, be paid out of property subject to the settlement (d). The tenant for life is not bound to obtain the sanction of the court before commencing proceedings (e), but, if he does so, it is at the risk of having payment of his costs out of capital refused (f).

Expense of opposing Bill in Parliament.

The court has also power under its general jurisdiction to order that moneys, forming part of the settled estate and subject to a trust to be laid out in the purchase of land, may be applied in repaying to the tenant for life the expenditure incurred in opposing a Bill before Parliament (g), or in an action to establish rights (h).

(iv.) Devolution of Capital Money.

Devolution of capital money.

1130. Capital money arising under the Act (i), while remaining uninvested or unapplied, and securities on which an investment of any such capital money is made, are, for all purposes of disposition, transmission and devolution, considered as land, and are held for and go to the same persons successively, in the same manner and for and on the same estates, interests, and trusts as the land wherefrom the money arises would, if not disposed of, have been held and gone under the settlement (k), and the income of the securities is paid or applied as the income of the land would, if not disposed of, have been payable or applicable under the settlement (l). An appointee under a will of land does not, however, become entitled to fines or premiums paid to the appointor in consideration of the granting of building leases by him (m).

D. 162). Costs have also been allowed of a petition by the lord of a manor to the ecclesiastical courts for a new faculty, whereby under a compromise the lord was granted certain rights of seating and burial, and of erecting memorial tablets in the south aisle of his parish church (Re Mosley's Settled Estates (1912), 56 Sol. SECT. 1.
Under the Settled
Land Acts.

(v.) Settlement of Land Acquired.

1131. Freehold land acquired by purchase, or in exchange, or on partition, must be conveyed to the uses, on the trusts and subject to the powers and provisions, which, under the settlement, or by reason of the exercise of any power of charging therein contained, are subsisting with respect to the settled land, or as near thereto as circumstances admit, but not so as to increase or multiply charges or powers of charging (d).

Freeholds.

1132. Copyhold, customary, or leasehold land must be conveyed to and vested in the trustees of the settlement on trusts and subject to powers and provisions corresponding, as nearly as the law and circumstances permit, with the uses, trusts, powers and provisions to, on and subject to which freehold land is to be conveyed as aforesaid; so nevertheless that the beneficial interest in land held by lease for years shall not vest absolutely in a person who is by the settlement made by purchase tenant in tail, or in tail male, or in tail female, and who dies under the age of twenty-one years, but shall on the death of that person under that age go as freehold land conveyed as aforesaid would go (e).

Copyholds
leaseholds.

1133. Land acquired by purchase, or in exchange, or on partition, may be made a substituted security for any charge in respect of money actually raised, and remaining unpaid, from which the settled land, or any part thereof, or any undivided share therein, has

security.

(d) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 24 (1), (2). It is a general rule of construction that the court does not impute an intention to multiply charges, or trusts in the nature of charges, upon a trust estate in the absence of anything in the particular document to be construed to show such an intention (Trew v. Perpetual Trustee Co., [1895] A. C. 264, P. C.; see p. 709, post). The provisions relating to land extend and apply as far as may be to mines and minerals, and to easements, rights and privileges over and in relation to land (Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 24 (7)). If property vested in trustees by way of security for capital money advanced on mortgage becomes, by virtue of the Statutes of Limitation (see title LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, Vol. XIX., pp. 33 et seq.) or an order for foreclosure or otherwise, discharged from the right of redemption (see title MORTGAGE, Vol. XXI., pp. 156, 293 et seq.), the trustees, if the tenant for life or any person having the powers of a tenant for life so require, instead of selling the land forming the whole or any part of such property, must make such conveyance or execute such declaration of trust as may be required for giving effect to the directions contained in the Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 24 (Conveyancing Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 37), s. 9 (1), (4)).

theretofore been released on the occasion and in order to the completion of a sale, exchange or partition (f). But where a charge (g) does not affect the whole of the settled land, then the land acquired may not be subjected thereto, unless such land is acquired either by purchase with money arising from the sale of land which was before the sale subject to the charge, or by an exchange or partition of land which, or an undivided share wherein, was before the exchange or partition subject to the charge (h).

Conveyance
of substituted security.

On land being so acquired, any person who, by the direction of the tenant for life, so conveys the land as to subject it to any charge is not concerned to inquire whether or not it is proper that the land should be subjected to the charge (i).

SUB-SECT. 5.—Power of Sale.

Power of sale.

1134. The tenant for life may sell the settled land (k), or any part thereof (l), or any easement, right, or privilege of any kind over or in relation to such land (m). This power is absolute, and may be exercised free from any restrictions on a power of sale given to the trustees by the settlement, or by a private Act of Parliament (n).

Price.

1135. Every sale must be made for the best price that can reasonably be obtained (o), and it is a breach of duty for the tenant for life to delegate his authority and enter into an agreement to sell for a price to be fixed by someone else, as, for example, by an arbitrator (p). If, however, the sale is under powers conferred by Act of Parliament for certain public purposes, for example the (m) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 3 (i). Nothing in the Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), gives any person entitled in remainder any power of any sort or description to interfere with the right of the tenant for life to sell (Wheelwright v. Walker (1883), 23 Ch. D. 752).

T. 867 (where a purchaser of the reversion from a remainderman obtained an injunction to prevent the tenant for life from selling at a less price than he himself was willing to give). The ordinary power of sale in a settlement does not authorise a sale in consideration of a rentcharge (see title POWERS, Vol. XXIII., p. 73), and a sale can only be made under the statutory power for such consideration on a grant for building purposes; see p. 656, post. SECT. 1.
Under the Settled
Land Acts.

1136. A sale may be made in one lot or in several lots, and either by auction or by private contract (s). The tenant for life may fix reserve biddings, and buy in at an auction (t). The sale may be made subject to any stipulations respecting title, or evidence of title, or other things (a). Any restriction or reservation with respect to building or other user of land, or with respect to mines and minerals, or with respect to or for the purpose of the more beneficial working thereof, or with respect to any other thing, may be imposed or reserved and made binding, as far as the law permits, by covenant, condition, or otherwise, on the tenant for life and the settled land, or any part thereof, or on the other party and any land sold to him (b).

(s) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 4 (3). If the sale is by lots, the tenant for life is vendor in relation to each of the contracts into which he eventually enters, and there is no objection in principle to his solicitors giving him notice before the sale that on all sales under a certain amount they will not act under the scale, but will make detailed charges (Re Peel's (Sir Robert) Settled Estates, [1910] 1 Ch. 389). As to sale of land, generally, see title SALE OF LAND, pp. 285 et seq., ante.

If on a sale restrictive covenants are imposed under this provision on the land sold for the benefit of the unsold settled estate, the tenant for life has no power to give the purchaser an option at any future time to obtain a release of the covenants (Palmer v. Grand Junction Waterworks Co. (1902), 86 L. T. 352).

(d) This authorises a lease of the surface of the settled land, reserving the mines and minerals (Re Gladstone, Gladstone v. Gladstone, [1900] 2 Ch. 101, C. (e) It seems to have been the view of LINDLEY, M.R. (*Re Gladstone, Gladstone v. 1138. The leasing power of a tenant for life extends to the making of (1) a lease for giving effect to a contract entered into by any of his predecessors in title for making a lease, which, if made by the predecessor, would have been binding on the successors in title (k); (2) a lease for giving effect to a covenant for renewal, performance whereof could be enforced against the owner for the time being of the settled land (l); and (3) a lease for confirming, as far as may be, a previous lease being void or voidable; but every lease, as and when confirmed, must be such a lease as might at the date of the original lease have been lawfully granted under the statutory powers or otherwise, as the case may require (m).

Statutory
of all leases.

1139. Every lease must be by deed, and must be made to take effect in possession not later than twelve months after its date (n), unless it is one for a term that does not extend beyond three years at the best rent that can be reasonably obtained without fine, and that does not exempt the lessee from punishment for waste, in which case it may be made by writing under hand only (o).

Rent.

Every lease must reserve the best rent that can reasonably be obtained (p), regard being had to any fine taken (q), and to any

If money is paid to the tenant for life to induce him to grant a lease, the rent reserved by the lease so granted cannot be considered as the best rent, although there is no evidence that a better rent could have been obtained (*Chandler v. But fines arising on the renewal of a lease where the tenant can compel a renewal are casual profits to which the tenant for life is entitled; see Brigstocke v. Brigstocke (1878), 8 Ch. D.

money laid out, or to be laid out, for the benefit of the settled land (r), and generally to the circumstances of the case (s).

Every lease must contain a covenant by the lessee for payment of the rent, which covenant must be a legal covenant that can be sued on at law (t), and a condition of re-entry on the rent not being paid within a time therein specified, not exceeding thirty days (u).

A counterpart of every lease must be executed by the lessee and delivered to the tenant for life, of which execution and delivery the execution of the lease by the tenant for life is sufficient evidence (v).

Failure to observe these conditions renders the lease void (a).

1140. A statement contained in a lease, or in an indorsement thereon, respecting any matter of fact or of calculation under the Act in relation to the lease, is, in favour of the lessee and those claiming under him, conclusive evidence of the matter stated (b).

agreeing to execute, on the land leased, an authorised improvement for or in connexion with building purposes (f).

A peppercorn or a nominal or other rent less than the rent ultimately payable may be made payable for the first five years, or any less part of the term (g).

Where the land is contracted to be leased in lots, the entire amount of rent to be ultimately payable may be apportioned among the lots in any manner, but the annual rent reserved by any lease must not be less than 10s.; the total amount of the rents reserved on all leases for the time being granted must not be less than the total amount of the rents which, in order that the leases may conform with the statutory requirements, ought to be reserved in respect of the whole land for the time being leased; and the rent reserved by any lease must not exceed one fifth part of the full annual value of the land comprised in that lease with the buildings thereon when completed (h).

A lease, however, may be an improper exercise of the power, though it conforms in terms to these provisions (i).

Options in
leases.

1142. Any building lease, and any agreement for granting building leases, may contain an option, to be exercised at any time within an agreed number of years not exceeding ten, for the lessee to purchase the land leased at a price fixed at the time of the making of the lease, such price to be the best which, having regard to the rent reserved, can reasonably be obtained, and to be either a fixed sum of money or such a sum of money as shall be equal to a stated number of years' purchase of the highest rent reserved by the lease or agreement (k). Such price when received is for all purposes capital money arising under the Act (l).

Reservation of rentcharge on grant of land for
purposes.

1143. Where on a grant for building purposes by a tenant for life the land is expressed to be conveyed in fee simple with or subject to a reservation thereof of a perpetual rent or rentcharge, the reservation operates to create a rentcharge in fee simple issuing out of the land conveyed, and having incidental thereto all statutory (m) powers and remedies for recovery thereof, and the rentcharge so created goes and remains to the uses, on the trusts, and subject to the powers and provisions which immediately before the conveyance were subsisting with respect to the land out of which it is reserved (n).

The marginal note in the printed statutes to this provision is inaccurate, as the provision does not confer any power to reserve a rentcharge on a grant in fee simple. The enactment seems to relate to rentcharges reserved on a grant in perpetuity for building purposes under the authority of the court; see p. 657, post.

exceeding thirty days (o). The best rent must be reserved, but it may be ascertained or vary according to the acreage worked or the quantities of minerals gotten (p), and a portion must be set aside as capital money, unless a contrary intention is expressed in the settlement (q).

Settled
Land Acts.

1145. Where it is shown to the court (r) with respect to the district in which any settled land is situate either that it is the custom for land therein to be leased or granted for building or mining purposes for a longer term, or on other conditions than the statutory term or conditions specified in that behalf, or in perpetuity, or that it is difficult to make leases or grants for building or mining purposes of land therein except for a longer term or on other conditions than the statutory term or conditions specified in that behalf, or except in perpetuity, the court may, if it thinks fit, authorise the tenant for life generally to make from time to time leases or grants of or affecting the settled land in that district, or parts thereof, for any term (s), or in perpetuity, at fee farm or other rents, secured by condition of re-entry or otherwise, as expressed in the order of the court, or may, if it thinks fit, authorise the tenant for life to make any such lease or grant in any particular case (t). Thereupon the tenant for life, and, subject to any direction in the order of the court to the contrary, each of his successors in title, being a tenant for life, or having the powers of a tenant for life (u), may make in any case, or in the particular case, a lease or grant of or affecting the settled land, or part thereof, in conformity with the order (a).

1146. A tenant for life may make an exchange of the settled land (b), or any part thereof, for other land, including an exchange in consideration of money paid for equality of exchange (c), and where the settlement comprises an undivided share in land, or, under the settlement, the settled land has come to be held in undivided shares, may concur in making partition of the entirety, including a partition in consideration of money paid for equality of partition (d).

Consideration.

Stipulations and conditions.

Every exchange and every partition must be made for the best consideration in land, or in land and money, that can reasonably be obtained (e), and such consideration may be the reservation of an undivided share in mines or minerals (f), but settled land in England may not be given in exchange for land out of England (g).

An exchange or partition may be made subject to any stipulations respecting title, or evidence of title, or other things (h), and on an exchange or partition restrictions or reservations may be imposed with regard to building or other user of land, or with respect to mines or minerals, as on a sale (i).

SUB-SECT. 8.—Powers as to Copyholds.

Powers to
copyholds.

1147. Where the settlement comprises a manor, the tenant for life may sell the seigniorship of any freehold land within the manor, or the freehold and inheritance of any copyhold or customary land, parcel of the manor, with or without any exception or reservation of all or any mines or minerals, or of any rights or powers relative to mining purposes, so as in every such case to effect an enfranchisement (k), which may be made with or without a regrant of any right of common or other right, easement, or privilege theretofore appendant or appurtenant to or held or enjoyed with the land enfranchised or reputed so to be (l).

Power to license leases by copy-holders.

A tenant for life may grant to a tenant of copyhold or customary land, parcel of a manor comprised in the settlement, a licence to make any such lease of that land, or of a specified part thereof, as the tenant for life is by statute empowered to make of freehold land (m).

The licence.

The licence may fix the annual value whereon fines, fees, or other customary payments are to be assessed, or the amount of those fines, fees, or payments, and must be entered on the court rolls of the manor, of which entry a certificate in writing by the steward is sufficient evidence (n).

SUB-SECT. 9.—Power to Cut Timber.

SUB-SECT. 10.—Power to Sell Heirlooms.

1149. Where personal chattels are settled on trust so as to devolve with land (t) until a tenant in tail by purchase is born or attains the age of twenty-one years, or so as otherwise to vest in some person becoming entitled to an estate of freehold of inheritance in the land, a tenant for life of the land (u) may sell the chattels or any of them (v).

Power to sell

The money arising from such sale is capital money arising under the Act (a), and must be paid, invested, or applied and otherwise dealt with in like manner in all respects as to other capital money arising under the Act (b), or may be invested in the purchase of

(s) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 35 (2). Until severance has been effected, the timber remains part of the inheritance and the tenant for life is not absolutely entitled to it. Consequently, on a sale of the estate with the timber, the price of the timber to be ascertained at a valuation, he is in the same position as a tenant for life under the old law who was impeachable for waste selling under a power, and the amount of the valuation must be considered capital money, being really an addition to the price which the purchaser agrees to pay (Re Llewellyn, Llewellyn v. Williams (1887), 37 Ch. D. 317); and see pp. 602, 603, ante.

(t) Chattels settled to devolve with a dignity, e.g., a baronetcy, are chattels settled to devolve with land according to this provision, and can be sold under it by the holder for the time being of the dignity (Re Rivett-Carnac's (Sir J.) Will (1885), 30 Ch. D. 136). Chattels settled to devolve with land are insurable by the trustees of the settlement, and the premiums may be paid out of the income of capital money in their hands (Re Egmont's (Earl) Trusts, Lefroy v. Egmont (Earl), [1908] 1 Ch. 821); and see p. 614, ante.

(u) The "land" means the land with which the chattels are to devolve, and it makes no difference that the land and chattels are settled by different instruments (Re Stafford's (Lord) Settlement and Will, Gerard v. Stafford, [1904] 2 Ch. 72). As to the settlement of chattels to devolve with land, see pp. 703 et seq., post.

(v) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 37 (1). Prior to the passing of this enactment there was no jurisdiction in the court to sell chattels settled in strict settlement (D'Eyncourt v. Gregory (1876), 3 Ch. D. 635), except for the purpose of discharging debts (Fane v. Fane (1876), 2 Ch. D. 711). The Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), does not confer any power to lease chattels, and a tenant for life who lets a house with the chattels in it under the statutory powers is not entitled to any part of the compensation recovered from the tenant in respect of chattels damaged or missing (Re Lacon's Settlement, Lacon v. Lacon, [1911] 1 Ch. 351; reversed on another point, [1911] 2 Ch. 17, C. A.).

other chattels of the same or any other nature which, when purchased, must be settled and held on the same trusts and devolve in the same manner as the chattels sold (c). But no such sale or purchase of chattels may be made without an order of the court (d). This controlling power of the court is a discretionary power, and must be exercised with regard to the circumstances of each particular case (e).

As a general rule, the circumstance that the tenant for life, who is in the position of a trustee having a discretionary power of sale which must be honestly exercised in the interest of all parties concerned (f), has incumbered his life estate under the settlement ought to be excluded from consideration by the court (g), but the court does not sanction a sale merely to relieve a tenant for life from the consequences of his own extravagance (h), or to enable him to pay succession duties and live in the mansion-house (i), or merely to increase his income (k). Moreover, as public considerations do not intervene, the court may be less ready to consent to the sale of heirlooms than to the sale of a mansion-house (l). A sale, however, has been sanctioned to enable the tenant for life to keep up his position, where he was in straitened circumstances through no fault of his own (m).

On the purchase of a new mansion-house, chattels settled to devolve with the old one may be sold if not suitable to be removed (n), and, where chattels were directed to be annexed to and at all times kept in the mansion-house, the court declined to make an order for sale of the house without a direction as to what should be done with the chattels (o). No statutory provision is made for the authority of the court being given ex post facto, but where an advantageous sale had been made a direction was given that the trustees should take no steps to recover the sold chattels (p).

On the other hand, service on a remainderman has been directed, to relieve the trustees from the sole burden of arguing the case (Re Radnor's (Earl) Will Trusts (1890), 45 Ch. D. 402, 404, C. A.).

Trustees having a power of sale of settled land, but having no power of sale of chattels settled to devolve with the land, are trustees for the purposes of the Acts for the sale of such chattels, and can give a good discharge for the purchase-money (q).

estate by mortgaging it if he thereby sacrifices the interest of existing incumbrancers upon it (e). The mortgage may be created by conveyance of the fee simple, or other estate or interest the subject of the settlement, or by creation of a term of years in the settled land or any part thereof or otherwise, and the money so raised is capital money arising under the Act (f), and must be paid or applied accordingly (f).

SUB-SECT. 12.—Ancillary Powers.

(i.) Power to Shift Incumbrances.

Power to shift
incumbrances.

1152. Where on a sale, exchange, or partition there is an incumbrance (g) affecting land sold, or given in exchange or on partition, the tenant for life, with the consent of the incumbrancer, may charge that incumbrance on any other part of the settled land, whether already charged therewith or not, and by conveyance of the fee simple, or other estate or interest the subject of the settlement, or by creation of a term of years in the settled land, or otherwise, make provision accordingly (h).

(ii.) Power to Deal with Surface and Minerals Separately.

Power to deal with surface and minerals separately.

1153. A sale, exchange, partition, or mining lease may be made either of land, with or without an exception or reservation of all or any of the mines and minerals therein, or of any mines and minerals, and in any such case with or without a grant or reservation of powers of working, wayleaves (i), or rights of way, rights of water and drainage, and other powers, easements, rights, or privileges for or incident to, or connected with mining purposes, in relation to the settled land, or any part thereof, or any other land (k).

Creation of easements.

1154. On an exchange or partition any easement, right, or privilege of any kind may be reserved, or may be granted over or in relation to the settled land or any part thereof, or other land or an easement, right, or privilege of any kind may be given or taken

(g) This includes a rentcharge created under the Improvement of Land Act, 1864 (27 & 28 Vict. c. 114) (Re Stafford (Earl) and Maples, [1896] 1 Ch. 235, C. A.); and, as to such charges, see title LAND IMPROVEMENT, Vol. XVIII., pp. 296 et seq.

(h) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 5. Incumbrances, at any rate such as might lawfully be discharged out of capital money, might on a sale be discharged by the method provided by the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 41), s. 5; see title SALE OF LAND, p. 414, ante. For forms of transfer of such incumbrance, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. VIII., pp. 578, 918.

(i) This enables the grant of a wayleave for foreign coal; in respect of such a wayleave no separate rent need be reserved and, if the circumstances of the particular case justify it, it may be granted for only a nominal rent after the cesser of the minimum rent required by a mining lease (Re Aldam's Settled Estate, [1902] 2 Ch. 46, C. A.).

Settled

(iv.) Power to Accept Surrender of Leases.

1155. A tenant for life may, for or without consideration, accept a surrender of any lease of settled land, whether made under the statutory powers or not, in respect of the whole land leased or any part thereof, with or without an exception of all or any of the mines or minerals therein, or in respect of mines or minerals or any of them (m). If compensation for a surrender is payable to the lessee, there is no statutory power which enables the tenant for life to apply capital money arising under the Act (n) for the purpose, but if on the surrender, and wholly or partly in consideration therefor, a new lease is granted, whether for the same or for any extended or other term, and whether or not subject to the same or any other covenants, provisions, or conditions, the value of the lessee's interest in the lease surrendered may be taken into account in the determination of the amount of rent to be reserved, and of the nature of the covenants, provisions, and conditions to be inserted in the new lease (o).

Power to Compensation payable to lessee.

If compensation is payable by the lessee, then, in a case outside the Settled Land Acts (p), money paid to a legal tenant for life as the consideration for accepting the surrender of a lease belongs to that life tenant (q). The reason for this, however, is that prima facie the position of a legal tenant for life is not fiduciary, and also that in cases where powers of leasing are conferred on a legal or equitable tenant for life by deed or will such powers are construed as non-fiduciary and as having no reference to the interests of the remaindermen, but only to those of the tenant for life. On the other hand, if the tenant for life accepts a surrender under the Settled Land Acts (p), he must do so in the interests not only of himself, but of the remaindermen, and if he receives a consideration for accepting it, then a court of equity distributes the money between the tenant for life and the remainderman on principles which it thinks fair (r).

Compensation

(l) Settled Land Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 69), s. 5. The words "on an exchange or partition" do not govern the whole provision, and an exchange of easements may be authorised apart from any exchange or partition of land (Re Bracken's Settlement, [1903] 1 Ch. 265). It is doubtful whether this provision authorises an exchange of easements between two settled estates (Re Brotherton, Brotherton v. Brotherton, Re Markham's Settlement (1907), 77 L. J. (CH.) 58), but such an arrangement can be carried out by cross sales of the easements (S. C. (1908), 77 L. J. (CH.) 373, C. A.).

On a surrender of a lease in respect of part only of the land or mines or minerals leased, the rent may be apportioned (s).

On a surrender, the tenant for life may make of the land or mines and minerals surrendered, or of any part thereof, a new or other lease, or new or other leases in lots (t). Such new or other lease may comprise additional land or mines and minerals, and may reserve any apportioned or other rent (u), but it must conform with the statutory requirements as to leases (v).

(v.) Power to Dedicate Land for Streets and Open Spaces.

Dedication of land for streets and 1156. On or in connexion with a sale or grant for building purposes or a building lease, the tenant for life, for the general benefit of the residents on the settled land or on any part thereof (w), may cause or require any parts of the settled land to be appropriated and laid out for streets, roads, paths, squares, gardens, or other open spaces, for the use, gratuitously or on payment, of the public or individuals, with sewers, drains, watercourses, fencing, paving, or other works necessary or proper in connexion therewith (x), and may secure the continuance of such appropriation by vesting such lands either in the trustees of the settlement or any other trustees or company or public body, and may execute any deed declaring the mode, terms, and conditions of such appropriation (a).

(vi.) Power to Contract.

1157. A tenant for life may contract to exercise the statutory powers conferred on him, that is, he may contract to make any sale, exchange, partition, mortgage or charge (b), and may, with or without consideration, vary or rescind the contract as if absolute owner, provided that the varied contract is within the statutory powers, any monetary consideration paid for such variation or rescission being capital money arising under the Act (c). He may contract to make any lease, and may vary the terms of any such lease, with or without money was directed to be treated as capital). A tenant for life who is unimpeachable for waste is entitled to damages recovered from a tenant under a lease granted under the statutory powers for breach of a covenant to repair (Re Lacon's Settlement, Lacon v. Lacon, [1911] 2 Ch. 17, C. A., reversing S. C., [1911] 1 Ch. 351); and see pp. 607, 608, ante.

He may also enter into a contract for or relating to the execution of any statutory improvement, or to do any act for carrying any statutory purpose into effect, and may vary or rescind such contract (g).

A contract made under the statutory power binds, and enures for the benefit of, the settled land, and is enforceable by and against every successor in title for the time being of the tenant for life, and may be carried into effect by such successor, who may vary and rescind it as if it had been made by himself (h). The court may on the application (i) of the tenant for life or of any such successor, or of any person interested in any contract, give directions respecting the enforcing, carrying into effect, varying or rescinding thereof (k), but it cannot adjudicate on the claims of persons not parties to the contract (l).

1159. Such a deed, to the extent and in the manner to and in which it is expressed or intended to operate and can operate under the Settled Land Acts (o) is effectual to pass the land conveyed, or the easements, rights, or privileges created, subject to all estates, interests and charges having priority to the settlement (p), but discharged from all the limitations, powers, and provisions of the settlement, and from all estates, interests and charges subsisting or to arise thereunder (q), with the exception of all such estates, interests and charges as have been conveyed or created for securing money actually raised at the date of the deed (r), and subject to all

(o) See note (e), p. 624, ante. A deed which the tenant for life has no power to grant under the Acts is not validated by this provision (Re Newell and Nevill's Contract, [1900] 1 Ch. 90, overruled on another point by Re Gladstone, Gladstone v. Gladstone, [1900] 2 Ch. 101, C. A.). The words "to the extent and in the manner to and in which it is expressed or intended to operate" mean not further or otherwise than expressed or intended. A lease, therefore, made by a tenant for life, who believes himself to be absolute owner, is valid, provided that the lease is one which could be made under the statutory powers (Mogridge v. Clapp, [1892] 3 Ch. 382, C. A.). The case of a sale is different, inasmuch as a purchaser, by reason of the provisions of the Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 22 (see p. 642, ante), could hardly pay his purchase-money without ascertaining that there were trustees to whom it might be paid (Mogridge v. Clapp, supra, at p. 400).

Examples of estates and interests having priority to the settlement are a mortgage in fee created prior to the settlement, the freehold in the case of a settlement of leaseholds, or a charge of succession duty, but not charges prior to the estate of the tenant for life but arising under the settlement (Re Ailesbury (Marquis) and Iveagh (Lord), [1893] 2 Ch. 345).

(q) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 20 (2). The land may be conveyed free from charges arising under the settlement, so long as they have not been actually raised (Re Keck and Hart's Contract, [1898] 1 Ch. 617; Re Du Cane and Nettlefold's Contract, [1898] 2 Ch. 96), even though, the settlement consisting of a series of deeds, the charges in question have been created by a deed prior to that by which the estate of the tenant for life is limited (Re Ailesbury (Marquis) and Iveagh (Lord), supra; approved in Re Mundy and Roper's Contract, [1899] 1 Ch. 275, C. A.; Re Phillimore's Estate, Phillimore v. Milnes, [1904] 2 Ch. 460; and see pp. 671, 672, post). A person whose only interest is an equitable right to redeem as trustee for the tenant for life is not a necessary party to a conveyance (Grainge v. Wilberforce (1889), 5 T. L. R. 436, 437).

(r) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 20 (2) (ii.); Re Dickin and Kelsall's Contract, supra. These include mortgages created under the statutory powers (see pp. 661, 662, ante), or under any powers for that purpose contained in the settlement (Re Dickin and Kelsall's Contract, supra, at p. 217), and charges for securing sums of money actually raised for portions (Re Keck and Hart's Contract, supra, at p. 624). They do not include mortgages on the life estate of the tenant for life (Re Dickin and Kelsall's Contract, supra, not following Re Sebright's Settled Estates (1886), 33 Ch. D. 429, 433, C. A.; Re Davies and Kent's Contract, [1910] 2 Ch. 35, C. A.; see Cardigan v. Curzon-Howe (1888), 40 Ch. D. 338, 342; Re Du Cane and Nettlefold's Contract, supra, at p. 108;

SUB-SECT. 13. Extensions of Statutory Powers.

1161. A settlor may confer on the tenant for life, or the trustees of the settlement, any powers additional to or larger than the statutory powers (c), and such additional or larger powers, as far as may be, operate and are exercisable in the like manner and with all the like incidents, effects and consequences as if they were statutory powers, unless a contrary intention is expressed in the settlement (d). The statutory powers are themselves cumulative, and nothing in the statutes conferring them takes away, abridges, or prejudicially affects any power for the time being subsisting under a settlement, or by statute (e), or otherwise exercisable by a tenant for life, or by trustees with his consent, or on his request, or by his direction, or otherwise (f).

Keating*, [1903] 1 I. R. 353), the deed was taken to mean the deed creating the charge, not the deed for effecting the conveyance. It seems doubtful whether this interpretation is consistent with what has been said in Re Keck and Hart's Contract, [1898] 1 Ch. 617, and others of the foregoing cases. The principle is that mortgagees who have actually lent their money on the security of the land are regarded as strangers to the settlement, and are not to have the security which they bargained for on the land itself transferred to the purchase-money at the will of the tenant for life (Re Mundy and Roper's Contract, supra, at p. 289).

authority enabling him," is presumed to have exercised the power which is most beneficial to him (g).

1162. In case of conflict between the provisions of a settlement and the statutory provisions (h) relative to any matter in respect whereof the tenant for life exercises or contracts or intends to exercise any statutory power, the statutory provisions prevail: accordingly, notwithstanding anything in the settlement, the consent of the tenant for life is necessary to the exercise by the trustees of the settlement, or other person, of any power conferred by the settlement (i) exercisable for any statutory purpose (k). The result is that, if the tenant for life has one power by statute and the trustees have another power under the settlement, there is a conflict between the provisions of the settlement and the statutory provisions. In such a case the tenant for life's power is paramount (l), and can be exercised free from any restraint imposed by the settlement, or by a private Act of Parliament (m); and the consent of the tenant for life is required for the exercise by the trustees of any power conferred by the settlement which embraces any of the objects embraced by any of the statutory powers (n). Where two or more persons together constitute the tenant for life, the consent of one of them suffices (o), but if undivided shares are separately settled the consent of all the tenants for life is required to the exercise by the trustees of a power of sale over the entirety (p). If, however, the settlement is one by way of trust for sale (q), any consent not required by the settlement is not to be deemed necessary to enable the trustees of the settlement, or any

(h) The provisions here referred to are provisions connected with the execution of the power, e.g., consent of a third person, not with the results of such execution: they deal with the act of execution, not with the proceeds thereof (Lonsdale (Earl) v. Lowther, supra).

(i) Powers of management conferred by a private Act of Parliament, which does not incorporate the settlement or affect the limitations of the settled land thereunder, are not powers conferred by the settlement, and may be exercised without the consent of the tenant for life (Talbot v. Scarisbrick, [1908] 1 Ch. 812).

(k) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 56 (2). The consent need not be in writing, and if there is evidence of consent a purchaser from the trustees is not entitled to insist on the tenant for life joining in the conveyance (Re Pope's Contract, [1911] 2 Ch. 442).

These cases decided that if there is a power under the settlement to pay for improvements out of income and a power under the Settled Land Acts (see note (e), p. 624, ante) to pay for them out of capital, effect will be given to the statutory power, but the statutory provisions do not override an absolute trust to pay for improvements out of income, the tenant for life in such a case being entitled only to the net balance (*Re Partington, Reigh v. On a sale, exchange, partition, lease, mortgage or charge, a purchaser, lessee, mortgagee or other person, dealing in good faith with a tenant for life, is, as against all parties entitled under the settlement, conclusively taken to have given the best price, consideration or rent, as the case may require, that could reasonably be obtained by the tenant for life, and to have complied with all the statutory requirements (u). The fact that the transaction is at an undervalue, without anything more, is insufficient to invalidate it, if the person dealing with the tenant for life acted in good faith (v), but, if he is not acting in good faith, the objection is open at the instance of the beneficiaries, not only against himself, but also against his transferees who have acquired the property without notice of the defect (a).

(i.) Their Nature.

compound
settlements.

1170. A settlement for the purposes of the Settled Land Acts (h) may consist of any number of instruments by virtue of which land stands limited to or in trust for any persons by way of succession (i).

Hotham v. Doughty, [1902] 2 Ch. 575, C. A.), and they are entitled to inquire into both the title and value of land which it is proposed to purchase (Re Theobald (1903), 19 T. L. R. 536). As to investigation of title generally, see title SALE OF LAND, pp. 341 et seq., ante.

(g) Settled Land Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 69), s. 12. This provision only authorises sales, exchanges, and partitions to or with a tenant for life; a tenant for life cannot lease to himself (Boyce v. Edbrooke, [1903] 1 Ch. 836), and the trustees have no power under the statute to grant a lease to him.

(h) See note (e), p. 624, ante.

Where a series of settlements extending over several generations has been effected by means of powers of appointment and disentailing assurances, the whole series forms one settlement, so that a tenant for life can sell settled land free from jointures created under powers prior to the deed by which his life estate was created (k). No life estate under a resettlement need be expressed to be in restoration of a life estate subsisting under an original settlement (l). Where an owner in fee of land declared trusts under which he made himself tenant for life, with trusts in remainder to pay certain annuities, and subject thereto for himself absolutely, and then by his will devised the land to a tenant for life with remainders over, the tenant for life under the settlement compounded of the trust deed and the will was able to sell the land discharged from the annuities (m). The result is that, if land at the date of the final settlement is limited by previous deeds to persons by way of succession, such words being used in no technical sense (n), the tenant for life under the final settlement can sell the land discharged from the previous limitations.

SECT. 1.
Under the Settled
Land Acts.

(ii.) Co-existing Settlements.

1171. There may be at the same time a more comprehensive settlement consisting of several deeds, and a less comprehensive settlement constituted by one of the deeds only (o). Inasmuch as the powers of a tenant for life are not capable of assignment or release and remain exercisable after and notwithstanding any assignment by operation of law or otherwise (p), it follows that several settlements within the meaning of the Settled Land Acts (q) can co-exist at the same time, and the tenant for life can exercise

(l) Re Mundy and Roper's Contract, [1899] 1 Ch. 275, C. A. In this case the tenant for life who was selling was tenant for life under the original settlement, with powers of jointuring and charging portions which he had exercised by a subsequent deed. The vendor and his eldest son executed a disentailing deed in the ordinary form and then by a resettlement the settled lands were limited to the use of the vendor for life, but this life estate was not in terms limited to him in restoration of his old life estate. It was held that, as tenant for life under the settlement compounded of the original settlement, the jointure deed, the disentailing deed, and the resettlement, he could sell the land discharged from the jointure and portions. Inasmuch as the tenant for life under both the original settlement and the resettlement was the same person, the actual point involved was narrower than that decided in Re Ailesbury (Marquis) and Iveagh (Lord), supra. But that case was expressly approved (see Re Mundy and Roper's Contract, supra, at pp. 294, 295), and it seems to follow from the reasoning that the result would have been the same if the vendor had been, not the original tenant for life, but his successor.

his statutory powers under any one of them, and the trustees for the purposes of the Settled Land Acts (r) of any one of such settlements retain their powers of receiving and giving receipts for purchase-money, notwithstanding the existence of the other settlements. Thus, if a settlement is followed by a disentailing deed and resettlement which extinguish the original life interest of the tenant for life under the settlement, there may be in existence at one and the same time three settlements for the purposes of the Acts (r), the original settlement, the resettlement, and the settlement compounded of the original settlement, the disentailing deed, and the resettlement. The tenant for life under the original settlement, if still in existence, can then sell either under the original settlement (s), or under the compound settlement (t), or under the resettlement only, but in the last case he cannot convey the estate freed from estates, interests or charges arising under the original settlement, as these have priority to the settlement under which his conveyance is made (u).

estate.

If, however, the life estate created by the resettlement is expressed to be given in restoration of the life estate limited by the original settlement, then the sole life estate that exists is the life estate under the original settlement. Consequently the tenant for life can sell either under the compound settlement (v), or under the original settlement (w); but he cannot sell under the resettlement alone, even with the concurrence of the persons having estates or interests which have priority thereto (a).

(iii.) Assignment of Life Interest on Marriage or by Way of Family Arrangement.

Position of 1172. Whenever a deed has been executed affecting the estates created by the original settlement, so that that settlement is no longer the only instrument under or by virtue of which land stands limited for the time being to or in trust for persons by way of succession, as a general rule the land may be dealt with under the statutory powers conferred by the original settlement without the appointment of trustees of the compound settlement created by the original settlement and the subsequent deed (b). Thus, dealings

In Re Domville and Callwell's Contract, supra, the Court of Appeal in Ireland seems, however, to have taken the view that if charges are created under a power reserved by a disentailing deed prior to the restoration to the tenant for life of his original life estate, such charges cannot be treated as subsisting or arising under the original settlement and that trustees of the compound settlement must be appointed, if on no other ground, on the ground that the title, as it stands, is too doubtful to be forced on a purchaser. It seems, however, doubtful whether this decision can be reconciled with the English authorities.

with his interest by a remainderman do not deprive the trustees of the original settlement of their power of receiving and giving receipts for purchase-money (c). If the new interest is brought into existence by the tenant for life himself, as, for example, if he charges the estate with a jointure (d) or portions for younger children, the trustees for the purposes of the Settled Land Acts (e) already existing do not cease to be such (f), though if the new interest is an alienation for value the tenant for life must procure the consent of his alienee (g). If, however, the instrument is one whereby the tenant for life, in consideration of marriage or as part or by way of family arrangement, not being a security for money advanced—in which case the obligation remains on the part of the tenant for life to procure the assent of his assignee (h)—makes an assignment of or creates a charge upon his estate or interest under the settlement (i), it is to be deemed not an instrument vesting in any person any right as assignee for value (k), but one of the instruments creating the settlement (l). It is not, however, one of the instruments creating the settlement for all the purposes of the Acts (e), but only to be deemed such to avoid the necessity of obtaining the consent of assignees thereunder, and it is not necessary in such a case to appoint trustees of the settlement made up of the original settlement and the additional instrument (m), though, if desired, the court has jurisdiction to appoint trustees of a settlement so compounded (n).

1173. When two estates are settled in the same way, though by different instruments, for the purposes of the Settled Land Acts (e) the two estates are to be regarded as one, the instruments taken together being the settlement for the purposes of the Acts (o). Thus, where an estate was settled by deed, and subsequently by a will moneys were directed to be laid out in the purchase of land to be settled in the same way as the estate, the moneys were applicable as capital moneys in improvements on the settled estate (p); and where land was settled by will, and then by deed money was settled in trust to purchase land to be settled on limitations identical with those of the will, though not by reference to the will, capital money arising under the settlement created by the deed was applicable in paying the cost of improvements on the land devised by the will (q).

Inasmuch as the two estates are to be regarded as one for the purposes of the Settled Land Acts (r), it follows that capital moneys arising from the estate first settled can be applied for the purposes of the estate secondly settled (s).

Where two estates are settled, whether by two instruments or one, they can be treated as one estate, notwithstanding the interposition in one set of limitations of a term of years (t), or the possibility that, owing to technical rules of law, they may ultimately devolve in different ways (u).

1174. Where a compound settlement is created by a series of settlements and resettlements, the trustees appointed by any one deed being only trustees of the settlement made by that deed (v), the court has got over any difficulty by appointing trustees for the purposes of the Acts (r) of the compound settlement (a). It is possible to declare that trustees of a settlement shall be trustees for the purposes of the Acts of all compound settlements subsequently created (b), though trustees of a compound settlement created by a later deed and earlier deeds (c) cannot be appointed by the later deed.

Even if they do constitute one settled estate, it seems difficult to imagine a case in which capital money arising from one could be applied for the benefit of another having regard to the fact that the tenant for life is a trustee for all parties interested (Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 53; see p. 635, ante).

(k) Settled Estates Act, 1877 (40 & 41 Vict. c. 18), s. 46. The Act does not extend to Scotland (ibid., s. 60). This power of leasing extends only to settlements made after the 1st November, 1856 (ibid., s. 57). No lease beyond twenty-one years is authorised of any settled estates of which the tenants in tail are by Act of Parliament restrained from barring or defeating their estates tail, or where the reversion is vested in the Crown (ibid., s. 55). A lease of copyhold land may not be granted contrary to the custom of the manor without the lord's consent (ibid., s. 56).

(l) A lease exempting the lessee from liabilities for "fair wear and tear and damage by tempest" is void as not complying with this provision (Davies v. Davies (1888), 38 Ch. D. 499). As to waste, see pp. 600 et seq., ante.

(m) The lessor's discretion as to what are usual and proper covenants is not controlled unless there is an outrageous omission of covenants (Davies v. Davies, supra).

(q) The court, so far as estates in England are concerned, means the of any rights or privileges over or affecting any settled estates, for any purpose whatever, whether involving waste or not, provided the following conditions are observed :—

Every such lease must take effect in possession (r) at or within one year next after the making thereof, and must be for a term of years (s) not exceeding for an agricultural or occupation lease in England twenty-one years or in Ireland thirty-five years, for a mining lease (t), or a lease of water-mills, way-leaves, water-leaves, or other rights or easements forty years, for a repairing lease sixty years, and for a building lease ninety years; but the court, if satisfied that it is the custom of the district and beneficial to the inheritance, may direct any lease, except an agricultural lease, to be for any longer term (u).

Every such lease must reserve the best rent (v) that can be reasonably obtained without taking any fine, but in the case of a mining lease, a repairing lease, or a building lease, a peppercorn rent or any smaller rent than the rent to be ultimately made payable may, if the court thinks fit so to direct, be made payable during all or any part of the first five years of the term of the lease. In mining leases there must be set aside and invested, where the person for the time being entitled to the receipt of the rent is a person entitled to work minerals for his own benefit, one fourth part of the rent reserved, and otherwise three fourth parts thereof (a).

No such lease may authorise the felling of any trees except so far as necessary for clearing the ground for any buildings, excavations, or other works authorised by the lease.

Every such lease must be by deed, must contain a condition of re-entry for non-payment of rent (b), and such covenants, conditions, and stipulations as the court deems expedient in the special circumstances of the case (c).

1179. The power to authorise leases extends to authorising preliminary contracts for leases (d), and to authorising leases of the whole or any parts of the settled estates (e), and, in the absence of a declaration to the contrary in the settlement (f), may be exercised from time to time (g). Lords of settled manors may be authorised and are empowered to give licences to copyhold or customary tenants to grant leases (h). Leases may be surrendered, and leases of the whole or any part of the hereditaments comprised in any surrendered lease may be authorised (i).

The power to authorise leases may be exercised by the court either by approving of particular leases, or by ordering that powers of leasing may be vested in trustees (k). On an application for either purpose, the applicant must produce evidence as to the nature, value, and circumstances of the estate, and the terms and conditions on which leases ought to be granted (l). After approval of a particular lease or contract, the court directs who is to execute the same as lessor (m), and the lease or contract takes effect as if such person executing were at the time of execution absolutely entitled to the whole estate or interest which is bound by the settlement and had immediately afterwards settled the same (n). If the court deems it expedient to vest general powers of leasing in trustees, it may by order vest such powers either in the existing trustees of the settlement or in any other person, and such powers when exercised by such trustees take effect as if they had originally been contained in the settlement. The court may impose any conditions as to consent or otherwise on the exercise of such power, and may also authorise the insertion of provisions for the appointment of new trustees for the purpose of exercising such power (o). But, unless the parties applying desire it or for other special reasons, no conditions may be inserted in the vesting order requiring the leases to be settled by the court, and if any such condition is inserted the order may be amended by striking out the condition (p).

1180. The court may from time to time authorise a sale (q) of the whole or any parts of the settled estates, or of any timber not being ornamental timber (r).

On a sale of land for building purposes the court may allow the whole or any part of the consideration to be a rent issuing out of such land (s).

On a sale of land any mineral may be excepted, and any rights or privileges may be reserved, and the purchaser may be required to enter into any covenants or submit to any restrictions which the court may deem advisable (t).

The court may also authorise a dedication of any part of the settled land for streets (a).

1181. On every sale or dedication the court may direct what person or persons shall execute the deed of conveyance, and the deed executed by such person or persons takes effect as if the settlement had contained a power enabling such person or persons to effect such sale or dedication (b).

SUB-SECT. 4.—Applications to the Court.

The court may authorise a sale of minerals apart from the surface, with rights for the purchasers to enter upon the surface for the purpose of the workings, reserving a rentcharge in respect of the surface damaged from time to time by the workings (Re Milward's Estate (1868), L. R. 6 Eq. 248).

(a) Settled Estates Act, 1877 (40 & 41 Vict. c. 18), ss. 20, 21. The object of these powers is the development of the land as a building estate (Re Poynder's Settled Estates, Dickson-Poynder v. Cook (1881), 45 L. T. 403), and they should be exercised with a view to the immediate benefit of the estate (Re Hurlé's Settled Estates (1864), 2 Hem. & M. 196). A formal scheme may be dispensed with (Re Hargreave's Settled Estates (1866), 15 W. R. 54; Re Christy's Settled Estate (1894), 42 W. R. 613). The court formerly declined to raise the expenses of such appropriation by sale (Re Hurlé's Settled Estates, supra; Re Chambers (1860), 28 Beav. 653), but see title LAND IMPROVEMENT, Vol. XVIII., p. 285. Mode of powers.

1183. The court may exercise the statutory powers from time to time, but they may not be exercised if the settlement contains an express declaration that they shall not be exercised (f). The court may not authorise any sale, lease, or other act which could not have been authorised by the settlor (g), but, after completion, no act under assignee of a tenant for life can petition the court for a sale (Re Ebsworth and Tidy's Contract (1889), 42 Ch. D. 23, C. A.); and compare pp. 635, 636, 637, 675, 676, ante.

(d) This includes a widow and her children having an estate for life or widowhood with remainder to her children (Williams v. Williams (1861), 9 W. R. 888).

The application must be with the consent or concurrence of the first tenant in tail, if there is one of full age, and of all persons having estates or interests prior to the tenancy in tail. If there is no such tenant in tail, it must be made with the concurrence or consent of all persons having any beneficial estate or interest under the settlement and all trustees having any estate or interest on behalf of any unborn child (ibid., s. 24). Persons beneficially interested in the proceeds of sale of an estate directed to be sold after the death of the tenant for life (Re Ives, Bailey v. Holmes (1876), 3 Ch. D. 690, not following Re Potts' Estate (1866), L. R. 16 Eq. 631, n.) have beneficial interests within this provision, but not unascertained contingent remaindermen (Beioley v. Carter (1869), 4 Ch. App. 230; Re Strutt's Trusts (1873), L. R. 16 Eq. 629). If an infant is tenant in tail the court may dispense with the consent of persons entitled to estates subsequent to the tenancy in tail (Settled Estates Act, 1877 (40 & 41 Vict. c. 18), s. 25). If the consent or concurrence of any necessary party cannot be obtained he may be required by notice, which may be given by advertisement if the court so directs, but not otherwise (ibid., s. 31; and see ibid., s. 30, as to service on trustees), to notify his assent or dissent, and in the absence of notification he is taken to have submitted his rights to be dealt with by the court (ibid., s. 26). The court may, however, dispense with both notice (ibid., s. 27; see Re Rayner's Settled Estates, [1891] W. N. 152; Re Harris's Settled Estates (1880), 42 L. T. 583; Re Chamberlain (1875), 23 W. R. 852; Re Franklin's Settled Estate (1858), 7 W. R. 45) and consent (Settled Estates Act, 1877 (40 & 41 Vict. c. 18), s. 28). The discretion should be exercised in the cases of the dissent of persons unimportant as regards value or interest in the estate, but where the persons are equal in number, and the values of interest approach closely, the court does not dispense with their concurrence (Taylor v. Taylor, Taylor v. Keily, Ex parte Taylor (1875), 1 Ch. D. 426, 433). For cases where consents have been dispensed with, see Re Spurway's Settled Estates (1878), 10 Ch. D. 230; Re Cundee's Settled Estates (1877), 37 L. T. 271; Re Kilmorey's (Earl) Settled Estates (1877), 26 W. R. 54; Re Lewis's Settled Estates (1875), 24 W. R. 103; Re Slark's Settled Estates, [1875] W. N. 224. The rights of non-consenting parties may be preserved (Settled Estates Act, 1877 (40 & 41 Vict. c. 18), s. 29).

authority of the court can be invalidated on the ground of want of jurisdiction (h).

There is no obligation on any person to make or consent to any application to the court or to exercise any power (i).

1184. The statutory powers, and all applications to the court and consents to and notifications respecting such applications, may be executed, made or given by, and all notices may be given to, guardians on behalf of infants, committees on behalf of lunatics, and trustees or assignees of the property of bankrupts; but in the case of infant or lunatic tenants in tail a special direction of the court is required (k).

Subject to their being separately examined (l), married women may make or consent to any applications, whether they are of full age or infants (m).

Such application may, if so directed by the court, be made by the trustees without application to the court or upon an order of the court made on petition by the person who, on purchase of land with the money, would be entitled to receipt of the rents and profits (s).

Pending investment, the money may be invested in any investments in which cash under the control of the court is for the time being authorised to be invested (t).

Part X.—Administrative Powers and Duties of Trustees.

SECT. 1.—Investment.

Investment
clauses.

1186. A settlement, whether created by deed or will, usually contains a clause specifying what investments of the trust funds may lawfully be made by the trustees (u). This clause primarily determines the powers of the trustees of the settlement in making investments, but, unless expressly forbidden by the settlement (v), they have the extensive powers of investment which are now conferred on them by statute (w). If the investment clause purports still further to enlarge these powers, it should be construed strictly for the protection of trustees and remaindermen (x).

(q) This includes the erection of new buildings (Re Newman's Settled Estates (1874), 9 Ch. App. 681); and see title LAND IMPROVEMENT, Vol. XVIII., p. 276.

(r) Where lands settled upon trust for sale after the death of the tenant for life were sold under the Act in the lifetime of the tenant for life, the proceeds of sale were directed to be paid to the trustees to be held by them on the trusts of the settlement (Re Morgan's Settled Estates (1870), L. R. 9 Eq. 587). Where land is settled on a tenant in tail, a disentailing deed must be executed before payment out is ordered; see Re Butler's Will (1873), L. R. 16 Eq. 479; Re Reynolds (1876), 3 Ch. D. 61, C. A., not following Re Wood's Settled Estates (1875), L. R. 20 Eq. 372; and, for the necessity of an affidavit of no incumbrances, see Thornhill v. Milbank (1864), 12 W. R. 523.

(v) A direction that the trustees shall invest in a particular way is not an express prohibition (Re Maire, Maire v. De La Batut (1905), 49 Sol. Jo. 383; Re Burke, Burke v. Burke, [1908] 2 Ch. 248).

SECT. 2.—Accumulations.

SECT. 2.

Accumulations.

Statutory powers of accumulation.

1187. Formerly it was usual to insert in settlements express clauses directing the accumulation by the trustees of surplus income during the minorities of beneficiaries under the settlement and the destination of such accumulation. Now, however, the statutory powers of accumulation hereinafter stated are deemed to be incorporated in the settlement (a), and express clauses are generally omitted in reliance on them (b).

Trustees holding property in trust for an infant are, in the absence of expression of intention to the contrary in the settlement (c), bound to accumulate all surplus income not required for the infant's maintenance by investing the same and the resulting income thereof from time to time on securities in which they are by the settlement, if any, or by law authorised (d) to invest trust money, and to hold the accumulations for the benefit of the person who ultimately becomes entitled to the property from which the same arise (e), that is to say, to the property the income arising from which has been accumulated (f). The accumulations, therefore, become an accretion to the capital, with the result that all persons interested therein, whether as tenant for life or otherwise, in due course and order take precisely the same interests in the accumulations as they take in the original capital (g).

Property held in trust for infant.

1188. When trustees have the statutory powers of management of an infant's land (h), subject to any contrary intention expressed in the instrument under which an interest of the infant arises (i), they must invest the surplus income of the land in securities authorised for investment either by the settlement or by law (d) and accumulate the investments so made by way of compound interest, and stand possessed of the accumulated fund, if the infant attains twenty-one,

(b) As to the cases where the statutory powers are not applicable, see p. 684, post.

(c) Where an infant took in a legacy an interest for life that vested immediately, the gift of the income to the infant was considered the expression of a contrary intention in the instrument under which the interest of the infant arose (see Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 41), s. 43 (3)), so as to exclude the statutory provision for accumulation (Re Wells, Wells v. Wells (1889), 43 Ch. D. 281; Re Humphreys, Humphreys v. Levett, [1893] 3 Ch. 1, C. A.), the object of the statutory provision being merely to shorten and simplify conveyances and not to affect the construction of instruments or alter the devolution of property (Re Dickson, Hill v. Grant (1885), 29 Ch. D. 331, C. A.; Re Wells, Wells v. Wells, supra; Re Humphreys, Humphreys v. Levett, supra); and, as to cases where a legacy to an infant carries interest, see title EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, Vol. XIV., p. 273.

The accumulations, or any part of them, may, however, at any time be applied as if the same were income arising in the then current year (k).

SECT. 3.—Maintenance of Infants.

Powers of
of infants.

1189. It is usual in settlements to rely on the power conferred by statute (l) to apply the property of an infant for his maintenance, and to omit the trusts or discretionary powers, which until 1860 it was usual to insert in settlements, authorising the trustees during the minority of any beneficiary to apply the yearly produce of his share of the settled fund to his maintenance. Express powers of maintenance (m) should, however, be inserted if the proposed settlement is not governed by English law, or if the interests thereby provided for children are of such a nature that the statutory power does not apply; thus the statutory powers do not apply if the infant takes a defeasible interest under the settlement (a). They apply, however, to a gift to a class contingently on their attaining twenty-one (b).

The statutory powers do not provide for the maintenance of a beneficiary whose interest is contingent on his attaining a greater age than twenty-one during the period between his attaining twenty-one and the vesting of his interest (Re Breeds' Will (1875), 1 Ch. D. 226). In such a case, an express provision should be inserted either that the statutory powers shall be available till the share vests or that the beneficiary shall be entitled to the whole income on attaining twenty-one; see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XV., p. 627. If a portions fund is provided by the settlement, it is usual to empower the trustees to provide maintenance in respect of a portion to which any child may be presumptively entitled at the death of a tenant for life (c).

SECT. 4.—Advancement.

1190. A power of advancement (d) authorises the trustees of the settlement—but during the lives of the spouses or the life of the survivor of them only with their, his, or her consent in writing (e)—to raise any part or parts not exceeding a specified proportion of the expectant, presumptive, or vested (f) share of any child of the marriage and pay or apply the same as the trustees shall think fit for the advancement or benefit of that child (g). In settlements of realty the power is to raise a specified sum by mortgage of the settled land, such sum to be a charge on the child's interest (h). Advancement has a definite meaning, that is, that a certain portion of the fund is actually taken out of the settlement altogether and paid over to the object of the power (i). An advancement as a rule does not fall within of all (Re Adams, Adams v. Adams, [1893] 1 Ch. 329). If some members of the class have attained twenty-one, the infant members are entitled to maintenance out of the income of their contingent shares, and it makes no difference that the class is capable of increase (Re Jeffery, Arnold v. Burt, [1895] 2 Ch. 577); and, as to maintenance, see, further, title INFANTS AND CHILDREN, Vol. XVII., pp. 87 et seq. As to whether trustees, having exercised their discretion by capitalising income, can apply income accrued in past years for maintenance after those years have elapsed, see title INFANTS AND CHILDREN, Vol. XVII., p. 89, note (j); Re Wise, Jackson v. Parrott, [1896] 1 Ch. 281; Re Cooper (Sir Daniel), Cooper v. Cooper, [1913] W. N. 40. If no discretion has been exercised, accumulated income may be applied for maintenance (Edwards v. Grove (1860), 2 De G. F. & J. 210, C. A.; Re Tod, Bradshaw v. Tod (1913), 134 L. T. Jo. 386). As to the duty of parents to maintain and educate their children, see title INFANTS AND CHILDREN, Vol. XVII., pp. 114, 115. (d) A power of advancement is a usual power in settlements (Turner v. Sargent (1853), 17 Beav. 515; Spirett v. Willows (1869), 4 Ch. App. 407); and see p. 543, ante. For forms of clauses in settlements, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XIII., pp. 357, 419, 427; and in wills, ibid., Vol. XV., pp. 413, 625. There is no statutory power of advancement.

(e) A tenant for life who has assigned his life interest or become bankrupt cannot consent (Noel v. Henley (Lord) (1825), M'Cle. & Yo. 302; Notridge v. Green (1875), 33 L. T. 220; Oliver v. Lowther (1880), 28 W. R. 381), except with the sanction of his assignee or trustee in bankruptcy (Re Cooper, Cooper v. Slight (1884), 27 Ch. D. 565). The committee of a lunatic tenant for life may be authorised to consent on his behalf (Re Nevill, a Lunatic (1885), 31 Ch. D. 161, C. A.).

(f) A power of advancement out of a presumptive share cannot be exercised after the share has become vested (Molyneux v. Fletcher, [1898] 1 Q. B. 648).

the operation of the ordinary hotchpot clause which only relates to appointed shares (k), but the exercise of a power of appointment does not operate to take the appointed share out of the provisions of the original settlement so as to defeat an advancement clause contained therein (l).

SECT. 5.—Powers in Respect of Settled Policies and Choses in Action.

Powers in respect of
 policies.

1191. If a settlement contain a covenant by any person to pay the premiums on a policy of assurance which forms part of the subject matter of such settlement, it is the duty of the trustees of the settlement, though it is usual to restrict their responsibility by the instrument creating the trust (m), to take all necessary steps to enforce payment of the premiums by the covenantor; but the trustees incur no liability if their efforts are unsuccessful, nor are they bound to take any steps to enforce payment if by reason of the poverty of the covenantor there is ground for believing that such steps would have been ineffectual (n). If there are no funds properly applicable to the keeping up of the policy, it is the duty of the trustees to do what they can to protect the policy and advance or obtain money for the purpose of paying the premiums (o). In such case the trustees, or any person advancing money for the purpose at their request, are entitled to a lien on the policy for the amount so advanced, together with interest at 4 per cent. (p). Where no funds are available to keep up a policy, it may be ordered to be surrendered (q), or sold, and the trustees may be recouped the amount of premiums paid by them out of the proceeds (r). But if the cestui que trust supplies funds, or if the trustees by duly performing their trust ought to be in possession of funds applicable for the purpose, then the trustees acquire no lien on the policy, and cannot confer one on another person who provides the necessary funds (s). Trustees should insist on having the policy and assignment handed over to them for custody, though the possession may not confer on them any legal estate or advantage (t).

any other chose in action, the trustees should see that their title is perfected by the giving of the necessary notices (a).

If the chose in action which is the subject of the settlement be capable of reduction into possession, it is the duty of the trustees to reduce it into possession without unnecessary delay, and if they fail to do so the burden of proof lies on them to show that if speedy steps had been taken the money could not have been recovered (b).

SECT. 6.—Powers and Duties in Respect of Personal Chattels.

1192. If furniture or jewels or other personal chattels are the subject of the settlement, the trustee, if and while they are in his possession, is bound to keep them as if they were his own, as in the case of any other trust property (c). But since such articles by their nature can only be enjoyed by the beneficiaries by delivery to them, it is usual to provide in the settlement that the trustees shall not be liable for such articles or to see to their condition or insurance. If, however, the cestui que trust in whose possession such articles are fails to insure them, the trustees have power to insure them and pay the premiums out of the income of capital moneys in their hands (d).

Insurance.

The trustees should keep an inventory of the articles, and may interfere with advantage in the event of its being apprehended that the cestui que trust will dispose of them (e). If the articles are assigned to the trustees by the settlement, the possession of them is that of the trustees, who may maintain an action against a wrongdoer for the conversion thereof (f). It is generally expedient that the settlement should contain express powers for the trustees to sell and exchange settled chattels.

SECT. 7.—Powers in Respect of Land.

1193. It was formerly the practice to insert in settlements powers for the trustees, with the concurrence of the persons, if adults, for the time being entitled to the possession or receipt of the rents and profits of the property, to sell, exchange, make partition, and enfranchise, and during the minorities of the beneficiaries to manage land. Powers of leasing were sometimes given to the trustees, but were more commonly reserved to the tenant for life if adult. The powers of sale, exchange, partition, enfranchisement, and leasing have been superseded by the statutory powers conferred by the Settled Land Act, 1882 (g), which are capable of being exercised by the trustees during the minority of an infant tenant for life (h), so that special powers for these purposes are now generally omitted, except in the case of settlements of land by way of trust for sale (i).

Power of management.

1194. The power of management during minorities is also generally omitted in reliance on the statutory powers of management (k). In such a case the trustees enter into possession and manage or superintend the management of the land, with full power to fell timber or cut underwood from time to time in the usual course for sale, or for repairs or otherwise, and to erect, pull down, rebuild, and repair houses, and other buildings or erections, and to continue the working of mines, minerals, and quarries which have usually been worked, and to drain or otherwise improve the land or any part thereof, and to insure against loss by fire, and to make allowances to and arrangements with tenants and others, and to determine tenancies, and to accept surrenders of leases and tenancies, and generally to deal with the land in due course of management; but so that, where the infant is impeachable for waste, the trustees must not commit waste, and must cut timber on the same terms only, and subject to the same restrictions, on and subject to which the infant could, if of full age, cut the same (l). The trustees may from time to time, out of the income of the land (m), including the produce of the sale of timber and underwood, pay the expenses incurred in the management, or in the exercise of any power conferred by the statute, and all outgoing not payable by any tenant or other person, and must keep down any annual sum, and the interest of any principal sum, charged on the land (a).

Insurance.

Trustees have also a statutory power to insure buildings or other insurable property against loss or damage by fire and to charge the trust estate with the premiums (b).

to keep buildings in good repair only authorises trustees to keep them in habitable repair (d), and does not authorise the rebuilding of a mansion (e); but a power to erect a mansion-house involves a power to make suitable appendages, such as lawns, pleasure grounds and approaches (f). A power to improve an estate by the erection of farmhouses and outbuildings authorises the erection of labourers' cottages (g), and a general power to manage and superintend an estate covers expenditure for the erection of farmhouses and other buildings, repairs to old farmhouses, draining and fencing, making and sinking wells and pumps, erecting a bridge, and forming, altering, and repairing roads (h). A power to lay out rents in repairing does not authorise a mortgage of the property to raise money for that purpose (i).

If trustees, acting bonâ fide but without authority, lay out trust money in improving an estate, they are only chargeable with the loss, if any, thereby occasioned to the estate (k).

SECT. 8.—Power to Employ Agents and Charge for Services.

1196. It is usual to insert in settlements a power for the trustees to employ agents (l). This power has never been considered judicially, but it is conceived that it does not authorise a trustee to delegate his personal discretion, but merely confers on him in all cases in which a prudent man, acting for himself in the ordinary course of business, usually employs them, the exoneration which is given to trustees by statute in the case of bankers, brokers and other persons with whom trust money may be deposited (m). The nomination in the settlement of a particular agent has always been held to relieve trustees from any responsibility for employing him in the absence of laches on their part (n); but a person nominated as agent has no right to compel the trustees to employ him (o) or to continue him in employment (p).

Part XI.—Resettlements.

SECT. 1.—Nature and Object.

Nature and object of resettlements.

1197. A resettlement is a deed to carry out a family arrangement, which is commonly entered into with regard to settled land on the marriage or coming of age of an eldest son, or other first tenant in tail in remainder expectant on the death of the tenant for life in possession. In the great majority of cases the purpose of the resettlement is to provide an immediate income for the eldest son in lieu of his continuing dependent on the bounty of his father during the father's lifetime, while in return he curtails his reversionary estate in the inheritance of the settled property, so that in the event of his death without issue the property goes over to the younger members of the family. The essential requirements of a resettlement in no way differ from those of other deeds of family arrangement, that is to say, the resettlement must be mutual and reasonable (a). Parental influence is an inseparable incident of a resettlement, but if properly exercised is not objected to by the court (b). It is not necessary, though it is advisable, that a son on the making of a resettlement should have separate legal advice (c).

SECT. 2.—Usual Provisions.

Usual pro-

1198. Where an estate is limited to the ordinary uses in strict settlement, that is to say, to the use of a man for life, with remainder, subject to charges for the jointure of his wife and portions for his younger children, to the use of his first son in tail or in tail male, the son having attained his majority, a resettlement is generally carried out by the execution by him of a disentailing deed (d), in which the father commonly joins, both as protector of the settlement (e) and for the purpose of conveying his life estate. By such disentailing deed the estate is usually conveyed to a grantee to uses to hold to such uses as the father and son shall jointly appoint, and in default of such appointment to the uses subsisting under the existing settlement. The resettlement proper is then effected by the father and son in exercise of the joint power conferred on them by the disentailing deed (f). The new uses are generally expressed to be subject to the uses and charges preceding the son's former estate tail, except the father's life estate. If the resettlement is made on the marriage of the son, the first of the new uses is generally to provide by rentcharges pin-money (g) for the son's wife, and then an annuity for the son during the joint lives of himself and his father, and a jointure for the son's wife if she shall survive him (h). If the son is neither married nor about to marry, power is generally reserved to him to charge the estate with pin-money and jointure rentcharges. Subject to these charges, the father's old life estate is by the resettlement restored, which restoration has the effect of also giving back to him the powers annexed to the life estate by the original settlement (i). That estate is followed by the limitation of an estate to the son for his life. After the determination of this latter estate, the property is given to the son's first and other unborn sons successively in tail, or in tail male, with remainder to such sons successively in tail general. These are followed by limitations of life estates to the son's younger brothers and estates tail or tail male in favour of the issue of the son's younger brothers, and sometimes by limitations in favour of collateral branches of the family. If limitations in favour of the son's daughters are introduced, they are generally made to the daughters successively in tail male. The ultimate limitation is generally to the son in fee.

SECT. 1.—Protector of the Settlement.

1199. Any settlor (k) entailing lands may appoint by the settlement by which the lands are entailed any number of persons in esse, not exceeding three, and not being aliens, to be protector of the settlement in lieu of the person who would otherwise have been protector (l), and either for the whole or any part of the period for which such person might have continued protector, and may by means of a power inserted in such settlement perpetuate during the whole or any part of such period the protectorship of the settlement in any one person or number of persons in esse, and not being an alien or aliens, whom the donee of the power shall think proper by deed to appoint protector in lieu of any person or persons dying, or by deed relinquishing the office. The person or persons so appointed may be protector, either alone or jointly with any other person then protector, but the number of persons to compose the protector must never exceed three. The person who would otherwise have been sole protector may be one of the persons appointed protector if the settlor thinks fit, and, unless otherwise directed by the settlor, he acts as sole protector, if the other persons constituting the protector have ceased to do so by death, or relinquishment of the office by deed, and no other person has been appointed in their place (m).

Every deed under which a protector relinquishes his office, or is appointed under a power in the settlement, is void unless duly enrolled within six months after execution (n).

A protector should not be appointed by the court except upon a special case (o).

The office of protector survives, and does not cease on the death of one of the persons appointed protector by the settlement, unless survivorship is excluded in clear words (p); but, if all the persons who are appointed protectors are dead, the office falls back to the tenant for life (q), unless the settlor has otherwise directed, in which case the Chancery Division of the High Court is the protector (a).

SECT. 2.—Shifting Clauses.

SECT. 2.

Shifting Clauses.SUB-SECT. 1.—*In General.*Shifting
clauses.

1200. Shifting clauses are provisions inserted in settlements which have the effect of shifting the estates from the persons taking under the settlement on the happening of a contingency designated in the shifting clause, such as the accession to another estate, or to a title of honour, or failure to comply with some condition imposed by the settlement (b). Shifting clauses must be so framed as to take effect within the period laid down by the rule against perpetuities (c), and if so expressed as to be divisible they may be good in one event and bad in another (d).

1201. It has been laid down that five points in shifting clauses deserve special attention (e):—

The event in which the clause is to operate.

(1) The event in which the shifting clause is to take effect must be accurately described (f). A general direction that it shall take effect on a person's accession to the family estate may not apply to the event of his succeeding to a proportion of it, however large (g); nor to the event of his succeeding to the whole, if it is charged with an incumbrance to which it was not, in fact or in contingency, liable when the settlement was framed (h); nor to accession to the family estate under a subsequent and independent instrument or by act of law (i).

(b) For form of shifting clause, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XIII., p. 627.

(c) For the rule against perpetuities, see title PERPETUITIES, Vol. XXII., p. 295. As to its applicability to common law conditions, see ibid., p. 314.

(d) Miles v. Harford (1879), 12 Ch. D. 691.

(f) It seems that if the estate is stated to be divested because other provision has been made for the person from whom it is taken, the gift over fails if the provision turns out not to have been made (Carter v. Ducie (Earl) (1871), 41 L. J. (CH.) 153).

(g) Thus a man was held not to succeed to estates where the whole of a particular property had been subtracted therefrom in favour of other persons (Meyrick v. Laws, Meyrick v. Mathias (1874), 9 Ch. App. 237; and see Gardiner v. Jellicoe (1862), 12 C. B. (N. S.) 568, 637). On the other hand, succession to a portion of estates settled on a marriage was held to bring into operation a shifting clause where the scheme of the will was that part of the estates referred to should be severed from the rest (Micklethwait v. Micklethwait (1858), 4 C. B. (N. S.) 790; see Stackpoole v. Stackpoole (1843), 2 Con. & Law. 489, 501).

(h) Where the limitations of the estate are extrinsic to the settlement containing the shifting clause, if a charge is created, the clause does not operate (Harrison v. Round (1852), 2 De G. M. & G. 190, 203; Fazakerly v. Ford (1831), 4 Sim. 390; see Meyrick v. Laws, Meyrick v. Mathias, supra). On the other hand, the operation of the shifting clause is not prevented by the fact that a man has anticipated a portion of the estate which descends to him (Harrison v. Round, supra).

(i) Thus, where there was a shifting clause in the event of the testator's eldest son coming into actual possession of estates entailed on the testator in remainder, it was held that this meant coming into possession under the limitations of the entail, and that the eldest son having come into possession under a devise in the will of a prior tenant in tail who had barred the entail and acquired the fee simple, the shifting clause did not operate (Taylor v. Harewood (Earl) (1844), 3 Hare, 372; Meyrick v. Laws, Meyrick v. Mathias, supra). But if an estate tail is barred and resettled as

SECT. 2.

Shifting Clauses.

The estates

The persons to take.

(2) The clause should describe accurately what estates or interests the younger brother solely, or both the younger brother and his issue male, are to take in the family property, so as to give the clause the effect of making the second estate shift from them (k).

(3) Equal attention must be observed in describing the person to whom the settlor wishes the second estate to devolve when the party accedes to the family estate. It sometimes happens that the settlor directs that, on the accession of any of the subsequent tenants for life to the family estate, the second estate shall devolve to the person next entitled in remainder, who in the case proposed is the son of the tenant for life, or, where such a limitation is introduced, the trustees for preserving the contingent remainders (l).

part of one transaction, the estate being undiminished in quality and unimpaired in value, the new limitations may be considered as a continuation of the old, the question being not whether the estate, which has once been taken out of the settlement, comes back or not, but whether in coming back it goes in the mode in which it was to go according to the terms of the settlement (Harrison v. Round (1852), 2 De G. M. & G. 190; see Fazakerly v. Ford (1831), 4 Sim. 390, 415; and see Monypenny v. Dering (1852), 2 De G. M. & G. 145, where it was held that a shifting clause operated notwithstanding the enlargement of a tenancy in tail in remainder into a fee simple in remainder). But shifting clauses which take away an estate are construed strictly, and where a shifting clause was to operate in the event of succession to a certain estate "under any now existing or future will or settlement or other assurance," it was held that it did not affect succession thereto as heir-at-law (Walmesley v. Gerard (1861), 29 Beav. 321). In construing shifting clauses, the words "eldest" and "younger" are always read and construed in their primary signification (Wilbraham v. Scarisbrick (1847), 1 H. L. Cas. 167; see Scarisbrick v. Eccleston (1838), 5 Cl. & Fin. 398, H. L.; compare Meredith v. Treffry (1879), 12 Ch. D. 170; and see pp. 587, 588, ante), unless it is impossible to interpret the shifting clause according to the literal meaning of the words (Bathurst v. Errington (1877), 2 App. Cas. 698).

(k) Thus, where a testator directed that, in the event of his brother or any son of his brother's body succeeding to a named estate, estates which were by the will settled upon trust for the brother for life with remainder to his first and other sons in tail should go to the person and persons who by virtue of the will would become next entitled to the same, the brother having become tenant for life of the named estate and his eldest son tenant in tail in remainder, the son was held not to have succeeded to the named estate, and to have become by virtue of the shifting clause tenant in tail in remainder of the estates devised by the will (Bagot v. Legge (1864), 10 Jur. (N. S.) 994). "Entitled" in such a clause means entitled in possession and beneficially (Chorley v. Loveland (1863), 33 Beav. 189; Umbers v. Jaggard (1870), L. R. 9 Eq. 200). A person does not come into possession of an estate for the purposes of a shifting clause by becoming entitled to an estate in remainder either for life (Monypenny v. Dering, supra; see Curzon v. Curzon (1859), 1 Giff. 248), or in tail (Bagot v. Legge, supra), nor by actual possession obtained as a purchaser for value, a mortgagee from the owner, a tenant from year to year, or a lessee for years rendering rent, a judgment creditor, or tenant by elegit (Taylor v. Harewood (Earl) (1844), 3 Hare, 272, 384). Where trustees were entitled under a management clause to receive the rents and profits of an estate during the minority of an infant, the infant was held not to be entitled in possession within a shifting clause (Leslie v. Rothes (Earl), [1894] 2 Ch. 499, C. A.); but a man may be entitled in possession notwithstanding that the whole income of the property is eaten up by charges and that there are no surplus rents and profits (Re Varley, Thornton v. Varley (1893), 62 L. J. (CH.) 652).

(l) For a case where the person entitled in remainder is the son of the

(4) The clause should also direct to whom the second estate should devolve, if at the time of its shifting the person to whom it is limited is not in existence, but may afterwards come in esse, as where an estate is limited to the sons of I. S., a person in existence, successively in tail male, with a clause directing that, on the accession of any son of I. S. to a particular estate, the lands in settlement shall devolve to the next son of I. S., and while I. S. is living, and has one son only, that son accedes to the estate. It is proper to provide for this case by directing who is to be entitled to the estate while there is a possibility of a subsequent son, but the existence of a subsequent son is in suspense (m).

SECT. 2.
Shifting
Clauses.

Provisions for next taker not being in existence at time of shifting.

(5) In many cases it is necessary to provide for the return of the property to a person from whom it has been divested by the shifting clause, as when a person settles his family estate on himself for his life with successive remainders to each of his sons, A., B., C., and D., in order of birth, with remainders over to the sons of each of them successively in tail male, and settles a second estate on himself for life with successive remainders over to each of his sons, B., C., and D., in the order of birth, with remainders to the sons of each of them successively in tail male, with ulterior remainders to the collateral branches of his family, with a clause divesting the second estate from B., C., or D. and their respective issue male on their respectively acceding to the family estate. On the death of A. without issue male B. would accede to the family estate, and the second estate would therefore shift from him. Now if C. and D.

tenant for life, see Bagot v. Legge, (1864), 10 Jur. (N. S.) 994. For cases where under a direction that an estate should go over as if the tenant for life were dead, the estate has shifted to trustees to preserve contingent remainders where there were contingent remainders to unborn sons of the tenant for life whose estate has ceased, see Doe d. Heneage v. Heneage (1790), 4 Term Rep. 13; Stanley v. Stanley (1809), 16 Ves. 491; Morrice v. Langham (1840), 11 Sim. 260; Lambarde v. Peach (1859), 4 Drew. 553; Turton v. Lambarde, Lambarde v. Turton (1860), 1 De G. F. & J. 495, C. A. In Kenlis (Lord) v. Bective (Earl) (1865), 34 Beav. 587, an original life estate was determined by a shifting clause, but a life estate given, by reference, to the same person expectant on the failure of issue male of his younger brothers was held to be still subsisting. In the case, however, of a gift over on accession to a title as if the person succeeding had died without issue, it has been held that the next vested remainderman was entitled (Carr v. Erroll (Earl) (1805), 6 East, 58; Doe d. Lumley v. Scarborough (Earl) (1836), 3 Ad. & El. 2, 897, Ex. Ch.; Morrice v. Langham (1841), 8 M. & W. 194; see also Sanford v. Morrice (1884), 11 Cl. & Fin. 667, H. L.). For a case where "die without issue" was held to mean die without issue of a particular class, see Jellicoe v. Gardiner (1865), 11 H. L. Cas. 323; but see Doe d. Lumley v. Scarborough (Earl), supra.

(m) Cases as to intermediate rents and profits during the period between the determination of the estate of a tenant for life and the birth of a son have generally arisen through the oversight dealt with in note (l), p. 695, ante, where the shifting clause is so framed as to carry an estate from the tenant for life to his issue. If an intention to dispose of the beneficial interest is either expressed in the instrument on which the question arises, or to be gathered from its provisions, the rents and profits cannot result to the heir, and the next remainderman takes them (Turton v. Lambarde, Lambarde v. Turton, supra; D'Eyncourt v. Gregory (1864), 34 Beav. 36); but, if no such intention is expressed in or to be gathered from the instrument, the intermediate rents and profits revert to the settlor or his heir-at-law (Stanley v. Stanley, supra; Lambarde v. Peach, supra).

SECT. 2.
Shifting
Clauses.

should die without issue male, the second estate would devolve to the collateral branches of the family under the ulterior limitations, but it could not be the intention of the settlor that this should take place while there should be issue male of his own body. To obviate this and other incongruities of a similar nature, the shifting clause should be so framed as not to take effect unless C. or D. or some issue male of their bodies should be living when B. accedes to the family estate; and so as to provide that if the second estate shall have shifted, and C. and D. shall afterwards die without issue male, the second estate shall again revert to B. and his issue male, according to the original limitations (n).

Recurrence of the contingency.

1202. A shifting clause takes effect immediately on the happening of the specified event, and there is no difference for this purpose whether the clause is expressed to take effect "then" or "then and immediately thereupon" (o). If the shifting clause is to operate as often as the event referred to is to recur, this should appear from its terms, but an intention may be gathered from the meaning of the clause as a whole in the absence of express words (p).

Provisions to defeat charges.

1203. It may be desirable that provision should be made to defeat charges for jointure and portions on the estate that shifts, but this largely depends on the probability of the charges being provided for out of the estate to which there is succession (q).

Other kinds of shifting
clauses.

1204. Shifting clauses are not confined to carrying over an estate in the event of accession to another estate, but they are commonly employed to impose a penalty for disobedience to an injunction contained in the settlement. Thus, clauses have been introduced providing for the cesser of the interest of any taker of the estate who fails to profess a specified religion (r), or to comply with a name and arms clause (s), or to reside at a specified place (t).

Cas. 707, a gift over if the testator's grandchildren should be educated abroad, or not in the Protestant religion according to the rites of the Church of England, was held by all the judges before whom the case came not to be brought into operation by long residence abroad, and attendance at Roman Catholic schools. The court does not insert a clause of this nature in a settlement to be made by an infant on marriage (Re Williams (1860), 6 Jur. (N. S.) 1064).

1205. One of the most common uses of shifting clauses in settlements occurs in what is known as the name and arms clause, whereby a settlor imposes upon all persons succeeding to an estate under the settlement an obligation to take his name and bear his arms. Such a clause (u) first indicates the persons on whom the obligation is imposed, that is, every person becoming entitled under the limitations of the settlement, whether legally or equitably, as tenant for life or tenant in tail male, or in tail, to the possession or receipt of the rents and profits of the settled property, and who shall not then use or bear the specified surname and arms (a). It then directs that any such person (b) within a specified period after becoming entitled as aforesaid (c), unless he shall be an infant, in which case the obligation is to be performed within the specified period after attaining twenty-one (d), shall apply for and endeavour to obtain a as to residence, where no period for residence is fixed, has been held too vague to be enforced (Fillingham v. Bromley (1823), Turn. & R. 530; compare Dunne v. Dunne (1855), 7 De G. M. & G. 207, C. A.; Wynne v. Fletcher (1857), 24 Beav. 430); but a condition imposing residence in a house for a specified period in each year is enforced, though it need not involve spending a night in the house (Walcot v. Botfield, (1854), Kay, 534); or personal residence (Re Moir, Warner v. Moir (1884), 25 Ch. D. 605; compare Re Wright, Mott v. Issott, [1907] 1 Ch. 231). Absence on official duty is not a breach of such a condition (Re Adair, [1909] 1 I. R. 311). The condition as to residence is nowadays less important, inasmuch as it may be defeated by the exercise of the powers of sale and leasing conferred by the Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38); see p. 638, ante. The condition is, however, effectual so far as it does not hinder the tenant for life from disposing of the property (Re Haynes, Kemp v. Haynes (1887), 37 Ch. D. 306; Re Trenchard, Trenchard v. Trenchard, [1902] 1 Ch. 378; Re Adair, [1909] 1 I. R. 311).

(u) See Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XIII., p. 624.

(a) "Entitled" means entitled in possession and not in interest (Langdale (Lady) v. Briggs (1856), 8 De G. M. & G. 391, C. A.; Re Finch, Abbiss v. Burney (1881), 17 Ch. D. 211, C. A.; see Re Greenwood, Goodhart v. Woodhead, [1903] 1 Ch. 749, C. A.); but a person is none the less entitled to possession because there are no rents to receive (Re Varley, Thornton v. Varley (1893), 62 L. J. (CH.) 652); and see note (k), p. 694, ante.

(b) If the person entitled is a female, the obligation may be imposed on her husband (Re Williams (1860), 6 Jur. (N. S.) 1064); but an exception is sometimes made in favour of husbands who are peers or sons of peers; see Egerton v. Brownlow (Earl) (1853), 4 H. L. Cas. 1, 7.

(c) If no period is specified it is sufficient if the change of name is effected within a reasonable time, considering the circumstances of the case (Davies v. Lowndes (1835), 1 Bing. (N. C.) 597, 618). In the absence of a time limit the clause may be void as transgressing the rule against perpetuities (Bennett v. Bennett (1864), 2 Drew. & Sm. 266).

(d) In the argument in Seymour v. Vernon (1864), 10 Jur. (N. S.) 487, it was stated that the court had never decided that when in a name and arms clause the words "under twenty-one" had been omitted, the tenant in tail must assume before that age; but it would appear that non-compliance by the infant would involve forfeiture (Beran v. Mahon-Hagan (1893), 31 L. R. Ir. 342, C. A.; and see Partridge v. Partridge, [1894] 1 Ch. 351); see Carteret v. Carteret (1723), 2 P. Wms. 132 (as to the compliance by infants with a provision as to professing religion); and see Whittingham's Case (1603), 8 Co. Rep. 42 b (as to loss of estate by failure of an infant to perform a condition). An infant, however, not having power to fix his place of residence cannot be said to "refuse or neglect" to perform a condition as licence from the Crown (e) expressly authorising him to take and use (f) the specified surname (g) and the specified arms (h).

1206. This clause is generally followed by a shifting clause directing that, in the event of non-compliance with the direction to take the name and arms (i), the interest of the person so failing shall determine, and the settled estates shall go in the manner in which they would have gone if such person, being a tenant for life, were dead, or, being a tenant in tail, were dead and there were a failure of issue. The rules given (j) with regard to shifting clauses, except rule 5, apply in framing shifting clauses intended to operate on non-compliance with an injunction, but it must be remembered that in the name and arms proviso the cesser of estate is intended as a personal punishment against the individual neglecting to comply with it, while in the case of clauses intended to operate on accession to an estate the object is to prevent the union of two estates in the same branch of the family. In the case of a tenant for life, therefore, who refuses to comply with an injunction, the estate is made to devolve on the next remaindermen, who may be his children (k). In the case, however, of a defaulting tenant in tail, the to residence (Parry v. Roberts (1871), 19 W. R. 1000; Partridge v. Partridge, [1894] 1 Ch. 351).

(e) If no method of assuming the name is specified, the voluntary assumption of it even by an infant is sufficient (Doe d. Luscombe v. Yales (1822), 5 B. & Ald. 544; Davies v. Lowndes (1835), 1 Bing. (N. C.) 597; Bevan v. Mahon-Hagan (1893), 31 L. R. Ir. 342, C. A.; see Barlow v. Bateman (1730), 3 P. Wms. 65). But where the condition was to "take the name for themselves and their heirs," it was said that many acts are to be done to oblige the heirs to take it, such as a grant from the King or an Act of Parliament (Gulliver v. Ashby (1766), 4 Burr. 1930, 1941). As to the methods by which a new name can be assumed, see title NAME AND ARMS, CHANGE OF, Vol. XXI., pp. 349 et seq.

(f) "Take and use" means "take and thereafter use," so that discontinuance of the name involves forfeiture (Re Drax, Dunsany (Baroness) v. Sawbridge (1906), 75 L. J. (CH.) 317; see Blagrove v. Bradshaw (1858), 4 Drew. 230).

(g) If the clause does not enjoin the assumption of the name as a surname it is sufficient that the devisee has the name as a christian name (Bennett v. Bennett (1864), 2 Drew. & Sm. 266). If the devisee is required to assume the prescribed surname, the use of it before his own family name is not a compliance with the condition (D'Eyncourt v. Gregory (1876), 1 Ch. D. 441, 445); but, if the prescribed surname is to be assumed "alone or together with" the devisee's family name, it may be used before the family name (Re Eversley, Mildmay v. Mildmay, [1900] 1 Ch. 96).

(h) If the royal licence through the Heralds College cannot be obtained, the devisee is relieved from the condition (Re Croxon, Croxon v. Ferrers, [1904] 1 Ch. 252, 255; see Austen v. Collins (1886), 54 L. T. 903). As to the Heralds College, see titles NAME AND ARMS, CHANGE OF, Vol. XXI., p. 353; PEERAGES AND DIGNITIES, Vol. XXII., pp. 288, 229. Inasmuch as arms can only be properly assumed by royal licence, it would seem that the voluntary assumption of arms is not a sufficient compliance, unless the person assuming them is entitled by descent to bear them (*Bevan v. law does not allow a clause of forfeiture by which his individual interest is to cease as to him only, and yet the estate tail, with all the remainders limited thereon, is to continue for the benefit of those to whom the testator intended the property to devolve after the death of the tenant in tail whose interest is made to cease (l). A forfeiture clause is effectual to terminate a tenancy in tail (m), but a name and arms clause ought to be held to be a condition subsequent where the intention of the testator, as evidenced by the words that he has used, is more consistent with the inference that he intended the condition to be a condition subsequent rather than a condition precedent, though the words are capable of admitting both constructions (n). It follows, therefore, that the execution of a disentailing deed operates to put an end to the condition (o). But when personal estate was settled by reference to the limitations of settled real estate, with a proviso that in the event of non-compliance with a name and arms clause, the personal estate should go over to the persons who would have been entitled to the real estate in case the person whose estate should cease, being tenant for life of the real estate, were dead, or being tenant in tail of the real estate were dead without issue, the clause was held to mean that the property was to go in the same way as if the tenant in tail, not having barred the entail, had died without issue, and the tenant in tail of the realty did not become indefeasibly entitled to the personality by reason of his having barred his estate tail (p). If the condition that property should go over in the event of non-compliance with a name and arms clause as if the donee were dead is attached to an absolute gift, the condition is void (q).

Ignorance of the condition is no excuse for failure to comply with it (r).

created. A direction to renew may be couched in discretionary terms in order to avoid placing the estate and the persons interested at the mercy of the lessor, and yet impose on the trustees a trust which the court will execute if they do not (a). If there is a direction to renew, whether express or implied (b), it must be obeyed, and the persons whose duty it is to renew, whether the trustees or the tenant for life, are liable to compensate the remainderman for the loss occasioned by their default (c), or if he himself renews, to repay him the amount of the fine, provided that it is reasonable (d). In the absence of a direction to renew, the mere circumstance of there being limitations over imposes no necessity on the tenant for life, and he may renew or let the term expire (e). If, however, a tenant for life in such circumstances chooses to renew, he is a trustee of the lease for all persons interested under the subsequent limitations, in accordance with the principle of equity that parties interested jointly with others in a lease cannot take to themselves the benefit of a renewal to the exclusion of the other parties interested with them (f).

power.

Trustees are now authorised by statute, subject to the provisions of the settlement, to obtain renewals of settled leaseholds (g).

SUB-SECT. 2.—By Whom the Expenses of Renewal are Borne.

By whom the expenses of renewal are to be borne.

1208. The settlement should provide how and by whom the expenses of renewal are to be raised and borne. If provision is made for raising the expenses of renewal by sale or mortgage of the estate itself, or of another estate, the tenant for life loses the rents of the part sold in the case of sale and keeps down the interest in the case of a mortgage (h). But if there is a direction

The trustees have a right to be recouped by the tenant for life, who has received the rents and profits that ought to have made good the fine (Montford (Lord) v. Cadogan (Lord), supra); but, in a case where the estate of a tenant for life who neglected to renew was insolvent, the loss was borne by capital and not by the tenant for life in remainder (*Wadley v. to renew leases out of rents and profits, the whole expense has to be borne by the tenant for life (i).

If there is no special direction in the settlement as to the raising of expenses of renewal (k), or the special direction is limited in amount (l), the expenses of renewal, or the excess of them over the limited sum, must be borne by the tenant for life and remaindermen in proportion to their actual enjoyment of the renewed lease (m). This rule applies to the case of leaseholds for lives as well as of leaseholds for years (n). If, therefore, the tenant for life derives no benefit from the renewal, as where he dies before the expiration of the original lease, the whole expense must fall on the remaindermen (o). On the other hand, if the remaindermen derive no benefit from the renewal, as in the case of a tenant for life renewing for his own life, his estate cannot make any claim in respect of the fines (p).

The remainderman pays compound interest on the amount found due from him for the period down to the death of the tenant for life and simple interest from that date till payment (s). If the renewal is made by or at the expense of the remainderman, or the money is raised by a mortgage of the corpus, the difficulty arises that, unless some course is taken to protect the interest of the remainderman, the tenant for life may enjoy the estate during his whole life without bearing any greater charge than the interest on the debt created by the renewal, and he may have no assets to pay his proportion of the principal money. This inconvenience has been avoided by requiring the tenant for life to give security for an amount calculated upon the assumption that his life will last during a portion of the renewed lease. If he dies within the time during which it is assumed his life will last, the security is void for the excess. If he outlives that time, he may be called on to give a further security to cover the additional proportion then to be attributed to him (t); but his income cannot be impounded on account of a security that he may have to give in the future (a).

Milles* (1802), 6 Ves. 761). A direction to raise fines out of rents and profits has been held to authorise the raising of a gross sum by sale or mortgage (Allan v. Backhouse (1813), 2 Ves. & B. 65).

1210. Should renewal from any cause become impossible, then if there is a paramount trust to renew the estate for the benefit of all persons entitled in succession, the lease should be sold on renewal becoming impracticable, and the proceeds of sale and of any sum set apart to provide for renewals invested as capital (b), or, if possible, the reversion in fee simple should be purchased by the trustees for the benefit of the estate (c). If, however, the court on the construction of the settlement comes to the conclusion that the tenant for life is entitled in specie to the whole rents and profits, charged only with the payment of such a sum as may be required for the renewal, then, on the renewal becoming impracticable, there is nothing by which the charge can be ascertained, and no means by which any substituted benefit to be given to the remainderman can be ascertained by the court; the tenant for life is, therefore, entitled to all rents and profits accruing during the co-existence of the existing term and his life, including any sums directed to be accumulated for purpose of renewal and, if the term is sold, to a corresponding proportion of the price obtained for it (d). The court does not sanction the purchase of the reversion to the prejudice of the tenant for life by trustees who have a mere power of renewal (e).

1211. Where copyholds for lives are settled on persons by way of succession, the rule is the same, that the tenant for life and those in remainder should bear the burden of the fines on admissions in

1213. It is often desired that the enjoyment and devolution of personal estate and personal chattels shall, without conversion, accompany the limitations of some freehold estate settled by the same or another settlement. This object is generally effected by assigning such personal estate or personal chattels to trustees to hold upon such trusts and with and subject to such powers, provisoes, agreements and declarations as shall correspond with the uses, trusts, powers, provisoes, agreements and declarations limited, declared and expressed of and concerning the freehold estate as nearly as the different tenures and qualities of the said premises respectively, and the rules of law and equity will permit, but not so as to increase or multiply charges or powers of charging (i).

Settlements
of personalty with realty.

A settlement of chattels to devolve with land is commonly called making them heirlooms (k).

Heirlooms

1214. As an estate tail in personalty is legally impossible (l), an assignment or bequest of personalty, either by way of immediate gift or executed trust (m), to go on the same uses as realty—or in the case of chattels, a direction that they shall be treated as heirlooms so far as the rules of law and equity permit (n)—gives life interests in the personality or chattels to those who take life interests in the realty at birth (o), but such personality or chattels vest absolutely in the first person who becomes entitled to the real estate for a vested estate of inheritance, whether in possession or remainder (p), subject of course, if the estate is in remainder, to all prior limited interests, such as estates for life. Such an interest in personality may be defeated by any event which would defeat the estate of the person becoming entitled thereto in the realty (q), but if once vested it is not divested by death under twenty-one (r) or by death before the interest becomes indefeasibly vested, if ultimately in fact it does so vest (s).

A settlor may modify this rule, but he must use words which indicate his intention to do so with reasonable certainty. Thus it is possible to introduce provisions defeating the interest of a tenant in tail by purchase (t) who dies under the age of twenty-one years (a), or defeating the interest of a tenant in tail who does not come

But where a testator who was entitled to leaseholds for three lives, which he had insured, gave his real and personal estate to his daughter for life, with remainder to her first and other daughters successively in tail, an infant tenant in tail in remainder took no interest in the surplus money arising from a policy on one of the lives which fell in after her death (Meller v. Stanley (1864), 12 W. R. 524).

(t) If such a provision referred to every tenant in tail of the settled land, whether claiming by purchase or descent, it would transgress the rule against perpetuities and consequently fail. The words "tenant in tail" have, however, been construed to mean tenant in tail by purchase (Christie v. Gosling (1866), L. R. 1 H. L. 279; Martelli v. Holloway (1872), L. R. 5 H. Clauses of this nature, which are contingent limitations by way of trust in the nature of clauses of postponement and defeasance, must be clear and certain both in expression and operation (*Re Exmouth (Viscount), Exmouth (Viscount) v. into actual possession of the land (b). But the court, in considering whether the settlor has manifested an intention to exclude the rule, ought not to be influenced by the actual events that have occurred or lay hold of doubtful expressions tending to restrict the interest in the personalty to those who come into possession of the real estate (c).

It is sometimes desired to settle chattels to go with a title, but unless this is done by way of an executory trust (d) a gift of chattels as heirlooms, or so far as the rules of law and equity permit, to such persons as shall from time to time be holders of the title, confers an absolute interest on the first person who becomes beneficially entitled to the chattels as holder of the title (e).

(c) Scarsdale (Lord) v. Curzon, supra, at p. 51; Re Parker, Parker v. Parkin, [1910] 1 Ch. 581, 585. Thus the general rule has been held not to be negated by a direction that chattels should be held and enjoyed by the several persons who from time to time should successively be entitled to the use and possession of the settled realty, as in the nature of heirlooms, to be annexed and go along with the settled realty (Foley v. Burnell (1783), 1 Bro. C. C. 274; (1785), 4 Bro. Parl. Cas. 319), or by a direction that chattels should continue annexed to real estate so long as the law would permit to be inherited by the several persons who should succeed thereto (Re Cresswell, Parkin v. Cresswell (1883), 24 Ch. D. 102), or by a direction that chattels should continue annexed to a mansion-house so long as the law would permit and be enjoyed by the several persons who should succeed to the mansion-house (Re Parker, Parker v. Parkin, supra). A simple direction that real estate and chattels shall go together as long as the rules of law and equity permit simply means that, inasmuch as there is a difference between realty and personalty, the limitations are to be applied according to the quality of the property, and since the law does not permit personalty to go as an estate tail, when such a limitation is reached, an absolute interest is given (Scarsdale (Lord) v. Curzon, supra, at p. 54). Consequently such a phrase does not make the trust executory (Vaughan v. Burslem (1790), 3 Bro. C. C. 101, overruling on this point Gover v. Grosvenor (1740), 5 Madd. 337; Trafford v. Trafford (1746), 3 Atk. 347; Scarsdale (Lord) v. Curzon, supra, at p. 50; Harrington (Countess) v. Harrington (Earl) (1871), L. R. 5 H. L. 87), or extend or alter the disposition made of the personal estate (Christie v. Gosling (1866), L. R. 1 H. L. 279, 299), or imply a provision that the interest of a tenant in tail by purchase, who dies under the age of twenty-one years, shall be defeated (Re Parker, Parker v. Parkin, supra).

heirlooms.

1215. The custody of chattels settled as heirlooms is generally given to the tenant for life for the time being of the settled lands, and the trustees of the settlement are usually expressly relieved from seeing to their insurance and preservation (f). The tenant for life may be required to sign an inventory of, but not to give security for, the chattels, unless there is reason to suppose that they will be in danger in his custody (g).

SECT. 5.—Settlement of Personal Chattels.

Personal chattels.

1216. Personal chattels are sometimes made the subject of a settlement (h). The settlement in such a case should provide that the beneficiaries should have the enjoyment of the settled chattels, and that the trustees should not interfere with the custody, management or legal ownership thereof, or be responsible for the custody, preservation or insurance thereof against fire, or other damage or loss. It is expedient to provide for the substitution of new articles of equal value for those originally settled (i).

Description.

The settled chattels need not be specifically described (k), though it is often convenient to enumerate them in a schedule.

Registration.

A settlement, on marriage, of chattels does not require registration as a bill of sale (l).

SUB-SECT. 1.—Referential Uses and Trusts.

1217. Uses and trusts of one subject-matter of settlement are frequently declared by reference to the uses and trusts of another subject-matter of settlement set out in the same or a different instrument (m).

Where real estate was directed to go in the same manner as personal estate, which was settled upon trust for the settlor and his wife for their lives and, in default of children, for the settlor, his executors, administrators and assigns, upon the death of the settlor without children, it was held that the real estate, subject to the widow's life interest, went to the heir (p).

The same manner.

A conveyance to the subsisting uses of a settlement does not revive an estate tail which has been barred (q). Where a fund which had been appointed to the settlor under a power of appointment was settled to such of the trusts of the subsisting settlement as should be capable of taking effect, this was held to mean the trusts of the settlement as then subsisting without regard to intermediate appointments (a). A reference to the trusts of a settlement then subsisting and capable of taking effect incorporates the provisions of the trust referred to, but not directions as to the time when the benefits are to arise (b).

the first sum was subject (c). Where lands were settled to the uses, intents, and purposes declared concerning certain other lands, a subsequent inaccurate reference to the limitations was rejected (d).

Where property is directed to be held upon the same trusts as property already settled, it is not thereby made an accretion to the original property (e), unless there is some context from which such an intention can be inferred (f).

SUB-SECT. 2.—Referential Powers.

Referential
powers.

1218. Powers created by reference to other powers are taken to be of the same nature and extent as such other powers (g), but the power created by reference is divested of any conditions or restrictions personal to the donee of the original power (h); if, however, the original power is inconsistent with the limitations in the instrument creating the referential power, the referential power is limited so as to conform with those limitations (i).

of provisions.

Where estates were devised to the same uses and subject to like powers as settled estates stood limited, the effect was to make the property passing by the will subject to all the trusts, powers, and provisos contained in the settlement, so that powers of sale, leasing, and exchange had to be exercised by the same persons as those who had to exercise the similar powers contained in the settlement, namely, the trustees of the settlement (k). Where land was resettled upon the trusts and subject to the powers contained in the original settlement ulterior to a specified life estate, these powers were held to include a power of sale, exchange, and leasing to be exercised at the request of that tenant for life (l). Where a legacy was directed to go on the trusts of a settled fund, the power of the trustees of the settled fund to make a loan of a limited amount to the husband was held to be not increased (m). Where by deed £10,000 was settled upon trust for A. with power to appoint to her children or issue, and also power to appoint a life interest to a husband, and the settlor subsequently by will gave a similar sum for the sole benefit of B. in the same manner as nearly as might be as the £10,000 secured for A., B. was held to have the same power to appoint to children, issue, and husband as A. SUB-SECT. 3.—Multiplication of Charges.

1219. Where trusts are created by reference a proviso is commonly inserted that charges on the estate shall not be increased or multiplied. In the absence of such a proviso, as a general rule a trust created by reference is not read so as to make a duplication of charges (p), although an intention to do so may be collected from the language of any particular instrument (q).

1220. An advowson may be made the subject of a settlement, but if the settlement is made by deed the restrictions imposed by the Benefices Act, 1898 (r), must be borne in mind. Whether the settlement is made by deed or will, it seems better that it should declare who are to be the beneficiaries of the advowson, that is, who have the right to present, and not who are the persons to be presented (s). The tenant for life of an advowson, if his estate is in possession, has the right to present to a vacancy (t); if his estate is equitable, the trustees must present his nominee (u).

SECT. 8.—Provisions for Subsequent Marriage.

1221. It is not infrequent in settlements to make provision enabling the surviving spouse to provide for an after-taken husband or wife and the issue of such subsequent marriage.

In the case of realty settlements such provision is generally made by the insertion of powers to jointure an after-taken wife and charge portions in favour of the children of a subsequent marriage (a).

In the case of personalty settlements such provision is made by a power to revoke the trusts declared by the settlement as to a portion of the trust fund, the amount being commonly made to depend on the number of children of the first marriage who become adult, and resettle such portion in favour of an after-taken spouse and the children of the subsequent marriage (b). power is generally made conditional on the making of a settlement on a subsequent marriage, but sometimes an absolute power is given to withdraw from the settlement a part of the fund made subject to it. Where a settlement is made on the marriage of an infant ward of court, the court directs that such settlement shall contain provisions for the children of a future marriage (c). Such provision is best made by a power to give each child of the second marriage a sum not exceeding that which the child of the first marriage had (d). A power to provide for a future husband has also been inserted (e).

1222. It is unusual to insert in settlements express powers of appointing new trustees, and, as a rule, the only clause (f) inserted in a settlement is the nomination of the persons or person, commonly the husband and wife and the survivor of them, who shall exercise the statutory power of appointment (g).

If the settlement is a settlement of realty and no power of sale is thereby conferred on the trustees, a declaration may be inserted (h) that the trustees of the settlement shall be trustees for the purposes of the Settled Land Acts (i). In the event of a vacancy occurring among the trustees the statutory powers for the appointment of new trustees are available (j). If there are no trustees appointed for the purposes of the Acts (i), or if in any other case it is expedient (k) that trustees for the purposes of the Acts (i) should be appointed, the court may, on the application of the tenant for life, or of any other person having under the settlement an estate or interest in the settled land in possession, remainder, or otherwise, or, in the case of an infant, of his testamentary or other guardian or next friend, appoint fit persons to be trustees of the settlement for the purposes of the Acts (l). (j) Trustee Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 53), s. 47.

(k) The court would probably consider it expedient to appoint new trustees for the purposes of the Settled Land Acts in cases similar to those in which it has seen fit to exercise its jurisdiction under the Trustee Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 53), s. 25; see title TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES.

(l) Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), s. 38. An order appointing two persons trustees for the purposes of the Acts of a settlement created by a will was held to have the effect of appointing the persons named separate trustees of three several settlements created by the will (Re Skerrett's Estate, [1899] W. N. 240).

trustee, and, until the appointment of new trustees, the personal representatives or representative for the time being of the last surviving or continuing trustee, are the trustees or trustee of the settlement for the purposes of the Acts (m). The power is discretionary, and an application may be refused if the court is satisfied that it is impossible for the tenant for life to exercise the powers vested in him by the Acts (n), but it is right to give him an opportunity to exercise these powers (o).

The appointment of trustees being required to impose a check upon the extensive powers given by the Acts (n) to a tenant for life, the court has declined to appoint the tenant for life (p) or his solicitor (q), and has even refused to appoint two persons who were near relatives to one another (r). There is no rule of practice that the subsisting trustees of a settlement ought to be appointed trustees for the purposes of the Acts (n). The tenant for life may propose other persons if he sees fit (s), but the existing trustees, if willing and fit to act, are, as a general rule, appointed (t). In a proper case persons resident abroad have been appointed (a).

Trustees for the purposes of the management of the estate of an infant (b) may be appointed by the settlement (c), and, if no persons are so appointed, then trustees of the settlement, with a power of sale or of consent to the exercise of a power of sale, are trustees for this purpose, and, if there are no such trustees, the court may appoint trustees on the application of a guardian or next friend of the infant (d).

Part XIII.—Stamps on Settlements.

SECT. 1.

Settlements on Marriage.

Settlement of personalty on marriage.

SECT. 1.—Settlements on Marriage.

1223. A settlement, or articles for a settlement, on marriage (e), of any definite and certain principal sum of money (f), whether charged or chargeable on lands or other hereditaments or heritable subjects or not, or to be laid out in the purchase of lands or other hereditaments or heritable subjects or not, or of any definite and certain (g) amount of stock or any security (h), is chargeable with a stamp duty of 5s. for every £100, and also for any fractional part of £100 of the amount or value of the property settled or agreed to be settled (i).

Settlement of policies.

1224. Where a settlement, or articles, includes money which may become payable under a policy of life insurance, or any security not being a marketable security, the settlement, or articles, is charged with ad valorem duty in respect of that money (k). If no provision is made for keeping up a settled policy (l), the ad valorem duty is chargeable only on the value of the policy at the date of the settlement, and a declaration of such value contained in the settlement is primâ facie evidence thereof (m).

(e) The Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 39), does not contain any definition of "settlement" in the body of the Act. In ibid., Sched. I., a settlement is defined as "any instrument, whether voluntary or upon any good or valuable consideration, other than a bonâ fide pecuniary consideration, whereby any definite and certain principal sum of money, etc., is settled or agreed to be settled in any manner whatsoever." A voluntary disposition inter vivos must now, however, be stamped as if it were a conveyance or transfer on sale; see p. 713, post. Presumably the marriage consideration would be held to extend to property settled by a third party, e.g., a parent of one of the intending spouses. As to stamp duties, generally, see title REVENUE, Vol. XXIV., pp. 714 et seq.

(f) This does not include a settlement of land held on trust for sale (Re Stucley's Settlement (1870), L. R. 5 Exch. 85). It includes foreign bonds (Re Alsager's Marriage Settlement and Inland Revenue Commissioners (1864), 2 H. & C. 969).

(g) The words "definite and certain" apply not to the interest or nature of the interest, but to the amount of stock. Accordingly every interest, whether vested, whether liable to be divested, whether contingent or not in a certain and definite sum of stock, is included (Onslow v. Inland Revenue Commissioners, [1891] 1 Q. B. 239, C. A.).

(h) A deed which merely substitutes a fresh security for a security conferred by an original settlement is not a settlement (Inland Revenue v. Oliver, [1909] A. C. 427).

(i) Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 39), s. 1, Sched. I., title "Settlement." An order of court making a settlement, must bear a settlement stamp (Re Gowan, Gowan v. Gowan (1884), 17 Ch. D. 778).

(k) Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 39), s. 104 (1). A resettlement which makes a new disposition of the policy moneys is within this provision (Northumberland (Duke) v. Inland Revenue Commissioners, [1911] 2 K. B. 343; reversed on another point, [1911] 2 K. B. 1011, C. A.).

(l) The provision for keeping up the policy need not necessarily be made by the settlement itself: if there is a pre-existing covenant to keep up a policy, and the settlement assigns directly, or by implication of law, the benefit of such covenant, such assignment is a provision for keeping up the policy (Northumberland (Duke) v. Inland Revenue Commissioners, [1911] 2 K. B. 1011, C. A., reversing the decision of HAMILTON, J., supra, on this point).

(m) Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 39), s. 104 (2) (a), (b).

1225. No further duty is payable by reason of any provision contained in the settlement, or articles, for the payment or transfer of the money, stock, or security thereby settled or, where such money, stock, or security is in reversion or is not paid or transferred upon the execution of the settlement, or articles, by reason of any provision for the payment by the person entitled in possession to the interest or dividends of such money, stock, or security, during the continuance of such possession, of any annuity or yearly sum not exceeding interest at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum upon the amount or value of such money, stock, or security (n).

SECT. 1.
Settlements on Marriage.

Settlement not charged as security.

1226. Where several instruments are executed for effecting the settlement of the same property, and the ad valorem duty chargeable in respect of the settlement of the property exceeds 10s., one only of such instruments is charged with ad valorem duty and the rest are charged with a duty of 10s. (o).

Several instruments.

A settlement made in pursuance of a previous agreement on which ad valorem settlement duty has been paid in respect of any property is chargeable with only 10s. duty in respect of the same property (p).

Settlement
pursuant to agreement.

1227. No ad valorem duty is payable in respect of a settlement of real estate on marriage (q), but it is charged with 10s. duty as a conveyance or transfer for other than a pecuniary consideration (r).

Marriage

of realty.

SECT. 2.—Voluntary Dispositions.

1228. Before the 29th April, 1910 (s), a voluntary settlement of personal property was subject to ad valorem settlement duty in precisely the same way and to the same extent as a settlement on marriage (t).

Voluntary
settlements.

Now, however, any conveyance or transfer operating as a voluntary disposition inter vivos (a), is chargeable with the like stamp duty as dispositions.

(n) Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 39), s. 105.

(o) Ibid., s. 106 (1), (3). This provision contemplates one transaction by way of settlement of property effected at the same time by several documents, not a series of documents effecting at different stages different dispositions with regard to the same property. It does not embrace the case of a settlement giving a power of revocation and appointment which is subsequently executed so as to effect what is in substance a fresh settlement (Russell v. Inland Revenue Commissioners, [1902] 1 K. B. 142, C. A.).

(q) Massereene and Ferrard (Viscount) v. Inland Revenue Commissioners, [1900] 2 I. R. 138. A deed appointing a new trustee of what was originally a settlement of real estate is not a settlement within the Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 39), Sched. I., by reason of the sale of the settled real estate (Massereene and Ferrard (Viscount) v. Inland Revenue Commissioners, supra). For stamps on instruments appointing new trustees generally, see title TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES.

if it were a conveyance or transfer on sale, with the substitution in each case of the value of the property conveyed or transferred for the amount or value of the consideration of the sale (b). It follows, therefore, that a voluntary settlement of personalty, whether of a certain and definite sum (c) or not, or a voluntary settlement of realty or of land settled by way of trust for sale, if executed after the 28th April, 1910, is chargeable with duty on the value of the property conveyed or transferred at the same rate as if it were a conveyance on sale for the like value (d).

Appointments
under special powers.

1229. An instrument of appointment relating to any property in favour of persons specially named or described as the objects of a power of appointment, where duty has been duly paid in respect of the same property upon the settlement creating the power or the grant of representation of any will or testamentary instrument creating the power is exempt from ad valorem duty (e), and is only chargeable with a duty of 10s. as an appointment (f). It is to be observed that this exemption relates only to appointments under of a purchaser, or incumbrancer, or other person in good faith and for valuable consideration, but also, except where marriage is the consideration, any conveyance or transfer where the Commissioners of Inland Revenue are of opinion that by reason of the inadequacy of the sum paid as consideration or other circumstances the conveyance or transfer confers a substantial benefit on the person to whom the property is conveyed or transferred (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s. 74 (5)). As to the stamp duty on voluntary dispositions inter vivos, and the need of adjudication thereon, see title REVENUE, Vol. XXIV., pp. 732 et seq.

(b) Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s. 74 (1). For the duties on conveyances or transfers on sale, see Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 39), Sched. I., title "Conveyance or Transfer on Sale"; title SALE OF LAND, pp. 444 et seq., ante. As to the exemption of a voluntary conveyance to a non-profit-sharing body, incorporated by special Act, of property to be held as an open space or preserved for the benefit of the nation, and of certain other excepted instruments, see Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s. 74 (1), (6); title REVENUE, Vol. XXIV., p. 734.

(c) An instrument chargeable with duty either as a settlement under the Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 39), or as a voluntary transfer or conveyance, is charged with duty as a conveyance or transfer, and not as a settlement (Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910 (10 Edw. 7, c. 8), s. 74 (4)).

(d) A settlement executed for adequate pecuniary consideration is chargeable with duty on the amount of the consideration as a conveyance on sale. If executed for inadequate pecuniary consideration, it is chargeable with a duty in respect of the property passing and not of the benefit conferred, i.e., the value of the property less the sum paid. It seems to follow that in the case of a voluntary settlement no deduction will be allowed in respect of any interest thereby conferred on the settlor.

(e) Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 39), Sched. I., title "Settlement, Exemption." An instrument cannot come within the exemption unless the donees of the power are parties to it, and thereby make an appointment. Where, therefore, a deed of revocation under a power provided that a fund should be transferred to the trustees of a deed already executed, which deed was a marriage settlement, the donees of the power not being parties thereto, duty was chargeable on the marriage settlement (Russell v. Inland Revenue Commissioners, [1902] 1 K. B. 142, C. A.).

special powers. In the case of appointments under such powers which only limit the proportions in which members of a class are to take (g), the court would probably look at the substance of the transaction and not hold them to be instruments operating as voluntary dispositions inter vivos, but the contrary view would probably be taken in the case of a voluntary appointment under a general power.

SECT. 2.
Voluntary Dispositions.

Appointments under general powers.

1230. Settlements, whether made in consideration of marriage or voluntarily, may, without penalty, be stamped within thirty days after execution, or after they have been first received in the United Kingdom if executed outside it, or fourteen days after assessment by the Commissioners if their opinion has been required (h).

Part I.—Introductory.

PART I. Introductory.

1231. The expressions “sewers” and “drains” have no special technical meaning in law apart from statute. They are words in popular use of somewhat similar connotation, meaning channels by which liquid is gradually carried off, and are more particularly applied to artificial channels for draining water off land or for carrying away feculent and polluted matters from houses and buildings(a). In some Acts of Parliament a sharp distinction is drawn between them(b), in others they are used as practically synonymous(c). Not uncommonly the expressions mean more than the mere channel and include the whole apparatus for drawing off the water or other liquid(d).

“sewers” and “drains.”

1232. The power to construct sewers and drains is incident to the ordinary ownership of land(e), but where such construction and maintenance have become necessary or important for the welfare of the community, various enactments have been passed to facilitate, regulate, and in many cases to compel such construction

Construction.

(a) Apart from statutory definitions, the words “drain” and “sewer” would in law mean the same, as, for example, when used in a conveyance; see Pilbrow v. St. Leonard, Shoreditch, Vestry, [1895] 1 Q. B. 433, C. A., per RIGBY, L.J., at p. 441. In the fen districts the term “drain” is applied to wide, canal-like navigable channels; see Oxford English Dictionary; Johnson’s Dictionary; and compare Sutton v. Norwich Corporation (1858), 27 L. J. (CH.) 739; Coulton v. Ambler (1844), 13 M. & W. 403.

(b) See, e.g., Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 4; Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), s. 250; and see pp. 724, 725, post.

(d) A marsh wall or embankment to protect the drained land may be part of a sewer (Poplar District Board of Works v. Knight (1858), E. B. & E. 408); compare title RATES AND RATING, Vol. XXIV., p. 102. Sewage disposal works are part of the sewers within the meaning of the Rivers Pollution Prevention Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 75), s. 7 (Brook v. Meltham Urban District Council, [1909] A. C. 438). A manhole may be part of a sewer within the meaning of the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 4 (Swanston v. Twickenham Local Board (1879), 11 Ch. D. 838, C. A.).

(e) See title LAND IMPROVEMENT, Vol. XVIII., pp. 276, 301; Land Drainage Act, 1847 (10 & 11 Vict. c. 38); Land Drainage Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 133), Part III. These enactments enable owners of land to procure outfalls for their drains through the lands of adjoining owners. As to applying moneys under settlements in constructing drains and sewers, see Settled Estates Act, 1877 (40 & 41 Vict. c. 18), ss. 20—22; Settled Land Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 38), ss. 16, 22, 25; and see titles LAND IMPROVEMENT, Vol. XVIII., pp. 283; SETTLEMENTS, pp. 644, 646, 664, ante.

PART I.

and maintenance. The principal classes of sewers and drains which have been the subject of legislation are those for the prevention of flooding, and more particularly for draining marsh or fen land, for carrying the water off highways, and for draining houses and buildings (f). The first of these as regards public works are commonly under the jurisdiction of bodies known as Commissioners of Sewers (g), the second class are primarily under the control of the highway authorities (h), and the third of the sanitary authorities (i).

Certain collegiate and other corporate bodies have express powers for constructing and diverting sewers (j), and in the case of undertakings authorised by Parliament provision is commonly inserted enabling the undertakers to make all necessary sewers and drains for the purposes of their works (k).

Statute law.

1233. The statute law governing sewers and drains for sanitary purposes is part of the public health law and is mainly contained in the Public Health Acts (l). In many districts there are local Acts also in operation (m), while in London there is a body of law distinct from but similar to that in force in the rest of the country (n). The City of London, except in regard to the main (f) Other statutory provisions requiring drains will be found in such Acts as the Factory and Workshop Act, 1901 (1 Edw. 7, c. 22), s. 8; Factory and Workshop Act, 1907 (7 Edw. 7, c. 39), s. 3 (see title FACTORIES AND SHOPS, Vol. XIV., pp. 452, 461); and the Alkali, etc. Works Regulation Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7, c. 14), ss. 3, 4 (see title PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION, Vol. XXIII., p. 408). Noxious ponds and ditches also require to be drained; see Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), ss. 48, 91—98; Local Government Act, 1894 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 73), s. 8 (1) (f); Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76), s. 43; titles METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., p. 456; NUISANCE, Vol. XXI., pp. 536, 540; PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION, Vol. XXIII., p. 611.

(g) See p. 773, post. In London the County Council has control over both the main sewers and the flood sewers; see Metropolis Management (Thames River Prevention of Floods) Amendment Act, 1879 (42 & 43 Vict. c. cxcviii.); title METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., pp. 395, 398, 457; and see also title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., p. 206.

(h) See title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., pp. 57, 113.

(i) See title PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION, Vol. XXIII., p. 419. As the sanitary authority and the highway authority are now in many cases the same, it is very common to find that the roadways and streets are drained into the same sewers as the houses and buildings adjoining, so that there is no clear distinction between these two classes. As to the sanitary authorities outside London, see ibid., pp. 372, 373; title LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol. XIX., pp. 292, 293. As to London, see titles METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., pp. 395, 408, 411; PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION, Vol. XXIII., pp. 373, 374.

(m) The Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847 (10 & 11 Vict. c. 34), ss. 22—24, relating to sewers and drains, may be incorporated in local Acts, but have been largely displaced by the general law.

(n) It is principally to be found in the various Metropolis Management Acts and in local Acts obtained at the instance of the London County sewers, has a separate set of provisions (o). Sewerage, drainage and sewage disposal are also matters to be dealt with under town-planning schemes (p). The power to carry out large schemes for sewerage is sometimes obtained by the promotion of a private Bill (q).

1234. In the country generally the statutory powers conferred on urban authorities are more extensive than those of rural authorities, but the Local Government Board may by order confer upon rural district councils (r) all or any of the urban powers, duties and liabilities. In some cases united districts governed by a joint board have been formed by the Local Government Board (s) for the purpose of making a main sewer, or of carrying into effect a system of sewerage for the use of all districts or contributory places comprised in such united district, and the necessary powers for carrying on this work are conferred on these joint boards (t).

(t) The provisional order forming a united district must define the purposes for which such district is formed, and the powers, rights, duties, capacities and liabilities and obligations under the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), which the joint board is authorised to exercise or perform, or to which it is made subject (Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 281); see title LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol. XIX., p. 339. Usually the joint board is merely given jurisdiction in regard to the main sewers, so that the several local authorities in the district remain responsible for the connecting sewers. For an example of a joint board for main sewerage, see A.-G. v. Birmingham, Tame and Rea District Drainage Board, [1912] A. C. 788. As to special drainage districts, see title LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol. XIX., p. 334.

Part II.—Sewers and Drains for Sanitary Purposes.

SECT. 1 Definitions.

SECT. 1.—Definitions.

SUB-SECT. 1.—In General.

Definition of
"drain."

1235. A "drain" means (a) any drain (b) of and used for the drainage of one building only or premises within the same curtilage (c) and made merely for the purpose of communicating therefrom with a cesspool or other like receptacle for drainage, or with a sewer into which the drainage of two or more buildings or premises occupied by different persons is conveyed. It is a question of fact in each case whether two or more houses constitute one building within this definition (d). For certain purposes of the Public Health Acts (e) a drain is defined as including a drain used for the drainage of more than one building (f).

"sewer."

1236. The term "sewer" as defined in the Public Health Act, 1875 (g), includes sewers and drains of every description, except (1) drains to which the word "drain" applies (h), and (2) drains vested in or under the control of any authority having the management of roads and not being a local authority under that Act (i).

The term "sewer," therefore, includes all the parts of a properly made sewer (j), but not the receptacle into which the sewage is conveyed (k), nor apparatus connected with the disposal of the

(a) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 4.

(b) For the general meaning of "drain," see p. 719, ante.

(c) The meaning of the expression "premises within the same curtilage" is not quite clear. Two blocks of buildings let out in a number of separate tenements and standing in an enclosed yard or court for the common use of the tenants may be premises within the same curtilage, so that the common drain running through the court may be a drain and not a sewer (Pilbrow v. St. Leonard, Shoreditch, Vestry, [1895] 1 Q. B. 33). On the other hand, separate houses abutting on or surrounding a private court or passage may not be premises within the same curtilage (St. Martin-in-the-Fields Vestry v. Bird, [1895] 1 Q. B. 428, C. A. (the Lowther Arcade); Harris v. Scurfield (1904), 68 J. P. 516).

(d) Thus, two semi-detached houses may be one building (Hedley v. Webb, [1901] 2 Ch. 126) or two buildings, according to their construction (Humphery v. Young, [1903] 1 K. B. 44).

The first exception does not exclude pipes laid in a street or intended street for the purpose of taking the sewage of the houses although no building, or only one, has been connected therewith (n), nor does it exclude pipes laid in private land and taking the drainage of more than one building or premises (o), but in such a case the pipe is only a sewer from the junction of the pipe conveying the drainage of the second building or premises; above that it is a drain (p). The drainage of a second building or premises into a drain, although done illegally and surreptitiously, may convert such drain into a sewer from the point of junction (q). But the cutting off of the drainage of a pipe from a sewer, so that

A cesspool which has been converted into a kind of catchpit may be part of the sewer (Pakenham v. Ticehurst Rural District Council (1903), 67 J. P. 448). There seems to be some doubt as to whether an overflow pipe from a sewer is a sewer; see *Leeds and District Worsted Dyers and Finishers' Association, Ltd. v. The legal distinction between sewers and drains is uncertain and unsatisfactory. Conduits constructed as private drains are frequently asserted to be sewers for which the ratepayers at large, and not the individuals who derive benefit, are responsible. The decisions are hard to reconcile with one another or with any intelligible principle.

The second exception excludes drains vested in or under the control of a road authority at the 11th August, 1875 (t), although such drains may have subsequently become vested in or under the control of a sanitary authority (u).

Natural watercourse.

1237. A natural watercourse is not a sewer, nor does the fact that it is used for the discharge of drainage or sewage make it one (v), but such a watercourse can be so dealt with as to be converted into a sewer. Whether it has become so or not is a question of fact in each particular case (w).

"drain."

and used for the drainage of one building only, or premises within the same curtilage, and made merely for the purpose of communicating with a cesspool or other like receptacle for drainage, or with a sewer into which the drainage of two or more buildings or premises occupied by different persons is conveyed (c), also any drain for draining any group or block of houses by a combined operation (d) under the order of any vestry or district board or metropolitan borough council (e), and also any drain for draining a group or block of houses by a combined operation laid or constructed before the 1st January, 1856, pursuant to an order or direction or with the sanction or approval of the Metropolitan Commissioners of Sewers (f).

1239. The word "sewer" means and includes sewers and drains of every description except drains to which the word "drain" Definition of "sewer."

(c) The definition of a drain in the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 4, is practically identical with this part of the definition; see p. 722, ante.

(d) A "combined operation" for draining houses is only mentioned in the Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), s. 74, but that provision is limited to existing houses. Under ibid., s. 76, however, in the case of new houses, the vestry or district board could order the manner and form in which the drains should be laid, and under that provision a combined operation could be ordered (Bateman v. Poplar District Board of Works (1886), 33 Ch. D. 360, C. A.).

(e) Vestries and district boards were constituted by the Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), for the purposes of that Act, but these powers have been transferred to the metropolitan borough councils; see title METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., p. 402.

(f) These bodies were constituted under the Metropolitan Sewers Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 112) (now repealed), and their powers were determined as from the 1st January, 1856, by the Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), ss. 145—148. Drains for draining a block of houses by a combined operation sanctioned by other Commissioners of Sewers which existed in London before the Metropolitan Commissioners of Sewers are not drains within the above definition, but are sewers (Appleyard v. Lambeth Vestry (1897), 66 L. J. (Q. B.) 347, C. A.). Combined drains sanctioned by the Commissioners before 1856, but not laid and constructed until after that date, would also appear to be sewers. The order as to a combined operation need not be a formal order, and whether such order has been made or not is a question of fact. The signature of the chairman of the board to a book belonging to the board showing that the plan for the combined drain was before the board, and had been considered and approved, would be sufficient evidence of an order (Bateman v. Poplar District Board of Works, supra); so would the plan book of the vestry showing the particular combined operation initialled by the surveyor as having been laid satisfactorily (Geen v. Newington Vestry, [1898] 2 Q. B. 1; Greater London Property Co. v. Foot, [1899] 1 Q. B. 972). The fact that the owner had asked the vestry to make the drain, followed by payment of the estimated cost thereof to the vestry, has been held to be sufficient evidence of an order (House Property and Investment Co. v. Grice (1911), 75 J. P. 395; compare Cheetham v. Manchester Corporation (1875), L. R. 10 C. P. 249). If it appears that the vestry had delegated its powers of approval to its surveyor, evidence of his approval is not sufficient (High v. Billings (1903), 67 J. P. 388), although he might sanction details (see Heaver v. Fulham Borough Council, [1904] 2 K. B. 383), and a strong presumption that it was made with the knowledge and sanction of the vestry in the absence of proof of the making of an order is not sufficient (Bethnal Green Vestry v. London School Board, [1898] A. C. 190); and, as to such proof, see Stokes v. Haydon (1901), 65 J. P. 756.

applies (g). In the case of the drainage of a group or block of houses by a combined operation, the illegal and surreptitious draining of another building or other premises into the combined system converts such drain into a sewer from the point of junction (h), and a substantial departure from the combined operation ordered also converts the drain into a sewer (i).

The above definition of "sewer" includes sewers made in connexion with works for the prevention of floods (j).

City of London.

1240. In the City of London the sewers and drains, other than the main sewers, are regulated by the City of London Sewers Acts, 1848 (k) and 1851 (l). These Acts contain no definitions of sewers and drains; the distinction drawn is between public sewers and drains and private sewers and drains (m).

SECT. 2.—Vesting of Sewers in Local Authorities.

SUB-SECT. 1.—In General.

Vesting in local authority.

1241. All existing and future sewers (n) within the district of a local authority (o), together with all buildings, works, and materials and things belonging thereto, with certain exceptions (p), vest in and are under the control of that local authority, provided that sewers within the district of a local authority, constructed by or transferred to some other local authority or a sewage board (q) or (g) Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), s. 250. This definition should be compared with that in the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 4; see p. 722, ante. It is very similar to that definition both in form and effect, but it does not contain the second exception as to highway drains; see p. 722, ante. As the term "drain" as used in London includes certain combined drains (see p. 725, ante), these are excluded from the definition of "sewer" in London under the exception of drains. Apart from these exceptions, the law is the same in regard to the interpretation of these terms, both in London and outside; see p. 722, ante.

(h) See note (g), p. 723, ante; and see Geen v. Newington Vestry, [1898] 2 Q. B. 1; Florence v. Paddington Vestry (1895), 12 T. L. R. 30; Klett v. Camberwell Vestry (1896), 60 J. P. 411 (a county court decision).

But a mere deviation in the direction of the drain does not convert it into a sewer (Greater London Property Co. v. Foot, [1899] 1 Q. B. 972), nor does the addition of the drainage of other premises within the same curtilage to those already drained (Gorringe v. Shoreditch Borough Council (1902), 66 J. P. 565).

(n) For the definition of "sewer," see p. 722, ante. A single private drain within the meaning of the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 59), s. 19 (see p. 760, post), remains a sewer and vests in the local authority (Pemsel and Wilson v. Tucker, [1907] 2 Ch. 191).

(o) For the definition of "local authority," see title PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION, Vol. XXIII., pp. 364, note (s), 372.

(q) A local authority or a sewage board may construct sewers outside its district or area by agreement with the local authority within whose district the work is to be done (Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), ss. 28, 285); see pp. 745, 746, post. As to sewage boards, see other authority having power by statute to construct sewers, subject to any agreement to the contrary, vest in and are under the control of the authority which constructed the same or to which the same have been transferred (r). The effect of such vesting is to give the local authority the property not only in the sewer, but in the space occupied by it (s).

The excepted sewers (t) which do not vest in the local authority are:—(1) Sewers made by any person for his own profit or by any company for the profit of the shareholders, the term “profit” meaning some benefit more than and independent of the mere removal of the sewage or liquid conveyed away, although it need not necessarily be of a pecuniary nature (u); (2) sewers made and used for the purpose of draining, preserving, or improving land under any local or private Act of Parliament or for the purpose of irrigating land (a); (3) sewers under the authority of any Commissioners of Sewers appointed by the Crown (b).

A., per BRETT, M.R., at p. 578; see title COMPULSORY PURCHASE OF LAND AND COMPENSATION, Vol. VI., p. 12; and compare ibid., p. 33), and renders it liable to be rated (see title RATES AND RATING, Vol. XXIV., p. 16), or assessed to income tax in respect thereof (see title INCOME TAX, Vol. XVI., p. 619, note (e)). Such vesting may be subject to prescriptive rights of draining; see p. 728, post, and see the cases cited in note (a), p. 741, and notes (o), (p), p. 743, post.

(u) Thus, if a person constructed a sewer for the purpose of carrying off the sewage of a number of new houses into a cesspool (Acton Local Board v. Batten (1884), 28 Ch. D. 283; Pinnock v. Waterworth (1887) 51 J. P. 248), or into a river or stream (Bonella v. Twickenham Local Board of Health, Holmes v. Twickenham Local Board of Health (1887), 20 Q. B. D. 63, C. A.; Ferrand v. Hallas Land and Building Co., [1893] 2 Q. B. 135, C. A.), for the purpose of getting rid of the sewage for sanitary purposes, such sewer would not be made by him for his own profit, nor would a pipe for carrying off superfluous water (Russell v. Knight (1894), Times, 9th May). Sewers constructed as part of the development of a building estate are not made for profit, and vest in the local authority (Vowles v. Colmer (1895), 64 L. J. (CH.) 414), but sewers for a whole town constructed as a speculation and paid for by a voluntary rate by the users are sewers made for profit (Minehead Local Board v. Luttrell, [1894] 2 Ch. 178), as are sewers made to convey water to be subsequently used, as for cattle (Croysdale v. Sunbury-on-Thames Urban Council, [1898] 2 Ch. 515), or to enable quarrying operations to be more economically conducted (Sykes v. Sowerby Urban Council, [1900] 2 Q. B. 584, C. A.).

Runcorn Rural Council*, [1898] 1 Ch. 561, C. A.), even although sewage may be conveyed thereinto by third parties.

(b) As to these, see p. 774, post. Nothing in the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), is to be construed to authorise any local authority to use, injure or interfere with any sluices, floodgates, sewers, groyne or sea defences, or other works made under the authority of such 1242. A local authority may also within its district acquire by purchase or otherwise from any person a sewer or any right of making or user or any other right in or respecting a sewer, with or without any buildings, works, materials or things belonging thereto. Any person may sell or grant to such authority any such sewer, right, or property belonging to him (c).

Any person who, previously to the purchase of a sewer by such authority, has acquired a right to use such sewer, is entitled to use the same, or any sewer substituted in lieu thereof, to the same extent as he would or might have done if the purchase had not been made (c).

SUB-SECT. 2.—In the Metropolis.

Main sewers.

1243. The main sewers of the Metropolis, which were in 1855 vested in the Commissioners of Sewers of the City of London (d) and in the Metropolitan Commissioners of Sewers (e) respectively (f), were, with the walls, defences, banks, outlets (g), sluices, flaps, penstocks, gullies, grates, works and things thereunto belonging, and the materials thereof, with all rights of way and passage used and enjoyed by such Commissioners over and to such sewers, works and things, and over all rights (h) concerning or incident thereto, vested in the Metropolitan Board of Works, and so were all sewers and works from time to time made by the Board (i). They were subsequently transferred to and are now vested in the London County Council (k).

Other sewers.

1244. All other sewers in the Metropolis, which were vested in the Metropolitan Commissioners of Sewers and situated in parishes for which vestries were constituted, and in districts for which Commissioners, or any sewers or other works made and used by any body of persons or person for the purpose of draining or improving land under any local or private Act, or for the purpose of irrigating land, without the consent of such Commissioners or body of persons or person expressed in writing, and in the case of a corporation under its seal, and nothing in the Act is to prejudice or affect the rights, privileges, powers or authorities given or reserved to any person under such local or private Acts for draining, preserving or improving land (Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 327).

(c) Ibid., s. 14. The purchase-money is subject to the same trusts, if any, as the sewer, right or property sold was subject (ibid.).

(d) See City of London Sewers Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. clxiii.), amended and continued by the City of London Sewers Act, 1851 (14 & 15 Vict. c. xci.).

(e) See note (f), p. 725, ante.

(f) These main sewers are specifically mentioned and described in the Metropolitan Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), Sched. D.

(g) A marsh wall to protect land from inundation and through which sewers pass to drain land at low water is a sewer and would probably vest in the borough council (Poplar District Board of Works v. Knight (1858), E. B. & E. 408; and see Plumstead Board of Works v. Kent Commissioners of Sewers (1877), 41 J. P. 388).

district boards were formed (l), were, with the like works, materials, and rights of way and other rights, vested in the vestries and district boards thereof respectively, as well as all sewers made and to be made within any such parish or district (m). These sewers were subsequently transferred to the metropolitan borough councils (n).

SECT. 2.
Vesting of Sewers in Local Authorities.

The sewers in the City of London, other than the main sewers, remained vested in the Commissioners of Sewers of the City (o), but were subsequently transferred to the Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens of the City acting through the Common Council (p).

of London.

1245. The Metropolitan Board of Works had, and the London County Council as its successor has, power by an order under its seal to declare to be main sewers any sewers in the Metropolis not vested in it which ought in its opinion to be considered as main sewers and to be under its management. Upon such order being made such sewers vest in it and come under its management (q).

Council.

1246. With the previous consent in writing of the London County Council a metropolitan borough council may transfer the powers and duties vested in such borough council under the Metropolis Management Acts (r) in relation to sewerage and drainage to the County Council, whereupon all sewers and property vested in such borough council under those Acts for the purposes of or in connexion with such powers and duties become vested in the County Council (s).

The powers and property of the Commissioners were also preserved in relation to such parts of parishes which were united in to districts as were within the City (Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), s. 242); and see p. 726, ante.

(q) Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), s. 137. The Council may also by such order take under its jurisdiction and authority any other matters in relation to sewerage and drainage with respect to which jurisdiction or authority is by that Act vested in any vestry or district board (ibid.).

In order that this transfer may take place, the borough council must pass a resolution to that effect by a majority at a meeting of such council specially convened for the purpose of considering the question of such transfer and of which not less than fourteen days' notice shall have been given, and not less than two-thirds of the whole council must be present at such meeting (ibid.). The County Council has the same powers of defraying expenses incurred by it in connexion with the 1247. In addition to the sewers which may have become vested in a local authority, it is the duty of such authority to cause to be made such sewers as may be necessary for effectually draining its district for the purposes of the Public Health Acts (t), but these purposes do not generally include the removal of trade effluents (u). Moreover, this duty does not require a local authority to make sewers for the prospective development of a building estate (a), nor for outlying houses which may be reasonably drained into cesspools (b).

SUB-SECT. 1.—In General.

A local authority may also from time to time enlarge, lessen, alter the course of, cover in, or otherwise improve any sewer belonging to it. It may discontinue, close up or destroy any such sewer which has in its opinion become unnecessary, on condition of providing a sewer as effectual for the use of any person who may be so deprived of the lawful use of any sewer, provided the discontinuance, closing up, or destruction of any sewer is not so done as to create a nuisance (c). The cost of enlarging or altering a sewer vested in the local authority is borne by the authority and cannot in urban districts be imposed on the frontagers execution of the powers so transferred as it has in regard to other expenses under the Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120) (ibid., s. 89; Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 102), s. 28).

(u) See the opinion of the law officers mentioned in the Third Report of the Royal Commission on Sewage Disposal, p. xi., and the recommendation of that Commission, p. xvii.; and see p. 764, post. A contrary opinion was expressed by CHARLES, J., in Peebles v. Oswaldtwistle Urban District Council, [1897] 1 Q. B. 384, but that decision was reversed on appeal, and in the House of Lords, although on different grounds, sub nom. Pasmore v. Oswaldtwistle Urban District Council, [1898] A. C. 387; and on this point, see ibid., per Lord HALSBURY, L.C., at p. 396.

(a) R. v. Tynemouth Rural District Council, [1896] 2 Q. B. 451, C. A. In urban districts the local authority can in such cases require the owner to provide sewers in the new streets under the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 150, or under the Private Street Works Act, 1892 (55 & 56 Vict. c. 57); see p. 738, post; title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., pp. 215 et seq. In rural districts these powers do not apply unless extended to them by the Local Government Board; see title LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol. XIX., p. 352.

T. 356; but see p. 724, ante). The provision of a substituted sewer appears to be a condition precedent to the discontinuance of the existing one; see A.-G. v. Dorking Union Guardians (1882), 20 Ch. D. 595, C. A., per JESSEL, M.R., at p. 604; A.-G. v. Acton Local Board (1882), 22 Ch. D. 221, per FRY, J., at p. 232. As to the costs of adapting the owner's drains to the new sewers, see the cases on the similar provision in the Metropolis, cited in note (r), p. 735, post.

as if it were a new sewer, provided the original sewer has once been accepted as satisfactory by the authority (d).

During the construction or repair of sewers the local authority must take proper precautions against accident, and cause any sewer or drain during the construction or repair thereof by it to be lighted and guarded during the night so as to prevent accidents (e).

1248. A local authority may (f) carry any sewer through, across, or under any turnpike road or any street or place laid out as or intended for a street (g), or under any cellar or vault which may be under the pavement or carriage-way of any street, and, after giving reasonable notice in writing to the owner or occupier (h), into, through, or under any lands (i) whatsoever within its district (k), if on the report of its surveyor it appears necessary for the efficient discharge of the duty in the way most beneficial to the public (l) to do so. (i) For definition of "lands," see title PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION, Vol. XXIII., p. 427, note (o); it includes land covered with water, so that sewers may be laid into, through or under a stream (*Durrant v. The sewer may be laid partly above ground (Roderick v. Aston Local Board (1877), 5 Ch. D. 328, C. A.).

any person who sustains damage by reason of the laying of such sewers (m), but such compensation need not be paid before the work is done, nor is it necessary for the local authority to purchase the land (n). In carrying out this work the authority has also, in certain cases, power to alter the position of gas and water pipes (o).

1249. A local authority may, if it thinks fit, provide a map exhibiting a system of sewerage for effectually draining its district, and any such map must be left at its office and be open at all reasonable times to the inspection of the ratepayers of its district (p).

1250. Any person aggrieved by the default of a local authority to provide its district with sufficient sewers has no remedy at law by action or otherwise (q); the proper procedure is by complaint to the Local Government Board (r). Where a district council makes default in supplying a parish with sufficient sewers, the parish council may make a complaint to the county council (s).

(m) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 308. This may include damage by reason of blocking the access to premises (Lingké v. Christ Church Corporation, [1912] 3 K. B. 595, C. A., distinguishing Herring v. Metropolitan Board of Works (1865), 19 C. B. (N. The notice to make the sewer may be withdrawn and the owner is entitled to recover compensation for any loss he may suffer thereby (Davis v. Witney Urban District Council (1899), 63 J. P. 279, C. A.). The negligent laying of a sewer gives rise to a claim for damages, and the local authority is liable for the acts of its servants and contractors (*Hardaker v. 1251. The Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847 (t), contains clauses (u) giving Commissioners very similar powers of making and maintaining sewers to those above mentioned, which apply when incorporated in local Acts.

SUB-SECT. 2.—In the Metropolis.

1252. In addition to the sewers already vested in the London County Council, that Council must make all such other sewers and works, and such diversions or alterations of any existing sewers or works vested in it under the Metropolis Management Acts (a), as it may from time to time think necessary for the effectual sewerage and drainage of the Metropolis (b). This is an absolute obligation imposed upon the Council when the necessity is clear, and the court will enforce it by mandamus, but the method in which the duty may be carried out is in the Council's discretion (c). The Council must also discontinue, close up, or destroy such of the sewers for the time being so vested in it as it deems unnecessary (d).

1253. The borough councils, in addition to the sewers already vested in them, must cause to be made such sewers and works, or such diversions or alterations of sewers and works, as may be necessary for effectually draining their boroughs (e). They have, however, a discretion as to the time and manner in which this duty shall be exercised (f). No new sewer may be made without the

The necessary communication of any sewer or drain with a main sewer must be made by the borough council to the satisfaction of the London County Council, and three clear days' previous notice in writing to the latter Council must be given by the borough council (h).

1254. For the purposes of such works the London County Council and the borough councils have full power and authority (i) to carry any such sewers or works through or across or under any turnpike road (k) or any street (l) or place laid out as or intended for a street, as well beyond as within the limits of the Metropolis, or through or under any cellar or vault under the carriageway or pavement of any street, and into, through, or under any lands whatsoever within or beyond the said limits, making compensation for any damage done (m); and the London County Council may, subject to certain consents intended to preserve the navigation of the river, construct any work through, along, over or under the bed and soil of the river Thames, making compensation to all persons having any interest in any wharves, jetties, or other property damaged by such works (n).

Private owners may also construct sewers at their own expense, subject to the sanction of the borough council and the approval of the London County Council thereto to be obtained by the borough council (ibid., ss. 44, 45). Injuries caused to ships by sewers laid without such consent or approval entitles the owners to recover from the council

The councils may enter and do any of the above works before the compensation is paid (o). The London County Council may also make and maintain any bridges, arches, culverts, passages, or roads over, under, or by the sides of or leading to or from any sewerage works constructed or to be constructed by it which it may deem necessary and convenient for preserving the communications between lands through which the said work may have been or may be made or carried; but the Council may agree with the occupiers and owners of land to pay compensation in lieu of such bridges or other works (p).

A borough council may also from time to time enlarge, contract, raise, lower, arch over, or otherwise improve or alter all or any of the sewers or works which shall be from time to time vested in it or subject to its order and control. It may also from time to time discontinue, close up, or destroy such of them as it may deem to have become unnecessary, provided it shall be so done as not to cause a nuisance (q), and if any person is thereby deprived of the lawful use of any covered sewer the council must provide some other sewer or a drain as effectual for his use as the sewer of which he is deprived (r).

This must be done at the expense of the council, which cannot use the provisions of ibid., s. 73, to throw the expense on the owners (St. Marylebone Vestry v. Viret (1865), 19 C. B. (N. general sewerage of the Metropolis, make such general or special order as to it may seem proper for the guidance, direction, and control of the borough councils in the levels, construction, alteration, and maintenance, and cleansing of sewers in their respective areas, and for securing the proper connexion and intercommunication of the sewers of the several areas, and their communications with the main sewers vested in the London County Council, and generally for the guidance, direction, and control of the borough councils in the exercise of their powers and duties in relation to sewage; and all such orders are binding on the borough councils (b).

SECT. 4.—Maintenance and Repair of Sewers.

SUB-SECT. 1.—In General.

Duty to repair.

1258. Every local authority must keep in repair all sewers belonging to it (c), and cause them to be so constructed, covered, ventilated and kept as not to be a nuisance or injurious to health, and to be properly cleansed and emptied (d). For the purpose of such repair the local authority has such right of access thereto as is reasonably necessary to do the work; but this does not prevent the owner of the land from using or altering his land so as to make the access more difficult (e).

Default.

1259. Failure to maintain the existing sewers does not give rise to a cause of action against the local authority (f), the remedy of those aggrieved being by complaint, as in the case of failure to construct sufficient sewers (g); but negligence in carrying out the repairs or improper exercise of its powers of maintenance gives a ground of (b) Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), s. 138. This does not empower the London County Council to take the initiative by ordering specific new works of sewerage. It merely gives it control over the construction and arrangement of new local sewers. The initiative is left to the borough council (R. v. St. George, Hanover Square, Vestry, [1895] 2 Q. B. 275). The London County Council is also authorised from time to time to make, alter, and repeal bye-laws for all of the above purposes, except that in the City of London the power is limited to the main sewers (Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 102), s. 83).

(c) Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 15. In the case of sewers which are "single private drains" within the meaning of the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 59), s. 19, the local authority can in appropriate cases recover the costs of the repair, but is still generally liable in respect of the non-repair (R. v. Hastings Corporation, [1897] 1 Q. B. 46, per WRIGHT, J., at p. 49); and see p. 759, post. As to protection of houses and streets during repair of sewers, see Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847 (10 & 11 Vict. c. 34), s. 79, which is incorporated in the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), by ibid., s. 160.

action to the person thereby damaged (h). Improper construction (i) or ventilation (k) and neglect to cleanse and empty the sewers also affords a ground of action to such persons (l); but, in the absence of negligence on the part of the local authority, mere omission to cleanse or to repair a sewer does not entitle a person who has suffered damage by reason of such omission to recover such damages from the authority (m).

SECT. 4.
Maintenance and Repair of Sewers.

SUB-SECT. 2.—In the Metropolis.

1260. The London County Council and the metropolitan borough councils must from time to time repair and maintain the sewers vested in them, or such of them as may not be discontinued, closed up, or destroyed under the powers above mentioned (n). They must also cause the sewers vested in them to be constructed, covered and kept, so as not to be a nuisance (o) or injurious to health, and to be properly cleared, cleansed, and emptied (p). For the purpose of clearing, cleansing, and emptying such sewers they may construct and place either above or under ground such reservoirs, sluices, engines, and other works as may be necessary (q).

SECT. 5.—Sewering of Streets not Repairable by Inhabitants at Large.

SUB-SECT. 1.—In General.

1261. In urban districts, and in those rural districts to which these urban powers have been extended (r), local authorities may require the owners and occupiers of the premises fronting, adjoining, or abutting on part of any such street as is not a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large to sewer, level, pave, flag, channel, or make good or provide means for lighting the same, when such works are required (s).

SUB-SECT. 2.—In the Metropolis.

Liability of metropolitan owners and occupiers.

1262. Where any sewer is constructed by any metropolitan borough council in and for the drainage of any new street (t), or of any house or houses in the borough (a), the expense of constructing such sewer and the works appertaining thereto, including the cost of gullies, side entrances, lengths of sewer at the intersections of streets, and other incidental charges and expenses, are borne and defrayed by the owners (b) of such street or houses and of the land bounding or abutting on such street respectively (c). Such expenses are apportioned by the council in such proportion as sewers from exhaling through gully holes, gratings, or other openings of sewers in any of the streets or other places within their area (Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), s. 71). It is also their duty to keep street gratings and gullies cleansed (London County Council (General Powers) Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. cexii.), s. 16). The County Council has also power to make orders and bye-laws as to the cleansing of sewers by borough councils (Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), s. 138; Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 102), s. 83); and see p. 735, ante.

(s) This requisition is made under the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), ss. 150 et seq., but, where the Private Streets Works Act, 1892 (55 & 56 Vict. c. 57), is adopted, under that Act; see title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., pp. 215 et seq., pp. 227 et seq.; and see Denman v. Finchley Urban District Council (1912), 76 J.P. (Journal) 316.

(t) For the definition of "new street," see title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., p. 20. As to a street of which one side has been built, see Clerkenwell Vestry v. Edmondson & Son, [1902] 1 K.B. 336, C.A.; title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., p. 21.

(a) These are houses built after the 1st January, 1856. In respect of sewers made in streets by private persons before that date into which drains of houses were branched, the owners of such houses may be ordered to contribute to the cost (Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), s. 80). This provision was extended to main sewers and sewers built after the 1st January, 1856, at the cost of private parties (Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 102), s. 59).

(b) "Owner" is defined in the Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), s. 250, and, except for a provision as to serving certain notices, means the person for the time being receiving the rack-rent of the lands or premises in connexion with which the said word is used, whether on his own account or as agent or trustee for any other person, or who would receive the same, if such lands or premises were let at a rack-rent.

(c) Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 102), s. 52. This, however, does not authorise a council to charge the owners with the cost of substituting a new sewer in a new street in place of one it deems just (d). The amount charged upon or payable in respect of each house or premises is payable either before the works are commenced, during their progress, or after their completion, as the council in each case determines, and either in one sum or by instalments, within such period, not exceeding twenty years, as the council directs (d). The amount may be recovered from the present or any future owner of the house or premises by action or before a court of summary jurisdiction (e).

SECT. 5.
Sewering of Streets not Repairable

1263. Provision is also made for constructing sewers in any streets in which there have previously been either no sewers or open sewers, but on which rates in respect of sewers have been levied. In such cases part of the expense is apportioned among the owners and part paid by the borough council. The amount is recoverable by action or summarily (f).

1264. In making the apportionments under either of the above provisions, the council, should it deem it expedient, may charge the owners of land in less proportion than the owners of house property (g), and may itself defray part of the expense out of the rates (h). When the amount is paid before the work is completed, the council must repay the difference if the actual cost is less, and can recover the deficiency from the owners if it is more (i).

already laid by an owner with the consent of the authority (Fulham Board v. Goodwin (1876), 1 Ex. D. 400; see Bonella v. Twickenham Local Board of Health, Holmes v. Twickenham Local Board of Health (1887), 20 Q. B. D. 63, C. A.). Owners and occupiers of land may with the consent of the council lay sewers at their own expense, and the council may contribute out of the rates to the cost of the construction (Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 102), s. 44). As to other persons contributing to the cost of such sewers, see ibid., s. 59. Land abutting on a street includes the soil of private roads (Pound v. Plumstead Board of Works (1871), L. R. 7 Q. B. 183), and land at the end of a street (Sheffield v. Fulham Board (1876), 1 Ex. D. 395); and see title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., p. 201.

(d) As to apportionment, see title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., pp. 202, 203, and cases cited in the notes thereto. There is no limit of time within which the apportionment must be made (Bradley v. Greenwich Board of Works (1878), 3 Q. B. D. 384).

in the preceding paragraphs (j) may appeal to the London County Council (k).

1266. In all cases in which time is given by the London County Council, borough council, or other body for the payment of any contribution ordered to be made (l) towards the cost of a sewer, the County Council must keep a register of all such orders for contribution (l). The register must contain the description of the premises, the amounts payable, the periods for payment, and other necessary particulars (l). It must be open to inspection by interested parties during office hours and without charge (l). Borough councils and other bodies giving time for payment of any such contribution must forthwith transmit to the County Council a copy of such order or resolution with all necessary particulars (l).

SECT. 6.—Sewage Disposal.

SUB-SECT. 1.—In General.

Discharge of sewage into lake, stream, etc.

1267. A local authority may not make or use any sewer or drain or outfall for the purpose of conveying sewage or filthy water into any natural stream or watercourse, or into any canal, pond or lake, until such sewage or filthy water is freed from all excrementitious or other foul or noxious matter, such as would affect or deteriorate the purity and quality of the water in such stream or watercourse, or in such canal, pond or lake (m). If, however, sewage or filthy water is so far freed from such matter as not to deteriorate the water in the stream or watercourse, canal, pond or lake, the local authority may convey it thereinto (n).

Discharge into sea.

1268. There is no right at common law to discharge sewage into the sea, and if a local authority by so doing causes a nuisance it may be liable to be restrained by injunction and to pay damages for injury caused (o).

(j) See pp. 738, 739, ante.

(k) Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 102), s. 57.

(l) Ibid., s. 60. There is power to order contributions to be made by owners of houses drained into main sewers constructed by bodies other than the public authorities (Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), s. 80), and into all sewers built since the 1st January, 1856, by persons other than the public authorities (Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 102), s. 59); and to accept payment by instalments (ibid.; and see Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 130), s. 80).

(where the water complained of was surface water containing only silt and sand; but the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 332, does not appear to have been considered); A.-G. v. Birmingham, Tame and Rea District Drainage Board, [1910] 1 Ch. 48, C. A.; on appeal, [1912] A. C. 788 (where the sewage effluent was shown to be purer than the water in the stream, although not wholly freed from excrementitious and other foul and noxious matter).

1269. Local authorities are not expressly required to provide any works or means for the disposal of sewage, and the Local Government Board cannot require them to do so (p); but, as the absence of such works may lead to a nuisance rendering a local authority liable to be restrained at the instance of the Attorney-General or of a private individual whose property has been injured (q), and also to the payment of damages (r), or to proceedings under the Rivers Pollution Prevention Acts (s), the authority may indirectly be forced to provide adequate means for the disposal of the sewage of its district. The Local Government Board may also make the provision of such works a condition of the sanctioning of a loan or the making of an order for other purposes (t). A local authority is not, however, liable to be restrained in respect of a nuisance arising from the pollution of a watercourse by sewage escaping from sewers vested in it by statute, if such pollution has not been caused or increased by its own acts, even although it has neglected to provide a proper system of sewage disposal (a).

SECT. 6.
Sewage Disposal.

Liability of authority to provide for disposal of sewage.

take on lease, any land, buildings, engines, materials, or apparatus, either within or without its district (d), and may contract (e) to supply any person with sewage for any period not exceeding twenty-five years, and as to the execution and cost of works, either within or without its district, for the purposes of such supply, provided no nuisance is created in the exercise of any of these powers (f). An authority cannot erect pumps and engines and like works without first acquiring the land or obtaining the consent of the owner (g).

deal with land.

1271. A local authority may deal with any lands held by it for the purpose of receiving, storing, disinfecting, or distributing sewage in such manner as it deems most profitable, either by leasing them for not exceeding twenty-one years for agricultural purposes, or by contracting with some person to take the whole or a part of the produce of such land, or by farming such land and disposing of the produce thereof (h).

In dealing with land for any of the above purposes provision must be made for effectually disposing of all the sewage brought to such land without creating a nuisance (i).

Expenses.

1272. Where any local authority agrees with any person as to the supply of sewage and as to works to be made for the purpose of such supply, it may contribute to the expense of carrying into execution by such person all or any of the purposes of such agreement (j).

(d) As to the purchase of land, see title COMPULSORY PURCHASE OF LAND AND COMPENSATION, Vol. VI., p. 163. An authority is not bound to sell forthwith land no longer required for sewage purposes; see A.-G. v. Teddington Urban Council, [1898] 1 Ch. 66; title OPEN SPACES AND RECREATION GROUNDS, Vol. XXI., pp. 588, 589. When land is acquired for purposes of sewage disposal, the depreciation of other land of the same owner adjoining forms a proper subject of compensation (Cowper Essex v. Acton Local Board (1889), 14 App. Cas. 153); and see title COMPULSORY PURCHASE OF LAND AND COMPENSATION, Vol. VI., p. 41. The making of works of distribution and service for the supply of sewage to lands for agricultural purposes is deemed an "improvement of land" authorised by the Improvement of Land Act, 1864 (27 & 28 Vict. c. 114), and the provisions of that Act apply accordingly (Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 31); see title LAND IMPROVEMENT, Vol. XVIII., p. 280. The Sewage Utilization Acts, 1865 (28 & 29 Vict. c. 75) and 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 113) were repealed by the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 343; but 1273. Local authorities may also combine for the purpose of executing and maintaining works for sewage disposal (k). Several districts may be united for the same purpose (l). A local authority may dispose of its sewage, by causing its sewers to empty into those of an adjoining authority, if such authority agrees. A local authority of any district may, by agreement with the local authority of any adjoining district other than one in the Metropolis (m) and with the sanction of the Local Government Board (n), cause its sewers to communicate with the sewers of such neighbouring authority in such manner, and on such terms, and subject to such conditions as may be agreed on between the local authorities or, in case of dispute, as may be settled by the Local Government Board: but, so far as practicable, storm waters must be prevented from flowing from the sewers of the former local authority into the sewers of the latter local authority, and the sewage of other districts or places must not be permitted by the former authority to pass into its sewers so as to be discharged into the sewers of the latter authority without the latter's consent (o). In some cases a prescriptive right has been acquired by one authority to discharge sewage into the sewers of another, but the burden of receiving such sewage must not be increased without the consent of the latter authority (p).

Sewage Disposal.

Combination of authorities.

1274. For the purpose of outfall or distribution of sewage, a local authority may, subject to certain provisos (q), exercise outside its district the same powers of carrying sewers through public and private land as it may exercise inside its district (r).

Exercise of

as to collegiate sewers, see Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 335. A local authority may also become a shareholder in any company with which any agreement in relation to the matters mentioned in the text has been or may be entered into by such local authority, or to or in which the benefits and obligations of such agreement may have been or may be transferred or vested (Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 30).

(n) A preliminary agreement should be entered into between the authorities before application is made to the Local Government Board. A local inquiry (see title PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION, Vol. XXIII., pp. 375, 376) is usually held before the Board grants its sanction.

Cottingham Local Board* (1879), 12 Ch. D. 725; compare New Windsor Corporation v. Stovell (1884), 27 Ch. D. 665). SECT. 6.

Sewage Disposal.Disposal by London
County Council.SUB-SECT. 2.—In the Metropolis.

1275. The London County Council may cause the sewage and refuse from its sewers to be sold or disposed of as it sees fit, but so as not to create a nuisance (s). The existing system of sewers was created in pursuance of a provision requiring the predecessors of the London County Council to construct the necessary sewers for preventing as far as practicable the sewage of the Metropolis from passing into the Thames within the Metropolis (a). To pass the sewage into the Thames outside the Metropolis was not forbidden, provided no nuisance was created (b). The works executed by the County Council must be kept so as not to be a nuisance, and in deodorizing or in disposing of any sewage the County Council must act in such manner as not to create a nuisance (c). If the County Council causes a nuisance, the court will grant an injunction to restrain it, at the instance of an owner whose property is injured (d). Complaint may also be made to a Secretary of State, who may at his discretion cause inquiry to be made into the matter and direct such prosecution or prosecutions, or take such other proceedings, as he may think fit, in order to ensure the prevention or abatement of the nuisance (e).

Disposal
by borough councils.

1276. Metropolitan borough councils dispose of their sewage either by discharging it directly into the main sewers of the London County Council or indirectly through the sewers of other councils pursuant to orders made by the County Council (f). Whenever the County Council orders the sewers of any borough council for the purpose of outfall or otherwise to be connected with any sewer or sewers vested in the council of another borough, the council for the drainage of whose borough such connexion is required and at whose instance the order is made may execute all Metropolitan Board of Works* (1863), 9 L. T. 139. Under the present system the sewage is carried a long distance down the Thames beyond the limits of the Metropolis. The outfalls of the Council are protected from interference under the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 336, the Rivers Pollution Prevention Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 75), s. 18, and the Thames Conservancy Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. clxxxvii.), by ibid., s. 224 (3), now applicable to the Port of London Authority (Port of London Act, 1908 (8 Edw. 7, c. 68), s. 7); see also Thames Navigation Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. cxlix.); and see title WATERS AND WATERCOURSES.

In that Act the expression "deodorize" includes any process whereby the solid suspended matters in sewage may be precipitated or separated from the liquid before the discharge thereof, or whereby the noxious or offensive properties of sewage may be neutralized, and the expression "sewage" means and includes the contents of the sewers before the employment of such process (ibid., s. 32).

necessary works as well within its own borough as within any other borough specified in the order (g). Every communication to be made by any borough council with any sewer outside its own borough must be made subject to the supervision and to the satisfaction of the council having control over such last-mentioned part; and where it appears to the County Council to be equitable and just, under the circumstances of the case, that any borough council so connecting its sewers with the sewers vested in another council should pay such council any compensation or remuneration, either in one sum or by yearly or other payments, for the use of the latter's sewer, the County Council may order such payment accordingly, and the council to which any such payment is directed to be made may recover the same from the council directed to make it, either by action or before a court of summary jurisdiction (g).

A borough council, even with the consent of the County Council, cannot enter into a binding agreement to receive sewage from a district outside the Metropolis (h).

SECT. 7.—Sewage Works Outside District.

SUB-SECT. 1.—In General.

1277. For certain purposes of sewage disposal a local authority has power to do works outside its district (i). It can only do so subject to the following conditions:—

conditions.

(1) Three months at least before commencing the construction or extension of any sewer or other work for sewage purposes (k) without its district it must give notice by advertisement in one or more of the local newspapers circulated within the district where the work is to be done (l), whether the work is to be done with the consent of the local authority (m) or of the owner or not (n).

(2) A copy of such notice must also be served at the like interval

The notice must describe the nature of the intended work, and state the intended termini thereof, and the names of the parishes and the streets and other lands, if any, through, across, under, or on which the work is to be made, and must also name a place where a plan of the intended work is open for inspection at all reasonable hours (ibid.).

(3) If any such person or council, or any other owner, lessee, or occupier who would be affected by the intended work, objects to such work and serves on the local authority notice in writing of such objection at any time within the said three months, such work must not be commenced without the sanction of the Local Government Board, unless the objection is withdrawn (r).

Inquiry.

1278. The Local Government Board may, on the application of the local authority, appoint an inspector to make inquiry on the spot into the propriety of the intended work and into the objections thereto and to report to the Board thereon, and on receiving such report the Board may make an order disallowing the intended work or allowing it with any necessary modifications (s).

Power of

to do works outside Metropolis.

1279. Whenever it is found necessary for any metropolitan borough council, for the purpose of making, altering, maintaining, or discontinuing any of its sewers (a), to carry any sewer or works beyond the limits of the Metropolis, the council may execute works beyond such limits, and cleanse, repair, and maintain such works as it may from time to time deem necessary, but no work may be performed or commenced by any council beyond these limits except for the purpose of continuing or forming part of a work commenced or executed within its borough, nor without the previous consent of the London County Council and of the borough council or authority of the parish or place through which the work may pass (b). If any such borough council or authority refuses such consent, a Secretary of State may decide whether such consent ought to be withheld, and he may make such order as he thinks just (b).

SECT. 8.—Expenses of Sewers and Sewage Works.

SUB-SECT. 1.—In General.

1281. Expenses incurred by urban authorities in connexion with sewers and sewage are payable as part of the general expenses, but if on the 11th August, 1875, they were payable out of the borough fund or rate they continue so payable (e). Urban authorities.

1282. In rural districts the expenses of the construction, maintenance, and cleansing of sewers in any contributory place within a district are payable as special expenses (f). Where the district council makes any sewers for the common benefit of two or more contributory places within its district, it may apportion the expense of constructing and maintaining the work, in such proportions as it thinks just, between such contributory places; and such expenses are deemed to be special expenses incurred in respect of such contributory places (g). Rural districts.

SUB-SECT. 2.—In the Metropolis.

1283. The expenses of the London County Council in connexion with the main drainage are payable out of the county rate and county fund (h). The cost of the construction of the main drains has been met by loans raised under local Acts (i). Expenses of London County Council.

1284. The expenses of metropolitan borough councils are payable out of the general rate (j). The amount levied in respect of sewers may be levied upon the part or parts of a borough in proportion to the benefit received by such part (k). Expenses of borough councils.

provisions.SECT. 9.—Support of Works of Sewerage and Drainage.

1285. The power given to local authorities (l) to lay sewers impliedly gives them a right of subjacent support for such sewers, and probably also a right of adjacent support (m). Where sanitary authorities purchase the land for the purpose of constructing sewage works, they would, apart from statutory provisions (n), acquire from the owner the right of subjacent support for such works as are reasonably within the contemplation of the parties, and also of adjacent support so far as the lands of such owner are concerned (o). They can also acquire a right of support, both subjacent and adjacent, by prescription (p). If a statute giving power to construct sewers gives no right of compensation to owners of land adjoining the land in which a sewer is laid, it is presumed that the burden of supporting such sewer is not imposed on such owners (q).

1286. In order to provide for the support from mines to sewage works and certain other undertakings of a local authority and to provide for the payment of compensation, certain statutory provisions relating to the support of waterworks by mines (r) have, with certain modifications (s), been extended to sanitary works (t) outside the Metropolis (t). "Sanitary work" is any building or work existing on the 25th August, 1883, or erected or constructed after that date, constructed by or vested in or under the control of a local authority under the powers or for the purposes of so much of the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), or of any general or local Act or provisional order (referred to as the "Sanitary Act" (Public Health Act, 1875 (Support of Sewers), Amendment Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 37), s. 2)), as relates to the construction or maintenance of any works of sewerage, drainage, sewage disposal, lighting, or water supply, and includes any fixtures, pipes, fittings, or apparatus connected with any such work and belonging to or used by the local authority (ibid.). "Support" includes vertical and lateral support (ibid.).

powers and liabilities existing only by reason of anything in the "Sanitary Act" (u).

These provisions apply to every sanitary work (v), whether the land on, in, over or under which such work is situate is or is not vested in or occupied by the local authority, and is or is not partially dedicated (w) to the public as a street, highway, or public place (a). They do not apply to or affect any right of support acquired previously to the 25th August, 1883, by a local authority in respect of any sanitary work; and no compensation is recoverable in respect of such right, and the provisions do not operate to deprive the local authority of such right or entitle any person to compensation in respect thereof (b).

The modifications of the applied provisions (c) may be summarised as follows:—The expression "undertakers" means (a) the local authority, and the "special Act" means (a) the "Sanitary Act" (d), and the Act extending these provisions to sanitary works (e). The local authority may, by or with any notice of willingness to treat or of intention to prevent or interfere with the working of any mines, specify the nature and extent of support which it requires to be left, and such notice may extend to minerals beyond the distance of forty yards (f). The map of the affected district must, as regards works existing on the 25th August, 1883, have been made within twelve months thereof (g). The compensation and the costs of and incident to settling the same must be paid and charged (h) as the expenses of the construction and maintenance of the work as provided in the "Sanitary Act" (d). A local authority may make agreements compromising claims in respect of things done or omitted before the 25th August, 1883, or otherwise for carrying into effect these provisions in relation to the past and future working of mines (i).

1287. It is the duty of a local authority to see that the houses (j) in its district are provided with proper drains (k) and that all drains within its district are constructed and kept so as not to be a nuisance or injurious to health (l).

Where any house (j) within the district of a local authority is without a drain sufficient for effectual drainage (m), the local authority must (n) by written notice require the owner (o) or occupier of such house within a reasonable time therein specified, to make a covered drain or drains emptying into any sewer which the authority is entitled to use, and which is not more than 100 feet

(j) The term "house" includes schools, factories, and other buildings in which persons are employed; see title PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION, Vol. XXIII., p. 401, note (g).

As to the powers of local authorities to regulate drainage matters by bye-laws, see title PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION, Vol. XXIII., pp. 416 et seq. These bye-laws do not extend to certain houses erected before certain dates, but, if the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 59), Part III., is adopted, then by ibid., s. 23, the bye-laws relating to the matters mentioned in the text may be made so as to affect buildings erected before such dates. The bye-laws generally require the deposit of plans showing the drains. Certain school buildings are exempted from these bye-laws by the Education (Administrative Provisions) Act, 1911 (1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 32), s. 3.

(m) This evidently means the effectual drainage of the house, and, if the system is sufficient for the house, the fact that it does not suit the sewer system of the district, or that a nuisance is caused outside the drain is immaterial, and the provision set out in the text appears not to be applicable; see *Molloy v. Where an owner is prevented by an occupier from obeying or carrying out any provisions of the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), he may apply to a justice, who, in a proper case, must in writing order the occupier to permit the execution of the work; non-compliance for twenty-four hours is punishable with a daily penalty not exceeding £5 (ibid., s. 306). Refusal or wilful misstatement by an occupier of the name of the owner of premises is punishable, unless reasonable, with a penalty not exceeding £5 (ibid.).

The local authority may require any such drain or drains to be of such materials and size (q), and to be laid at such level, and with such fall as on the report of its surveyor appears to it to be necessary (r).

If such notice is not complied with within the specified time, the local authority may do the work by agreement with the owner (s), or may do the work required, and recover the expenses incurred by it in so doing from the owner summarily (t), or may by order declare them to be private improvement expenses (u).

1288. If in the opinion of the local authority greater expense would be incurred in causing the drains of two or more houses to empty into an existing sewer than in constructing a new sewer and causing such drains to empty therein, the local authority may construct such new sewer and require the owners or occupiers of such houses to cause their drains to empty therein, and may apportion as it deems just the expenses of the construction of such sewer among the owners of the several houses, and may recover the sums apportioned from such owners in a summary manner (t), or may declare them to be private improvement expenses (u).

¶ (p) The "site" of a house includes the ground on which the house and outhouses occupied in connection therewith actually stands, and may include outbuildings requiring to be drained (Meyrick v. Pembroke Corporation (1912), 76 J. P. 365; Wright v. Wallasey Local Board (1887), 18 Q. B. D. 783). An owner cannot usually be required to carry his drain through the land of another person, even although the sewer is within 100 feet; compare Wood v. Ealing Tenants, Ltd., [1907] 2 K. B. 390; Scarborough Corporation v. Scarborough Rural Sanitary Authority (1876), 1 Ex. D. 344. Where he is the freeholder of the adjoining land which is in the occupation of another person, the burden of proof lies on him to show that he cannot connect with the sewer in that land (Meyrick v. Pembroke Corporation, supra). If the owner does not raise the objection and allows the authority to do the work, he may be ordered to pay the expenses (ibid.). For form of notice requiring construction of drain, see Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. X., p. 530.

(r) If the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1907 (7 Edw. 7, c. 53), s. 37, has been put in force in any district by order of the Local Government Board, no water pipe, stack pipe or down-spout, in existence at the date this provision is put in force (ibid., s. 13), used for conveying surface water from any premises, may be used or be permitted to serve or to act as a ventilating shaft to any drain. The penalty is a sum not exceeding 40s., and there is a daily penalty of 20s., but the person offending is not liable until after fourteen days from the service upon him of notice of such offence.

(s) See Hall v. Batley Corporation (1877), 47 L. J. (Q. B.) 148. Where the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 59), Part III. (see title PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION, Vol. XXIII., p. 363), has been adopted, the local authority may agree with the owner of any premises that any sewer or drain which such owner is required or desires to make, alter or enlarge, or any part of such sewer or drain, shall be made, altered or enlarged by the local authority (Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 59), s. 18).

Where any house within the district of a local authority has a drain communicating with any sewer, which drain, though sufficient for the effectual drainage of the house, is not adapted to the general sewerage system of the district, or is in the opinion of the local authority otherwise objectionable, the local authority may, on condition of providing a drain or drains as effectual for the drainage of the house and communicating with such other sewer as it thinks fit, close such first-mentioned drain and do any works necessary for that purpose. The expenses of those works and of the construction of any drain or drains so provided by the authority are payable by it, and are deemed to be expenses properly incurred in the execution of the Act (a).

1290. It is unlawful (b) in an urban district newly to erect any house (c), or to rebuild any house which has been pulled down to or below the ground floor, or to occupy any such house, unless and until a covered drain or drains is constructed, of such size and materials and at such level and with such fall as on the report of the council's surveyor (d) may appear to be necessary for the effectual drainage of such house (e). The drains so to be constructed must empty into any sewer which the urban authority is entitled to use within 100 feet of the site of the house to be built or rebuilt (f). If no such means of drainage are within that distance the drains must empty into such covered cesspool or other place, not being under any house, as the authority directs.

SUB-SECT. 2.—In the Metropolis.

1291. The provisions in the Metropolis as to draining houses into sewers are of a similar nature to but different in form from those in the rest of the country (h).

If any house or building situate within the area of a borough council is found not to be drained by a sufficient drain communicating and emptying into some sewer, to the satisfaction of the borough council, and if a sewer of sufficient size be within 100 feet of any part of such house or building and on a lower level, the council may, at its discretion by notice in writing (i), require the owner of such house or building, forthwith or within such reasonable time as may be appointed by the council, to construct and make from such house or building into any such sewer a covered drain, and such branches thereto, of such materials and size, at such level and with such fall as shall be adequate for the drainage of such house or building and the various parts thereof (k). Provision must be made for carrying surface water to the drains, and for a water supply for scouring the inlets and outlets to the drains, and all other such fit and proper works and arrangements as may appear to the council or to its officers requisite to secure the safe and proper working of each drain, for inspection and alteration of the works required while in progress (k), and also for enabling the council to do the work in default of the owner and recovering the expenses from him (l).

(g) Matthews v. Strachan, [1901] 2 K. B. 540. As to whether bye-laws could require this, see ibid., per RIDLEY, J., at p. 548. The Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1907 (7 Edw. 7, c. 53), s. 36, contains an additional provision which may be made operative in any district by order of the Local Government Board. It provides that no pipe used for the carrying off of rainwater from any roof may be used for the purpose of carrying off the soil or drainage from any privy or water-closet. The penalty for so doing is a sum not exceeding £5, and there is a daily penalty of not exceeding 40s.

(h) These provisions are contained in the Metropolis Management Acts and in the Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 76). As to the provisions outside the Metropolis, see pp. 750 et seq., ante.

(k) Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), s. 73. The council may require the owner to provide fit and proper paved or impermeable sloped surfaces for conveying surface water thereto, and fit and proper sinks, and fit and proper syphoned or otherwise trapped inlets and outlets for hindering stench therefrom, and fit and proper water-supply and water-supplying pipes, cisterns and apparatus for scouring the same (ibid.). The council may prescribe the make of pipe to be used (Austin v. St. Mary, Lambeth (Parish) (1858), 4 Jur. (N. S.) 1032), and require the insertion of a ventilating pipe (Lorden v. Westminster Corporation (1909), 73 J. P. 126). As to bye-laws regulating these matters, see p. 756, post. Owners of courts and passages which are not public thoroughfares may be required by the council to drain them (Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), s. 100; Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 102), s. 81).

The council cannot, however, even when the drain is defective, recover its expenses, if it decides to construct a new sewer into which new drains must be taken (m).

1292. If it appears to a borough council that a group or block of contiguous houses, or of adjacent detached or semi-detached houses, may be drained and improved more economically or advantageously in combination than separately, and a sewer of sufficient size already exists or is about to be constructed within 100 feet of any such group or block of houses, whether contiguous, detached or semi-detached, the council may order such group or block to be drained and improved by a combined operation (n).

1293. A borough council may also require any house or building to drain into a cesspool where such house or building is without sufficient drainage and there is no proper sewer within 200 feet of any part of such house or building. The council has the like powers of enforcing this provision as in the case of drains leading into a sewer (a).

1294. It is unlawful to erect any house or building in any metropolitan borough, or to rebuild any house or building therein which has been pulled down to or below the floor commonly called the ground floor, or to occupy any house or building so newly built or rebuilt, unless a drain and such branches thereto and other necessary connected works and apparatus and water-supply are constructed and provided to the satisfaction of the borough council's surveyor, of such materials and of such size and at such level and with such fall as the council directs, so that the same may be available for the drainage of the whole house or building and offices, if any (b). The drain must lead from such house or building or the intended site thereof to such sewer, already made or intended to be constructed near thereto, as the council directs, or if there is no such sewer existing or intended to be constructed within 100 feet of any part of the intended site, then to such covered cesspool or other place, not being under any dwelling-house, as the council directs (b).

(n) Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), s. 74. Questions frequently arise as to whether or not a pipe conveying sewage is a combined drain or a sewer, and the answer depends upon whether or not the council or its predecessors have ordered drainage by a combined operation; see p. 726, ante. The Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), ss. 73, 74, relate to houses in existence; ibid., ss. 75, 76, to houses about to be built or rebuilt; see *Bateman v. Before beginning to lay or dig out the foundation of any new house or building (c) within any metropolitan borough, or to rebuild any house or building therein, and also before making any drain for the purpose of draining directly or indirectly into any sewer under the jurisdiction of the council of such borough, seven days' notice in writing must be given to the borough council by the person intending to build or rebuild such house or building or to make such drain. Every such foundation must be laid at such level as will permit the drainage of such house or building in accordance with the statutory requirements and as the council orders, and every such drain must be made in such direction, manner, and form, and of such materials and workmanship (d), and with such branches thereto and other connected works, apparatus, and water supply, as before mentioned (e), and as the council orders (f), which order the council must make. Such order may require drainage by a combined operation (g), but not the construction of a sewer (h). The order may be wholly or in part in the form of general regulations provided the council exercises its discretion in the particular case (i). The making of every such drain must be under the survey and control of the council, which must cause the order to be notified to the person from whom the notice was received (j). When the notice is received the surveyor of the council may, if he deems it necessary and proper to do so, within three days after the receipt of the notice by the council, by writing under his hand, directed to and served upon the person giving the notice, require that the buildings or works referred to therein shall not be proceeded with until after the then next meeting of the council or until the directions in reference thereto shall be notified to such person, but the order of the council must be made and notified to such person within fifteen days after the receipt of such notice by the council. The officer making such inspection of a dwelling-house must examine into the drainage of the house and of any yard or outhouse belonging thereto (a).

It is generally an answer to such proceedings to show that the pipe in question is a sewer and not a drain (c); unless the nuisance has arisen by reason of a wrongful act of the defendant (d). If any owner or occupier is required under legal compulsion (f) by a local authority to remedy a defective pipe which afterwards proves to be a sewer vested in the local authority, he can recover the expenses from the local authority (g). If an occupier of a house is similarly required to remedy a defect which it is the duty of an owner to remedy, he can recover the expenses from the owner (h).

On the written application to a local authority of any person, including the surveyor or inspector of nuisances of the authority (i), stating that any drain (j) on or belonging to any premises within its district is a nuisance or injurious to health, but not otherwise (k), the local authority may by writing empower its surveyor or inspector of nuisances, after twenty-four hours' written notice to the occupier of such premises, or, in case of emergency, without notice, to enter such premises with or without assistants, and cause the ground to be opened and examine such drain (l). If such notice is not complied with, the person to whom it is given is liable to a penalty not exceeding 10s. for each day during which he continues to make default (o), and the local authority may, if it thinks fit, execute such works and recover from the owner the expenses incurred in so doing, or may by order declare the same to be private improvement expenses (p).

If the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1907 (7 Edw. 7, c. 53), s. 45, is in force in the district, the medical officer, surveyor or inspector of nuisances may be authorised by the local authority, with the consent of the owner, to test the drains with the smoke or coloured water test or other similar test, but not by water under pressure. If the drains are found defective by the test, the local authority may require the owner to make good the defect or do so itself at his expense.

require to be provided in respect of the houses in its district by the owner or occupier thereof (a), or in respect of houses newly erected or rebuilt (b), and including a drain used for the drainage of more than one building (c). The authority may recover, either summarily (d) or as private improvement expenses, any expenses incurred by it in executing any works under the powers conferred by the above provisions from the owners of the houses, in such shares and proportions as are settled by its surveyor or, in case of dispute, by a court of summary jurisdiction (e). If, however, the nuisance in such a single private drain exists solely on the premises of one owner, it is unnecessary to serve notices on the other owners or to make any apportionment (f). A notice is not invalid because it requires each owner to do work which would necessitate his entering on the property of another (g).

Before entry it must give twenty-four hours' notice in writing to the occupier of the premises to which the drain and works are attached, or leave such notice upon the premises, except in cases of emergency, when it may enter without notice (h). and condition, the council must cause them to be reinstated and made good as soon as may be, and must defray all the expense connected with the examination, reinstating, and making good, and pay full compensation for all damages or injuries occasioned (i).

If such drain and works are found not to have been made according to the directions and regulations of the council or contrary to the statutory provisions, or if, without the consent of the council or contrary to its order, any sewer or drain has been constructed, rebuilt, or unstopped, or any sewer has been broken into, the person offending is liable to a penalty not exceeding £10; and, if he does not within fourteen days, after notice in writing by the council, cause his fault to be remedied, the council may cause the work to be done and recover the expenses from him (k).

1303. If any such drain appears to be in bad order and condition, or to require cleansing, alteration, or amendment, or to be filled up, the council must cause notice in writing to be given to the owner or occupier of the premises, which notice must be a notice of an order which has been made by the council (l), requiring him forthwith or within such reasonable time as is specified in such notice to do the necessary works (m). If the notice is not complied with by the person to whom it is given, the council may, if it thinks fit, execute the works and recover the expenses from the occupier or owner of the premises, or proceed for and recover a penalty not exceeding £5, and a further sum not exceeding 40s. for every day during which such offence continues (n).

1304. If a drain is so constructed or repaired as to be a nuisance or injurious or dangerous to health, the person who undertook or executed such construction or repair is liable to a fine not exceeding £20, unless he shows that it was not due to any wilful act, default, or neglect (n).

SECT. 12.—Connexion of Drains with Sewers.

SUB-SECT. 1.—In General.

Right to empty drains into sewers.

Conditions affecting
right.

1305. The owner or occupier of any premises within the district of a local authority is entitled to cause his drains to empty into the sewers of that authority (q). This right can, however, only be exercised under certain conditions, and in the case of manufacturing and trade effluents it is considerably qualified by statutory restrictions (r). Although the right as regards domestic sewage is absolute (s), it does not confer upon such owner or occupier the right to connect his drain with any particular sewer, but merely gives him a right to be connected with the sewers (t); nor is he or the local authority entitled in making the connexion to trespass upon private land (u). The general conditions upon which a connexion may be made are that the person should give such notice as may be required by the local authority of his intention to cause his drains to empty into the sewers, that he should comply with the regulations of that authority in respect of the mode in which the communications between such drains and sewers are to be made, and that the communication should be carried out subject to the control of the person appointed by that authority to superintend the making of such communications (a). Any person causing a drain to empty into a sewer of a local authority without complying with these conditions is liable to a penalty not exceeding £20, and the local authority may close any communication between a drain and sewer made in contravention thereof, and may recover summarily from the offender (b) any expenses incurred by it in so doing. He is also liable to persons who are injured by nuisance due to the sewer discharging the sewage from his drain, and may be restrained by injunction (c). If, however, the communication has been made with the sanction or acquiescence of the local authority, or if the right to discharge into the sewer has been acquired by prescription, the connexion cannot be cut off by the authority until some new arrangement is made, even although the discharge from the sewer may be causing a nuisance (d).

When the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890 (e), Part III., has been adopted in any district, and where the owner or occupier of any premises in that district is entitled to cause any sewer or drain from those premises to communicate with any sewer of the local authority, the local authority must, if so required by him, upon being paid the cost thereof in advance, make the communication and execute all necessary works (f). Such cost is to be estimated by the surveyor of the authority, but, in case the owner or occupier of the premises, as the case may be, is dissatisfied with such estimate, he may, if the estimate is under £50, apply to a court of summary jurisdiction to fix the amount to be paid, and, if over £50, may have the same determined by arbitration (g).

Sanitary or other authorities (l) having sewers under their control are required (l) to give facilities for enabling manufacturers within their districts to carry the liquids (m) proceeding from their factories or manufacturing processes into such sewers; but such sanitary or other authorities are not compelled to admit into their sewers any liquid which would prejudicially affect such sewers, or the disposal by sale, application to land or otherwise of the sewage matter conveyed along such sewers, or which would from its temperature or otherwise be injurious from a sanitary point of view (n); nor is a sanitary authority required to give such facilities where the sewage system (o) of such authority is only sufficient for the requirements of its district, or where such facilities would interfere with any order of any court of competent jurisdiction respecting the sewage of such authority (l). Where the liquids from factories have been allowed to be carried into sewers, the connexion cannot be cut off unless it is shown that the above provisions have been contravened (p).

1309. The owner or occupier of any premises without the district of a local authority may cause any sewer or drain from such premises to communicate with any sewer of the local authority, on such terms and conditions as may be agreed on between such owner or occupier and such local authority, or as, in case of dispute, may be settled, at the option of the owner or occupier, by a court of summary jurisdiction or by arbitration (q). The court will not make a declaration of the owner's right to such connexion in respect to a sewer not yet constructed (r). If the local authority allows a connexion without imposing terms, it cannot afterwards impose terms for the continuance of that connexion, even although the owner of the premises may cause slight alterations in the internal arrangements (s).

Yearly payments due at the time of the passing of the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), 11th August, 1875, in pursuance of the Local Government Act, 1858, Amendment Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 61) (repealed), to any local authority in respect of any premises without its district which have a drain communicating with a sewer within its district are expressly protected, but if the connexion ceases the payment ceases, but if re-established the yearly sum again becomes payable, and so on from time to time (Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 337). The consent (of the London County Council or metropolitan borough council, as the case may be) must be in writing and in the case of the branching of any sewer or drain into a sewer vested in the County Council it must be in accordance with a plan and section approved by the County Council (Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 66), ss. 4, 5). A council cannot require the costs of supervision to be paid as a condition of its consent (E. v. Greenwich Board of Works (1884), Cab. & El. 236).

in such manner as the council directs or appoints (b). If any person makes any connexion with such a sewer without such consent, or connects a drain otherwise than of the authorised description or in the authorised manner, he is liable to a penalty not exceeding £50, and the council may cut off the connexion, or may by notice in writing require the owner or owners of the premises or land to carry out the work in the required manner, or in default may execute the necessary works for making the drain conformable to its regulations and directions, and recover the expense summarily from the person making the drain or causing it to be made or from the owner or owners of the premises or land (c). These expenses must be apportioned if more than one owner is responsible (c). An owner who pays such expenses may recover them summarily from the person who made the connexion (c).

Private

streets.

1311. Whenever it is necessary to open any part of the pavement of any street or public place for the purpose of connecting a private drain with the sewers or drains of either the London County Council or a borough council, such council may, if it thinks fit, make so much of such private drain and construct so much of the necessary work as shall be under or in any street or public place, and recover the expenses incurred thereby from the owner of the house, building, or ground to which such private drain belongs (d). The council may also contract with the owners or occupiers of any houses, buildings, or ground, that any drains required to be made, altered or enlarged by such owners shall be done by the council, the cost price as certified by the surveyor of the council to be repaid by such owner or occupier (e).

As to such contribution, see note (l), p. 740, ante.

The provisions in this latter Act apply to the City of London as regards sewers vested in the County Council (ibid., s. 8). The penalty for each day of default in complying with the requisition is a sum not exceeding £5; see ibid., ss. 4, 9. A penalty is also imposed and remedial powers are also conferred by the Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), s. 83.

(d) Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), s. 78. (f) As, for example, by the Malicious Damage Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict.

by the law there are special statutory provisions for the protection of sewers and drains (g).

Any person who in an urban district, without the written consent of the urban authority, causes any building to be newly erected over any of its sewers is liable to forfeit to the authority the sum of £5 and a further sum of 40s. for every day during which the offence is continued after written notice in this behalf from the authority (h). The authority may cause any building erected in contravention of this provision to be altered, pulled down, or otherwise dealt with as it thinks fit, and may recover summarily from the offender any expenses incurred by it in so doing (h).

1313. In places where the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890 (a), Part III., has been adopted (b) it is unlawful for any person to throw or suffer to be thrown or to pass into any sewer of a local authority, or any drain communicating therewith, any matter or substance by which the free flow of the sewage or surface or storm water may be interfered with, or by which any such sewer or drain may be injured. Persons who wilfully damage any works or property of a local authority are, where no other penalty is provided by the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), liable under that Act to a penalty not exceeding £5 (ibid., s. 307). Persons damaging sewers by using excessively heavy engines on the highway may also be liable for the damage caused (Gas Light and Coke Co. v. St. Mary Abbott's, Kensington, Vestry (1885), 15 Q. B. (g) Persons authorised by statute to navigate on or use any river, canal, dock, harbour or basin, or to demand any tolls or dues in respect of such navigation or use, may, for the purpose of their undertaking, interfere with sewers and drains; they may take up, divert, or alter the level of any sewers, drains, culverts or pipes constructed by any local authority and passing under or interfering with such rivers, canals, docks, harbours, or basins or the towing paths thereof; but the substituted works must be certified by the surveyor to the local authority (Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 331). Disputes as to whether the substituted works are equally effectual must be settled by arbitration (ibid., s. 333). Every person is liable to a penalty not exceeding £10 and to a daily penalty not exceeding £5 who turns or permits to enter into any sewer of a local authority, or into any drain communicating therewith, (1) any chemical refuse, or (2) any waste steam, condensing water, heated water, or other liquid (such water or liquid being of a higher temperature than 110 degrees Fahrenheit), which either alone or in combination with the sewage causes a nuisance or is dangerous or injurious to health (d); but such person is not liable to a penalty until the local authority has given him notice of this provision, nor for an offence committed before the expiration of seven days from the service of such notice. The local authority, however, is not required to give the same person notice more than once (e).

If any such building is erected, the council in whom the sewer is vested may demolish the building, the expenses incurred thereby being payable by the person erecting such building (g), and the person knowingly erecting such building is liable to a penalty (h). Any person who obstructs, fills in, or diverts any sewer or drain under the jurisdiction, survey, or control of the County Council or borough council without the consent in writing of the council in which the same is vested is liable to a penalty in addition to any other proceeding, and to pay the costs of removing the obstruction or reinstating the

D. 196; title NUISANCE, Vol. XXI., p. 558. As to the duties of local authorities to receive factory refuse into their sewers in certain cases, see p. 764, ante.

(e) Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 59), s. 17 (3). Ibid., s. 17 (2), empowers a local authority to authorise generally or specially in writing any of its officers to enter any premises to examine as to whether any such offences are being committed: if such entry is refused, any justice, on complaint on oath by such officer, and after reasonable notice in writing of such complaint has been given to the person having custody of the premises, may by order require such person to admit the officer, and the order continues in force until any offence which may be discovered has ceased or until the work necessary to prevent its recurrence has been executed.

The penalty imposed by this provision also extends to persons knowingly erecting or placing any wall, bridge, fence, obstruction, annoyance, or encroachment in, upon, over or under any such sewer. The penalty is a sum not exceeding £20, and in case of a continuing offence, not exceeding £5 a day after notice from the council, and is recoverable summarily. These provisions do not prevent the maintenance, repair or renewal of buildings or works under which a sewer or drain has been constructed, provided they do not injure or obstruct the sewer or drain (ibid.).

A penalty is also imposed upon any person who takes up, removes, or otherwise interferes with any sewer or part of a sewer vested in the County Council or in a borough council without the previous permission of such council, and upon any person who wilfully damages any sewer, bank, defence, wall, penstock, grating, gully, side entrance, tide valve, flap, work, or thing vested in the County Council or in a borough council, or who does any act by which the drainage of the Metropolis, or any part thereof, may be obstructed or injured (j).

1317. Scavengers and other persons are liable to a penalty not exceeding £5 if they sweep, rake, or place any soil, rubbish, or filth, or any other thing into or in any sewer or drain, or over any grate communicating with any sewer or drain, or into any dock or inlet communicating with the mouth of any sewer or drain, or into which any drain may discharge its contents, or into the river Thames contiguous thereto (m).

Persons or companies intending to execute improvements under the Improvement of Land Act, 1864 (27 & 28 Vict. c. 114), which will interfere with sewers or drains of the London County Council or borough councils must give fourteen days' notice and must comply with the council's requirements as to protection, alteration, or efficient substitutes (ibid., s. 45); and see, generally, title LAND IMPROVEMENT, Vol. XVIII., pp. 280 et seq. A general protection is afforded to all the property of the London County Council and borough councils by the Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), ss. 206, 207.

(Michael Angelo Taylor's Act), and the Metropolitan Police Act, 1839 (2 & 3 Vict. c. 47), s. 60, imposes a penalty upon persons who throw or cause to fall into any sewer, pipe or drain any dirt, litter or ashes, or any carrion, fish, offal or rubbish; see also Thames Conservancy Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. clxxxvii.), s. 92, amended by the Port of London Act, 1908 (8 Edw., 7 c. 68); and see title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., p. 206.

1319. A penalty is also imposed upon any person who causes or permits to fall, flow, enter, or to be carried into any sewer of the London County Council, or into any sewer or drain communicating therewith, any chemical or manufacturing or trade or other refuse (not being solid matter or refuse to which the provision above set out applies), or any waste steam, condensing water, heated water, or other liquid (such water or liquid being above 110 degrees Fahrenheit), which either alone or in combination with other matter or liquid in a sewer may cause a nuisance or involve danger or risk of injury to the health of persons entering the sewers, or be injurious to the structure or materials and works of the Council (a).

1320. Persons are liable to a penalty for wrongfully entering or attempting to enter the sewers of the London County Council (b) or borough councils (c).

Part III.—Highway Drains.

Common law duty.

1321. Under the law before the Highway Act, 1835 (d), the occupier of land adjoining a highway was required to make and cleanse the ditches, drains and the like necessary for draining such highway (e). It is still at common law the duty of the (n) London County Council (General Powers) Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. cexii.), s. 8. The penalty is a sum not exceeding £20 and £5 daily for a continuing offence, and is only recoverable by the County Council. There is also a proviso protecting the City and borough councils from penalties for washing by flushing with water the mud and sewage off the streets into the sewers, provided the street has been previously properly swept and cleaned so far as reasonably practicable to remove solid matter, mud and refuse (ibid.).

(a) Ibid., s. 9. The penalty is the same as in ibid., s. 8 (see note (n), supra), and can only be recovered by the County Council, subject to certain conditions precedent (London County Council (General Powers) Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. cexii.), s. 9). There are saving clauses, as regards certain railways and common breweries, and as regards borough councils in respect of snow (ibid., ss. 11—15). The County Council may also prohibit by order the matters referred to in the text, supra, being sent into the sewer, from which order an appeal lies to a referee to be appointed by the Local Government Board (ibid., s. 10).

(b) London County Council (General Powers) Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. ccxliii.), s. 39. The penalty is one not exceeding £2, or in default imprisonment for not exceeding one month (ibid.).

occupier or owner of land adjoining a highway to cleanse and scour his own ditches so as to prevent nuisances or obstruction to passengers on the highway (f), but not to provide or keep ditches or other means of draining the road.

1322. Highway authorities (g) have now power to make, scour, cleanse, and keep open all ditches, gutters, drains, or water-courses (h), and to make and lay such trunks, tunnels, flats, or bridges as they think necessary in or through any lands or grounds adjoining or lying near to any highway (i), upon paying the owner or occupier of such lands or grounds, provided they are not waste or common, for the damages which he thereby sustains (k). It is not necessary to tender satisfaction for such damages before entry on such lands or grounds (l). If any owner, occupier, or other person alters, obstructs, or interferes with any of the above works after they have been made by or taken under the charge of the highway authority and without its consent, he becomes liable to reimburse all charges and expenses occasioned by reinstating and making good the work, and to forfeit a sum not exceeding three times the amount of such charges and expenses (m).

PART III.
Highway Drains.

Powers of
authorities.

Rep. 33; Woodward v. Cotton (1834), 1 Cr. M. & R. 44. When highways were not fenced so that persons could deviate on to the adjoining land, the duty to repair lay upon the inhabitants, but, if a person enclosed the highway, it became his duty to prevent it from being foundrous; see 1 Roll. Abr., fol. 390; title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., p. 91.

(f) See 1 Hawk. P. C., c. 76, s. 5; title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., p. 113.

(g) As to such authorities, see title HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES, Vol. XVI., pp. 24 et seq.; and, as to their powers and duties generally, see ibid., pp. 101 et seq.

(h) A dumbwell or cesspool into which the water from a highway has been led by pipes is not a drain or watercourse, but a receptacle, and cannot be cleansed or used by the highway authority under this provision (Croft v. Rickmansworth Highway Board (1888), 39 Ch. D. 272, C. A.). Similarly, an authority has no right under the above provision to discharge the contents of a ditch into a pond of an adjoining owner (Croydsale v. Sunbury-on-Thames Urban Council, [1898] 2 Ch. 515). If pipes from the highway discharge the water on to the adjoining land, although there is no drain or ditch there, a legal origin will be presumed after long user (A.-G. v. Copeland, [1902] 1 K. B. 690, C. A.; compare King's County Council v. Kennedy, [1910] 2 I. R. 544; title EASEMENTS AND PROFITS À PRENDRE, Vol. XI., p. 315; and see, generally, ibid., pp. 256 et seq.).

(i) The necessity for making the sewer being ascertained as a matter of fact, it is for the authority to exercise its judgment as to the direction in which it should be made through the adjoining land, and so long as the authority exercises an honest discretion, without misconduct or negligence, it is not liable to have its judgment overruled in a court of law (Derby (Earl) v. Bury Improvement Commissioners (1869), L. R. 4 Exch. 222, Ex. Ch.; and see ibid., at p. 225).

1323. The streets in urban districts, which were or have become repairable by the inhabitants at large, and all things provided for the purposes thereof, including the street drains and sewers, are vested in the urban authorities by the Public Health Act, 1875 (n).

Ordinary highways in rural districts were at the date of the passing of that Act under the control of highway authorities, and the highway drains and sewers remained vested in them. By virtue of the Local Government Act, 1894 (o), rural district councils became the successors of the highway authorities with control of the highways, and the powers of highway authorities were transferred to them, but highway drains did not by reason of such transfer become sewers for sanitary purposes (p).

Main roads are under the control of the county councils (q). Where a main road vests in a county council, all drains belonging thereto vest in the council, and, where any sewer or other drain is used for any purpose in connexion with the drainage of any main road, the county council has the right of using such sewer or drain for such purpose (r).

1324. Where a nuisance arises from sewage being negligently allowed to remain in a highway drain, the sanitary authority is not liable in respect thereof, unless such drain has become vested in the authority as a sewer under the Public Health Act, 1875 (s).

If a surveyor in removing an obstruction under the Highway Act, 1835 (5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50), s. 69, injures the property of the adjoining owner, he cannot be convicted of causing wilful and malicious injury under the Malicious Damage Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 97), s. 52, so long as he acts bonâ fide (*Denny v. "Belonging to" a main road probably means appurtenant to or an appendage of a main road (Rickarby v. New Forest Rural District Council (1910), 74 J. P. 441, per WARRINGTON, J., at p. 443).

Part IV.—Sewers under Commissioners of Sewers.

SECT. 1.—Introductory.

1325. For the purpose of draining the land, protecting low-lying lands from the sea, repairing embankments, and removing obstructions, commissions were issued from very early times under the prerogative of the Crown and under various Acts of Parliament (t). In the reign of Henry VIII. a general Act (a) was passed, which is the basis of the present law relating to Commissioners of Sewers. The scope of this Act has been extended and its provisions amended by various subsequent Acts (b), the last and most important of which is the Land Drainage Act, 1861 (c). In a large number of cases, however, districts have been placed under the authority of special bodies under private and local Acts, and these Acts are not affected by the general Acts (d). The more modern Acts do not affect the Metropolis (e).

1326. Various bodies of Commissioners of Sewers existed in what is now the Metropolis. A general commission for the Metropolis was issued on the 1st January, 1849 (f). The powers of these Commissioners were determined by statute (g), and the boards and vestries thereby constituted became the general sewer authorities (h). In 1879, however, it became necessary to make special provisions for the protection of lands from inundations of the river Thames and for the maintenance of the embankments, and a local Act was passed (i). The powers of administering this Act are vested in the London County Council, which can require the Common Council of the City, the metropolitan borough councils, and owners of premises to execute and maintain the necessary works (k).

Issue of Commission.

and jurisdiction.

SECT. 2.—Issue of Commission.

1327. Commissions of Sewers may be issued by the Sovereign in virtue of the prerogative (l), or under the provisions of the statutes relating to sewers and land drainage (m). Under the Land Drainage Act, 1861 (n), and subsequent legislation (o), the King, on the recommendation of the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries (p), can direct Commissions of Sewers into all parts of England and assign the jurisdiction of such Commissions. The limits of a Commission may include an area to which a Commission may not have been previously assigned, or any area either wholly or partially within the limits of an existing Commission. But no alteration affecting the jurisdiction of any Commissioners of Sewers may be made without the consent of a special meeting of such Commissioners (q).

Procedure.

1328. The procedure to be followed for the purpose of obtaining the recommendation of the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries to the grant of a Commission of Sewers may be summarised thus:—
(1) A petition must be presented, signed by the proprietors (r) of ss. 220—224. That Act now applies to the Port of London Authority within the limits of the Port (Port of London Act, 1908 (8 Edw. 7, c. 68), s. 7; see title WATERS AND WATERCOURSES. See also title PUBLIC HEALTH AND LOCAL ADMINISTRATION, Vol. XXIII., pp. 365, 366.

(l) Callis, Reading upon the Statute of Sewers, pp. 24, 25.

(m) Drainage Boards may now be constituted for districts instead of Commissions being issued; see pp. 788, 789, post. The Acts at present in force relating to Commissions of Sewers are stats. (1531) 23 Hen. 8, c. 5; (1533—4) 25 Hen. 8, c. 10; (1549—50) 3 & 4 Edw. 6, c. 8; (1571) 13 Eliz. c. 9; Commissions of Sewers Act, 1708 (7 Anne, c. 33); Criminal Law Act, 1826 (7 Geo. 4, c. 64); Sewers Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will 4, c. 22); Sewers Act, 1841 (4 & 5 Vict. c. 45); Sewers Act, 1849 (12 & 13 Vict. c. 50); Land Drainage Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 133). These statutes do not interfere with districts subject to the control of special bodies under local and private Acts or by custom, nor do they affect the Metropolis; see p. 773, ante. Instances of such special exemptions are Romney Marsh, Bedford Level (see stat. (1663) 15 Car. 2, c. 17), Nene Outfall, Sandwich Haven (see stat. (1776) 16 Geo. 3, c. 62; Sewers Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 22), s. 20). For instances of a local Act, see Somersetshire Drainage Act, 1877 (40 Vict. c. xxxvi.); see also R. v. Bradford Navigation Co. (1865), 6 B. & S. 631; A.-G. v. Bradford Canal (Proprietors) (1866), L. R. 2 Eq. 71; Goodden v. Coles (1888), 59 L. T. 309; Re Brighton Sewers Act (1882), 9 Q. B. D. 723. The form of Commission contained in stat. (1531) 23 Hen. 8, c. 5, is the basis of the present writ of potestatem dedimus, under which Commissions are now issued; compare title RATES AND RATING, Vol. XXIV., p. 102.

(n) 24 & 25 Vict. c. 133.

(o) Ibid., s. 4. This Act does not extend to Scotland or Ireland, or to any part of the Metropolis as defined by the Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120). It applies to Commissions existing prior to its passage into law (Land Drainage Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 133), s. 2).

(r) For the definition of "proprietors," see Land Drainage Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 133), s. 6; as to infant, lunatic or married women proprietors, see ibid., s. 7; as to the case where the proprietor is a corporation or company, see ibid., s. 8; and, as to joint proprietors, see ibid., s. 9.

one-tenth part of the land within the proposed boundaries of the area to be comprised within the limits of the Commission. The petition must state the proposed boundaries of the area to be comprised within the limits of the Commission, and it must be supported by such evidence as the Board may require (s). The petitioners must give security for costs (t).

(2) The Board may, if it thinks fit, send an inspector to hold an inquiry (u).

(3) If the proprietors of one-third of the land within the proposed boundaries express their dissent in writing, the petition must be dismissed (a).

The issue of a Commission of Sewers for any area is conclusive evidence that the requirements of the Act with respect to the issue of such Commission have been complied with (b).

SECT. 3.—Qualification and Oath of Commissioners.

1329. To be qualified or capable of becoming or acting as Commissioner in the execution of any Commission of Sewers, a person must be (c) either:—(1) In his own right or in right of his wife in the actual possession or receipt for life or for a larger estate of the rents and profits of lands situated in the county in which he shall act as a Commissioner or in any adjoining county. The land may be of freehold or copyhold tenure, or held for a term of not less than sixty years, absolute or determinable with a life or lives, provided it is of the clear yearly value of £100; or it may be held for a term of years originally granted for not less than twenty-one years, and of which ten years at the least shall then be unexpired, provided it is of the clear yearly value of £200; or (2) the heir apparent of a person possessed of freehold or copyhold lands situated in such county as aforesaid, or in any adjoining county, of the clear yearly value of £200; or (3) the duly appointed agent (d) of a body politic or corporate, or of a person not being present and acting as a Commissioner, provided such body or person, in his own right or in right of his wife, is in possession of lands of freehold or copyhold tenure actually taxed under the Commission and of the clear yearly value of £300. Such agent, before he acts, (t) As to the costs etc. of the petition and inquiry, see ibid., s. 12.

(u) Ibid., s. 5 (3). Before commencing such inquiry, the inspector must give the prescribed notice to proprietors and must fix a time within which dissenting proprietors must signify their dissent (ibid., s. 5 (4)). For the powers of inspectors, see ibid., s. 11.

(a) Ibid., s. 5 (5). Where any portion of land comprised within the boundaries referred to in any petition appears to have no proprietor within the meaning of the Act or the proprietor cannot be found, the land so circumstanced must be excluded from the computation that may be made of the proportion borne by the dissenting proprietors of any area of land to the aggregate number of proprietors of such land (ibid., s. 10).

(b) Ibid., s. 13.

(c) Sewers Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 22), s. 1.

(d) The agent of a body politic or corporate must be appointed by writing under the seal of such body. The agent of any other person must be appointed in writing. An agent is only qualified so long as he remains agent (ibid.).

must deliver his written appointment to the clerk to the Commission or his deputy to be filed. If the Commission runs into more than one county, the qualification may be situated either partly in each or wholly in either county (e). A woman or an infant may be a Commissioner (f).

A mayor, bailiff, or other officer appointed or authorised to act as a Commissioner under any Commission of Sewers ex officio may, so long as he holds such office, act as a Commissioner without being so qualified (g). Such ex officio Commissioner must, however, before he acts, deliver a certificate under the hand of the town clerk or other legal officer of his corporation to the clerk to the Commission, certifying that he is thus authorised to act (g).

1330. Before acting, Commissioners must take the two prescribed oaths or affirmations (h), but ex officio Commissioners need not be sworn (g).

Any person other than an ex officio Commissioner acting as a Commissioner without being qualified or after ceasing to be qualified is liable to a penalty of £100 for each time he wilfully so offends (i); but any act done by a person acting as a Commissioner without being qualified is as valid as if he had been qualified (j).

1331. The King may, by writing under the Sign Manual, fill up any vacancies arising in the Commissioners of any Commission (k); but no person can be compelled to act as a Commissioner unless he lives within the county whereof he is appointed Commissioner (l).

SECT. 4.—Meetings of Commissioners and Courts of Sewers.

1332. The meetings of Commissioners are courts of record (m), called courts of sewers (n). The Commissioners can meet at such times and places within their jurisdiction or not more than ten miles

The oaths must be taken before the Lord Chancellor or the person named in the writ of potestatem dedimus. Any person may sue for the penalty in the High Court. The burden of showing he is qualified and has taken the oath is placed on the person who has acted as Commissioner (Sewers Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 22), s. 4).

(m) Callis, Reading upon the Statute of Sewers, pp. 164—166; see title COURTS, Vol. IX., p. 221.

(n) A Court of Sewers is defined for the purpose of the Sewers Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 22), as every court, session, assemblage or meeting of any six or more Commissioners of Sewers (three whereof being of the quorum) named in any Commission of Sewers and acting in the execution thereof (ibid., s. 60). Three Commissioners now form a quorum; see p. 777, post. The term "Court of Sewers" is used to denote a meeting of Commissioners in the earlier Acts, but is not defined.

from some part of their district (o) as they may appoint. They may adjourn to meet at any such place and at such time as the majority of those present at any meeting appoints (p). If an insufficient number of Commissioners meets, or if a meeting is not duly adjourned, one or more of the Commissioners may by writing fix a time and place for the holding of the meeting by giving ten days' notice by advertisement in the local newspapers (p).

SECT. 4.
Meetings of Commissioners and Sewers.

Special meetings may on emergencies be convened on short notice, provided the statutory requirements are carried out (q).

1333. Three Commissioners constitute a quorum at any meeting or court of Commissioners of Sewers, except when improvements in existing works or the construction of new works are in question, in which case a quorum of six is necessary (r).

Quorum.

A chairman must in the first place be appointed at every meeting (s). If any difference arises upon the choice of a chairman, he is chosen by a majority of the Commissioners present. If there is an equality of votes the Commissioner proposed whose name stands first in the Commission is chairman (a). The chairman has a casting vote in addition to his own vote (b).

SECT. 5.—Laws and Decrees of Courts of Sewers.

1334. Any laws and decrees made by Commissioners remain in force, notwithstanding the expiration of the Commission (c). An order to be valid must be made by the majority of Commissioners present at a Court of Sewers, and a quorum must be present (d). If one of the Commissioners is personally interested in the making of an order, the order is invalid (e). The validity of a law, decree, or order made by a Court of Sewers may be called in question by proceedings for a writ of certiorari (f).

existing works (a) and the construction of new works (b). Their statutory powers, however, do not enable them to compel any person to execute at his own expense any works which he would not otherwise have been compelled to execute (c); and full compensation must be made for all injury sustained by any person (d) by reason of the exercise by the Commissioners of the above powers (e). No work is a new work if it is in substitution for an old work so out of repair or inefficient as to make it expedient to construct a new work in its place (f).

The Commissioners cannot without the owner's (g) consent remove or otherwise interfere with any mill dam, weir, or other like obstruction, whereby the level of the water is raised for any milling or other purpose of profit, so as injuriously to affect the supply of water, until (1) their right to do so has been determined as provided by statute (h), and (2) compensation for the injury caused has been made to all parties entitled (i).

all rivers, streams, drains, sewers and passages through which water flows. Under the earlier Acts the Commissioners' jurisdiction only extended to navigable streams, except within two miles of London (Yeav v. Holland (1770), 2 Wm. Bl. 717). The Sewers Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 22), s. 10, described generally the sewers and works which were under the jurisdiction of the Commissioners, but prohibited the exercise thereof over certain existing works of a private character without the consent of the owners. The wide powers under the Land Drainage Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 133), have superseded the limited powers under the earlier Acts. As to the power of depositing mud etc. without compensation under a local Act, see Re Moulton and Middle Level Commissioners (1907), 97 L. T. 391.

For provisions where local boundaries are affected by such work or by the exercise of any of the powers of Commissioners, see ibid., s. 62.

Before commencing any improvements in existing works (j), or any new works (k), where the cost will be more than £1,000, certain formalities as to notice and publication of a list of proprietors affected must be observed (l). Provision is made for the correction of the list, and the Commissioners must hear applications and make such alterations as they see fit, their decision being final. At the end of two months or such further period as the Commissioners may fix for the purpose of hearing applications, the list as settled by the Commissioners becomes conclusive evidence of proprietorship for the purpose of ascertaining the proportion of dissenting proprietors (m).

SUB-SECT. 2.—Restrictions as to Works.

Restrictions on works by Commissioners.

1338. Commissioners cannot (n) without consent (1) interfere with any sewers or other works made or used for the drainage and improvement of land under any local or private Act, so as injuriously to affect the same (o); (2) interfere with any river, canal, dock, harbour, lock, reservoir or basin, or the supply of water thereto, so as injuriously to affect the navigation thereon or the use or maintenance thereof, or interfere with any towing path so as to interrupt the traffic, where any corporation, company, conservators or individual is or are entitled under any Act to use such river etc. or to receive tolls or dues in respect of such use (p); (3) interfere with the works or supply of water of any body or necessary for the effectual drainage of the land within the jurisdiction of the Commissioners; (2) whether it will cause any injury to the owner; and (3) if so, whether such injury can be compensated for in money, must be decided, if the owner consents, by two or more justices at petty sessions, but if he does not consent, by arbitration. If the removal is not necessary, or if the injury cannot be compensated for in money, the Commissioners may not do the work, otherwise they can do it upon paying compensation (Land Drainage Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 133), s. 19).

(i) The Commissioners must take the same steps with respect to compensating the parties interested as are required under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 18), to be taken by purchasers in cases where they are authorised to purchase or take lands by special Act (Land Drainage Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 133), s. 20); see title COMPULSORY PURCHASE OF LAND AND COMPENSATION, Vol. VI., pp. 7, 11, 174, 175.

(j) For the meaning of "improvements of existing works," see note (a), p. 779, ante.

(k) For meaning of "new works," see note (b), p. 779, ante.

(l) See title RATES AND RATING, Vol. XXIV., p. 112. Notices required to be given by the Commissioners are sufficiently executed if signed by their clerk. Every notice purporting to be so signed is evidence before any court without further proof (Land Drainage Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 133), s. 42). Notice duly served (see ibid., ss. 44—46) on an owner or proprietor is binding on all persons claiming under him, as if served on them (ibid., s. 43). If the Commissioners cannot discover the proprietor of any lands, they must give notice to that effect in the list (ibid., s. 32).

(m) Ibid., s. 30. In reckoning the proportion of dissenting proprietors to the aggregate proprietors, land to which no one proves his title must be totally excluded (ibid., s. 32). As to the effect of dissent by proprietors, see title RATES AND RATING, Vol. XXIV., p. 113.

Rivers, canals, or inland navigation or works connected therewith, exempted under any local or private Act, are not within the control of the Commissioners (t).

SUB-SECT. 3.—Power to Divert Works of Commissioners.

1339. Canal companies and similar bodies or individuals authorised by Act of Parliament to navigate on or use any river, canal, dock, harbour, or basin, or to demand tolls in respect of such navigation or use, may, at their own expense, divert sewers, drains, culverts and pipes constructed by Commissioners and passing under or interfering with such river etc. on substituting others equally effectual (u).

SUB-SECT. 4.—Fouling of Watercourses.

1340. No person may without the consent of the Commissioners foul any watercourse within their jurisdiction (a). This does not apply, however, to a person having a legal right to foul an existing watercourse (b).

Fouling watercourses.

SUB-SECT. 5.—Removal of Soil and Weeds.

1341. The occupiers of land adjoining any river, sewer, or watercourse subject to the jurisdiction of Commissioners may, subject to certain restrictions, remove for their own use gravel, soil, mud or earth, or rushes, flags or other weeds, deposited on the banks by the order of an officer of sewers (c). If any occupier does not remove such matter within the prescribed times, an officer of sewers may enter on the land of such occupier in the daytime and remove it (d). The Commissioners must cause it to be removed within six weeks from the date when any owner or occupier requires them to do so (d).

may require for the purpose of carrying out their duties (e). Persons under disability are empowered to sell and convey (f).

Commissioners cannot, however, in virtue of the Land Drainage Act, 1861 (g), purchase any land for new works (h) otherwise than by agreement until they have obtained the sanction of Parliament in the prescribed manner (i). The procedure to be adopted in such a case may be summarised as follows:—

(1) The Commissioners must advertise in the London Gazette and a local newspaper describing the nature of the works to be undertaken and the quantity of land required and naming a place where the plan of the work can be inspected, and must serve notices on the owners, lessees, and occupiers of the land (j).

(2) A petition must then be presented to the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries (k) giving particulars and such evidence as may be required (l).

(3) The Board, if it thinks fit, may send an inspector to make an inquiry, at which all persons affected have an opportunity of being heard (m).

(4) The Board, if satisfied, may by provisional order empower the Commissioners to acquire the land, and must then take the proper steps to get the provisional order confirmed by Parliament. When so confirmed, it is deemed a public general Act, but until then is of no validity whatever (n). The costs incurred by the Board are payable by the Commissioners out of the rates leviable by them (o).

(e) Land Drainage Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 133), s. 28; see also Sewers Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 22), s. 24. This latter provision, which does not apply to land required for new works, is practically superseded by the provisions in the Land Drainage Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 133), incorporating, as it does, the Lands Clauses Acts. It is, however, still in force, for the Land Drainage Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 133), s. 60, provides that the powers contained in that Act are in addition to those already existing. If the procedure under the Sewers Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 22), is adopted, the provisions of ibid., ss. 28—40, should be observed, dealing with the filing of agreements and orders in relation to land purchased, the costs of jury and witnesses, application of purchase-money, levying of purchase-money, sale of lands not wanted etc. As to the Lands Clauses Acts and compulsory purchase of land, generally, see title COMPULSORY PURCHASE OF LAND AND COMPENSATION, Vol. VI., pp. 1 et seq.

(h) For definition of "new works," see note (b), p. 779, ante. The Commissioners can purchase land compulsorily for the widening etc. of existing works either under the Land Drainage Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 133), s. 28, incorporating the Lands Clauses Acts, or under the Sewers Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 22), ss. 24—27; see note (e), supra.

(o) Ibid., s. 27.

1343. The Lands Clauses Acts (p), with certain exceptions (q), are incorporated (r) in the first part of the Land Drainage Act, 1861 (s). For the purpose of construction, the first part of the Land Drainage Act, 1861 (s), is deemed the special Act and the Commissioners are deemed the promoters of the undertaking (t).

Vesting of property.

1344. The property in lands purchased by, and works, buildings, and goods which have been purchased, constructed or made, or which are within the view, cognizance or management of, the Commissioners, are vested in them (u).

SECT. 9.—Liability to Repair.

1345. Independently of the ordinary liability to contribute to the cost of works through the rates, landowners are often liable to repair or contribute to the repair of sea walls and other defences (a). This liability, if disputed, may be settled by a Court of Sewers with or without presentment of jury, subject to appeal to a court of quarter sessions (b). If the person liable does not do the repairs, the Commissioners may do them and charge such person with the cost (c). The obligation to repair may arise by

Neither the Sewers Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 22), nor the Land Drainage Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 133), affects these liabilities to repair, except that the latter Act provides that they may be commuted; see Sewers Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 22), s. 15; Land Drainage Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 133), s. 37 (which provides that the rates to be levied under the Act are to be made only for the purposes to which such liability does not extend); see also stat. Such commutation may be by way of gross or annual charge on the lands of the person in respect of which the original obligation arose (k). The charge is recoverable by the Commissioners in the same manner as tithe rentcharge, and has priority over all incumbrances (l). The record of the charge must be deposited in the office of the clerk of the peace (m).

Borrowing
powers.

1349. For the purpose of defraying expenses properly incurred by them, the Commissioners may, with the sanction of the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries (r), borrow money on the credit of the rates authorised to be levied by them (s). Repayment of capital and interest may be secured by mortgage of the rates (t), and may, by agreement with the mortgagee, be made by equal instalments. The repayment may be spread over such period not exceeding thirty years as the Commissioners with the consent of the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries (r) may determine (u).

The clauses of the Commissioners Clauses Act, 1847 (a), with respect to mortgages are made applicable (b). Any mortgagee or assignee may enforce payment of his principal and interest by appointment of a receiver (c).

(s) Land Drainage Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 133), s. 40; see title RATES AND RATING, Vol. XXIV., p. 104. It seems that Commissioners can get grants or loans from the Treasury, on the recommendation of the Development Commissioners, for the purpose of the reclamation and drainage of lands and the construction and improvement of inland navigations; see Development and Road Improvement Funds Act, 1909 (9 Edw. 7, c. 47), s. 1; title REVENUE, Vol. XXIV., pp. 762, 763. The Commissioners may also make use of the borrowing powers provided in the Sewers Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 22), s. 41, and in the Sewers Act, 1841 (4 & 5 Vict. c. 45), s. 4. Under the Sewers Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 22), s. 41, they can only borrow for certain purposes specified ibid., and, instead of charging the rates, they charge the lands benefited by the works undertaken with the borrowed money, and they must get the consent of the owners of three-fourths of the land. Under the Sewers Act, 1841 (4 & 5 Vict. c. 45), s. 4, they can borrow for their general purposes and charge the rates and not the land. The Public Works Loan Commissioners can lend money for main drainage (Public Works Loans Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 89), s. 9, Sched. I., extended to underground drainage by the Public Works Loans Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. 11), s. 3). Commissioners of Sewers also appear to be “local authorities” within the meaning of the Local Loans Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 83), s. 34; see title MONEY AND MONEY-LENDING, Vol. XXI., pp. 58 et seq.

(t) If the money is borrowed under the earlier Acts, transferable securities in the prescribed form are given to the lenders; see Sewers Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 22), ss. 42, 43; Sewers Act, 1841 (4 & 5 Vict. c. 45), ss. 5, 6. arbitration.

After notice of appeal has been given, either party may apply to quarter sessions for the matter in dispute to be referred to arbitration. If the matter in question consists of matters of account, or of engineering or scientific questions which cannot be satisfactorily tried by quarter sessions, that court can order it to be referred to arbitration (i).

Claim for arbitration.

Where any questions are by the Land Drainage Act, 1861 (k), determinable, at the option of the owner, by justices or by arbitration, the owner is deemed to have assented to the determination by justices, unless within ten days of their giving him notice that they propose to have the questions determined he gives the Commissioners notice that he wishes the questions to be determined by arbitration (l).

(d) As to presentment by jury generally, see Callis, Reading upon the Statute of Sewers. It is not necessary to have a separate presentment for each occasion when it is purposed to make an order (Sewers Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 22), s. 13), but Commissioners cannot make orders for repairs upon a person who has become an owner since the presentment (R. v. Warton (1862), 2 B. & S. 719; see also Fobbing Sewers Commissioners v. R. (1886), 11 App. Cas. 449; Warren v. Dix (1805), 3 C. & P. 71). If it is alleged that several persons are liable to repair one sea wall, bank, sewer or other work, it can be alleged in one presentment (Sewers Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 22), s. 46).

(e) For the method of summoning juries and their composition, see Sewers Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 22), ss. 11, 12; title JURIES, Vol. XVIII., pp. 238, 239. Juries may be given recompense for expenses and loss of time (Sewers Act, 1841 (4 & 5 Vict. c. 45), s. 7). As to the jury, see also Birkett v. Crozier (1827), 3 C. & P. 63; R. v. Somerset Sewers Commissioners (1805), 7 East, 71; Taylor v. Loft (1853), 8 Exch. 269; title COURTS, Vol. IX., p. 222.

(g) Ibid., s. 47; see also title COURTS, Vol. IX., p. 222.

(h) Land Drainage Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 133), s. 47. The appeal must be made within four months of the making of the order and notice must be given to the Commissioners ten days prior to quarter sessions, stating the nature and ground of the appeal. The appellant must also four days from the service of such notice enter into recognisances, with two different sureties, before a justice of the peace (ibid.).

(i) Ibid., s. 48. Arbitrators are appointed by the parties or by the court in case of disagreement. The award is enforceable as an order of quarter sessions. The provisions of the Arbitration Act, 1889 (52 & 53 Vict. c. 49), apply (ibid., s. 26, Schedule); see also title ARBITRATION, Vol. I., p. 438.

(k) 24 & 25 Vict. c. 133.

(l) Ibid., s. 50. The procedure is the same as under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 18), in case of disputed compensation authorised to be settled by justices or arbitration. The costs are in the discretion of the arbitrators (Land Drainage Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 133), s. 50).

SUB-SECT. 3.—Fines and Penalties.

SECT. 11.

1352. Fines, amerciaments and penalties imposed by the Commissioners on individuals or bodies corporate for not cleansing, repairing or maintaining, or for obstructing or injuring any of the walls, ditches, banks, gutters, sewers, gotes, bridges and streams, or for any other cause within their jurisdiction, may be demanded and received by the treasurer, clerk or other person appointed to receive the same (m). If not paid on demand they may be raised by distress on the warrant of the Commissioners (n).

A single Commissioner may, on the complaint of any expeditor or other officer of sewers that a person liable to the payment of any fine or penalty has not paid it, issue a summons requiring such person to appear before any two of the Commissioners to show cause why he refuses to pay; and the two Commissioners can issue a warrant to levy the sum by distress, if satisfied that he is liable to pay (o).

Proceedings before Commissioners.

Recovery of penalties.

SECT. 12.—Legal Proceedings by and against Commissioners.

1353. Commissioners of Sewers may sue and be sued in the name of any one Commissioner, or in the name of their clerk (p). When suing in respect of their property, it is sufficient to describe the property as belonging to the Commissioners without specifying their names (q). Actions by or against Commissioners or their clerk do not abate by the death, resignation, or removal of the Commissioners or of their clerk or because of the expiration of the Commission (r).

Legal proceedings.

(m) Sewers Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 22), s. 53. All penalties and sums of money directed to be recovered summarily can be recovered before two justices under the procedure of the Summary Jurisdiction Acts (Land Drainage Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 133), s. 51). As to fines for non-repair, see also R. v. Baker (1867), L. R. 2 Q. B. 621. As to fines for breach of laws and ordinances of the Commissioners, see Crossman v. Bristol and South Wales Union Rail. Co. (1863), 1 Hem. & M. 531. Officers may be fined (Callis, Reading upon Statute of Sewers, p. 175); and dyke-reeves may be fined for refusal to take office (Sewers Act, 1849 (12 & 13 Vict. c. 50), s. 5). Jurymen, witnesses and sheriffs may be fined for non-compliance with the statute (Sewers Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 22), s. 27; and see Ex parte Taylor (1829), 3 Y. & J. 91; Ex parte Owst (1821), 9 Price, 117). (n) Sewers Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 22), s. 53. For form of warrant, see ibid., s. 54.

(o) Sewers Act, 1849 (12 & 13 Vict. c. 50), s. 7; and see title RATES AND RATING, Vol. XXIV., p. 110, note (m). The summons or warrant may include several persons (Sewers Act, 1849 (12 & 13 Vict. c. 50), s. 8). The warrant may be directed to any person the two Commissioners may deem fit (ibid., s. 9). Under the Sewers Act, 1841 (4 & 5 Vict. c. 45), the warrant had to be under the hands of at least six Commissioners.

(p) Sewers Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 22), s. 57. Commissioners acting in bond fide performance of a public duty are only liable for injury to the individual if they have been guilty of negligence or want of skill in doing it (Grocers' Co. v. Donne (1836), 3 Scott, 356); and see Jones v. Bird (1822), 1 Dow. & Ry. (K. B.) 497; title PUBLIC AUTHORITIES AND PUBLIC OFFICERS, Vol. XXIII., p. 313. As to the payment of expenses of legal proceedings, see title RATES AND RATING, Vol. XXIV., p. 104.

(q) Sewers Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 23), s. 47. So also in indictments, informations or complaints it is sufficient to state that the property belongs to the Commissioners, without specifying their names (Criminal Law Act, 1826 (7 Geo. 4, c. 64), s. 18; Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 43), s. 4).

Proceedings
by and Commis-

Injunction.
Mandamus.
Indictment.

A clerk or Commissioner in whose name proceedings are taken is entitled to be reimbursed all costs, charges, damages and expenses (a).

Injunctions may be granted to restrain the undue exercise of authority on the part of Commissioners (b). They may also be granted at the suit of Commissioners (c).

A writ of mandamus may be granted to compel Commissioners to carry out their duties, but is only granted if there is no other specific remedy (d).

Indictments can be preferred against Commissioners in all cases where public bodies would be indictable (e). Commissioners also have power to prefer an indictment against any person injuring their lands or property (f).

SECT. 13.—Elective Drainage Districts and Drainage Boards.

Drainage
district.

1354. The proprietors of not less than one-tenth of the acreage of any bog, moor, or other area of land requiring a combined system of drainage, warping or irrigation, may, with the consent (g) of the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries (h), and subject to confirmation by Parliament, constitute such area a separate drainage district (i). But no place within the limits of any Commission of Sewers or of any borough or urban district council may form a separate drainage district or part thereof, without the consent of such Commissioners or council (i).

(g) The method of obtaining this consent is similar to that set out at pp. 774, 775, ante; and see Land Drainage Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 133), s. 64.

(h) See title AGRICULTURE, Vol. I., p. 279.

(i) Ibid., s. 63.

1355. The superintendence of matters relating to drainage within drainage districts is vested in “drainage boards” which are elective (j). These boards are bodies corporate and have power to hold lands for all the purposes of their constitution (k). The powers of Commissioners within a drainage district cease when it becomes an elective drainage district (l).

Subject to the provisions in the provisional order constituting the district, statutory regulations apply with respect to all drainage boards (m), the electors to drainage boards (n), and the mode of conducting elections to boards and their proceedings (o).

Part I.—Sheriffs: Their Appointment and Qualification.

SECT. 1.—Nature of Office.

Nature of office.

(a) The sheriff is described in Com. Dig., tit. County (B. 1.), as the principal officer in the county. The Lord-Lieutenant is now the first officer in the county; and, as to other officers of the county, see title LOCAL GOVERNMENT, Vol. XIX., pp. 342, 343.

(b) As to the qualification, see p. 795, post.

(c) R. v. Larwood (1695), 1 Ld. Raym. 29, 32, 33. As to the exemptions from liability to serve, see pp. 795, 796, post.

he is liable to a criminal information or to be indicted (d). The greater part of the ancient civil and criminal jurisdiction of the sheriff has been transferred to the modern county courts and justices of the peace, but he still exercises some judicial functions (e), and has ministerial powers and duties of an extensive and important character (f).

SECT. 1.
Nature of Office.

1357. Before entering on the execution of his office every sheriff must make and subscribe a declaration that he will well and truly serve the King, and promote His Majesty's profit in all things belonging to his office as far as he legally can, and will truly preserve the King's rights, and do right to both poor and rich in all things belonging to his office, and will truly and diligently execute the law, and in all things well and truly behave himself in his office, and discharge the same according to the best of his skill and power (g). The declaration must be made and subscribed before a judge of the High Court or before a justice of the peace of the county for which the declarant is sheriff (h). On making the declaration the sheriff is, without payment of any fee, entitled to exercise all the powers and authorities incident to his office (i).

Declaration
of office.

The declaration of office is exempt from stamp duty, and must be transmitted to the clerk of the peace for the county, and be filed by him among the records of his office (k).

SECT. 2.—High Sheriffs of Counties at Large.

SUB-SECT. 1.—Appointment.

1358. A high sheriff is appointed annually for every county at large (l), except in the case of the counties of Cambridge and Huntingdon, for which only one high sheriff is appointed as if they were one county (m).

Annual appointment.

The authority of a sheriff does not extend beyond his own county (n).

Authority.

1359. On the 12th November in every year, or, if that day falls on a Sunday, then on the ensuing Monday, persons fit to serve as

SECT. 2.
High Sheriffs of Counties at Large.

high sheriffs are nominated in the customary manner (o) for every county at large, except the counties of Cornwall and Lancaster (p), at the Royal Courts of Justice by the Lord Chancellor, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the Lord President and others of the Privy Council, and the Lord Chief Justice, or any two or more of them, with the judges of the High Court, or any two or more of them (q).

Pricking the sheriffs.

1360. The names of the persons so nominated (o) are afterwards engrossed on a roll of parchment and presented to the King in Council, and His Majesty appoints the persons to serve by pricking with a silver bodkin opposite to the names in the list of persons nominated, a ceremony known as "pricking the sheriffs," the name pricked being usually the first one on the list. The names of the persons so appointed are forthwith notified in the London Gazette, and warrants are made out (r) and signed by the Clerk of the Privy Council and transmitted to the persons pricked, the appointments so made being of the same effect as if made by patent under the Great Seal (s). A duplicate of the warrant of appointment must within ten days after the date thereof be transmitted by the Clerk of the Privy Council to the clerk of the peace of the county for which each sheriff is appointed, and be enrolled and kept by him without fee (t).

Warrant of appointment.

Sheriffs of Lancaster and of Cornwall.

1361. The sheriff of the county of Lancaster is appointed by the King, as Duke of Lancaster, the list of persons liable to serve being submitted by the Chancellor of the Duchy.

(o) The method of nomination is as follows :—After the great officials and judges have taken their places on the bench, the King's Remembrancer reads the names of nominees for service as sheriffs in the various counties in the preceding year. The names of the sheriffs actually in office are then struck out, and the senior judge of assize who went the last summer circuit gives in another name, which is as a rule adopted and placed on the nomination list. If deaths have occurred, or excuses are made and allowed, other names are supplied, so as to make up a list of three names for each county, the names so settled being read out by the King's Remembrancer and taken to be nominated as placed on the roll. Excuses, such as want of sufficient means, are sometimes made in open court, but as a general rule all excuses are forwarded previously to the office of the Privy Council (as to the Privy Council, see title CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, Vol. VII., pp. 51 et seq.), and are mentioned by the Lord President of the Council; see 13 L. J. 718.

(q) Sheriffs Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 55), s. 6 (1), (4). This applies to sheriffs of the counties of London (Local Government Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 41), s. 40 (2)), Middlesex (ibid., s. 46 (6)); see note (d), p. 796, post, and Westmoreland (Sheriffs Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 55), s. 31), and to each county in Wales (ibid.). In ancient times sheriffs were elected by the inhabitants of counties, and in some cases the office was hereditary (1 Bl. Com. 339, 340). The elections by the inhabitants were put an end to by stat. (1315) 9 Edw. 2, stat. 2, and the last of the hereditary shrievalties, that of Westmoreland, was abolished by stat. (1850) 13 & 14 Vict. c. 30.

(r) For form of warrant, see Sheriffs Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 55), Sched. I.

(s) Ibid., s. 6 (2). Prior to 1833 the appointment was made by patent under the Great Seal; see Fines Act, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 99), s. 3, repealed by the Sheriffs Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 55).

(t) Ibid., s. 6 (3). As to the declaration of office, see p. 793, ante.

The shrievalty of the county of Cornwall is annexed to the Duchy, and the appointment of the sheriff is made by the Prince of Wales, as Duke of Cornwall (a).

SECT. 2.
High Sheriffs of Counties at Large.
Qualification.

SUB-SECT. 2.—Qualification.

1362. A person may not be appointed high sheriff of a county at large unless he has sufficient land within his county to answer the King and his people (b).

SUB-SECT. 3.—Exemptions.

1363. Members of the House of Commons (c), field officers of the Territorial Force (d), the Postmaster-General and officers of the Post Office (e), Commissioners, officers, collectors and persons employed under the authority of the Commissioners, in relation to inland revenue (f), and officers of customs (g), are exempt from the liability to assume or serve the office of high sheriff of a county at large; and a person who has been high sheriff of a county for a whole year may not within the three years next ensuing be appointed high sheriff of that county unless there is no other person in the county qualified to fill the office (h). Officers of the regular forces on the active list are incapable of being nominated for or appointed to the office of high sheriff (i).

SUB-SECT. 4.—Tenure of Office.

1364. The office of high sheriff is held during the pleasure of the Crown, and is an annual one, the grant of the office for more than a year being void (k). The office is not avoided by the demise of the Crown, nor in Cornwall by the demise of the Duchy of Cornwall (l), nor by the succession of the sheriff to a peerage (m).

 High Sheriffs of Counties at Large. The sheriff of a county may not transfer his office or let to farm his county or any part thereof (o).

SECT. 3.—Sheriffs of Counties of Cities and Towns.

Appointment. 1365. In every borough which is a county of itself (p), and in the city of Oxford (q), a sheriff is appointed by the city or town council on the 9th November in every year at the quarterly meeting of the council immediately after the election of the mayor, and holds office until the appointment of his successor (r).

In the event of the death or incapacity of a sheriff so appointed during the tenure of his office, the council must forthwith appoint another fit person to execute the office (a).

Qualification. 1366. The necessary qualification of such a sheriff is that he should have sufficient property, whether in land or personalty, to answer the King and his people (b).

Exemptions. 1367. The same exemptions from liability to serve apply to sheriffs of counties of cities and counties of towns, and of the city of Oxford, as to high sheriffs of counties at large, with the exception of the exemption of members of the House of Commons, of field officers of the Territorial Force, and the exemption for three years of any person who has been sheriff of a county for a whole year (c).

SECT. 4.—Sheriffs of the City of London.

Election of sheriffs. 1368. It is an ancient privilege of the Corporation of the City of London to elect sheriffs for the City (d). The office is held of the Formerly the sheriffs of the City of London acted jointly as the sheriff of Middlesex, the Corporation of the City of London having bought the shrievalty of Middlesex, inter alia, from Henry VI. for a fee-farm rent of £315 (Parliamentary Reports, City and Corporation, which is answerable to the Crown for its due execution on the part of the sheriffs and their officers (e).

Two sheriffs are elected annually, and they jointly exercise the office of sheriff within the City (f).

The election takes place on Midsummer Day (g) in the Court of Common Hall (h), the choice being limited to persons in nomination, that is to say, (1) aldermen who have not passed the chair; (2) freemen nominated by the Lord Mayor, not exceeding nine in number; (3) freemen nominated on the day of election by any two electors (i). The precepts for the election are issued by the Lord Mayor, and the election is decided by a show of hands, unless a poll is demanded, in which case the poll is taken in accordance with statutory provisions (k), the list of voters being prepared by the Secondary (l). A bond of £1,000 is required to be given by the sheriffs-elect for due attendance at the Guildhall to be sworn in (m).

SECT. 4.
Sheriffs of the City of London.
Procedure.

1369. The approval by the King of the election of the sheriffs is necessary. This is signified by royal warrant under the seal of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the warrants being delivered to the sheriffs, or their duly authorised agents, without fee, between the 30th September and the 12th November, and the election being deemed approved unless the warrants are stayed by order of His Majesty in Council on or before the 30th September (n). The warrants are filed in the Central Office of the Supreme Court (o).

The duties of the sheriffs of the City of London are almost entirely ceremonial, their legal duties being performed by the Secondary (see p. 801, post). They attend the Lord Mayor on state occasions, present petitions on behalf of the Corporation to the House of Commons, and attend executions of capital sentence within the City. It is their privilege to wait on the Sovereign, by the direction of the Corporation, with the City Remembrancer, to ascertain the royal will and pleasure as to the reception of addresses from the Corporation (Parliamentary Reports, City and County of London Amalgamation, Vol. II., 1894 [C 7493], Appendix iii., 21).

1370. If a person, being duly elected, declines the office of sheriff, he is liable to a fine (p), the payment of which exempts him from future liability to serve, unless he afterwards takes on himself the office of alderman, in which case he continues liable to serve notwithstanding the payment of the fine (q).

SECT. 5.—Franchises.

 franchises.

1371. The Crown has power at common law to grant to a town or city the franchise or liberty of choosing its own officer to exercise the powers and duties of sheriff (r). The technical name for such a franchise or liberty, exempt from the authority of the sheriff of the county, is "bailiwick" (a), and the officer—that is, the lord of the franchise or other person or body corporate taking the place of the sheriff—is called the bailiff of the franchise (b). Most of these franchises or liberties have, so far as regards the powers and duties of the sheriff, been merged in the counties in which they are situated, in pursuance of statutory provisions (c).

Qualifications of bailiff of a franchise.

1372. No person may be appointed bailiff of a franchise unless he has sufficient land in his bailiwick to answer the King and his

(c) Most of them were so merged under the Liberties Act, 1850 (13 & 14 Vict. c. 105); the Cinque Ports and ancient towns of Winchelsea and Rye under the Cinque Ports Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 48), s. 2. By the County of Hertford and Liberty of St. Alban Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 45), s. 7, the liberty of St. Alban was made part of the county of Hertford for all purposes, but provision was made by ibid., s. 38, for saving the rights and privileges of the hundred or hereditary sheriff of the hundred of Cashio. In the Isle of Ely the chief bailiff, who is appointed by the Crown, acts as sheriff except with regard to summoning juries, that duty being performed by the sheriff of the counties of Cambridge and Huntingdon (Liberties Act, 1836 (6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 87), ss. 12, 15; see p. 793 ante). In the liberty of the Honor of Pontefract it is the duty of the sheriff of the county of York, and not the bailiff of the liberty, to execute all writs of execution (stat. (1845) 8 & 9 Vict. c. 72, s. 4). Compare also title COMPULSORY PURCHASE OF LAND AND COMPENSATION, Vol. VI., p. 87; p. 808, post. For all purposes connected with parliamentary elections, franchises and liberties are considered part of the county people (d); and a bailiff of a franchise must either hold the office himself or put in bailiffs possessing a similar qualification (e).

SECT. 5.
Franchises.

1373. So far as he has the powers and duties of a sheriff, the bailiff of a franchise is, generally speaking, in the same position as a sheriff with respect to the appointment and responsibility for the acts of bailiffs and officers (f), the liability for misconduct or breach of duty (f), the return of panels and juries (f), the due execution of writs (f), taking of fees, extortion, and otherwise in relation to the office and duties of a sheriff, except as regards his appointment and the duration of his office and that of his bailiff (g).

Part II.—Under-Sheriffs, Deputies, Bailiffs, and Officers.

SECT. 1.—Under-Sheriffs.

SUB-SECT. 1.—Appointment and Tenure of Office.

1374. Every sheriff of a county at large must, within one month after the notification of his appointment in the London Gazette, appoint by writing under his hand a fit person (h) to be his under-sheriff, and must transmit a duplicate of such written appointment to the clerk of the peace for the county, to be filed by him among the records of his office (i). Appointment.

Before entering on the execution of his office every under-sheriff must make a declaration in similar form to that made by the high sheriff (k), with appropriate variations, before a judge of the High Court or a justice of the peace for the county for which he is (g) Sheriffs Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 55), s. 34. The high bailiff of Southwark, who is also returning officer for the borough, is elected annually by the Corporation of the City of London. The office is at present held by the Secondary of the City of London, the Corporation paying him a salary of £105 as high bailiff. He performs the ordinary duties of a sheriff in regard to the summoning of juries, the execution of process of the High Court and of the borough court of record within the borough etc., and attends assizes and quarter sessions for the county of Surrey when required (Parliamentary Reports, City and County of London Amalgamation, Vol. II., 1894, [C 7493], Appendix iii., 55); and see title METROPOLIS, Vol. XX., p. 427, note (r).

(h) No particular qualification is necessary. A solicitor of standing is usually appointed.

(i) Sheriffs Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 55), s. 23 (1). For filing the duplicate, the clerk of the peace is entitled to such fee from the under-sheriff as may be fixed from time to time in pursuance of the enactments relating to clerks of the peace, and, until any fee is so fixed, a fee of 5s. (ibid., s. 23 (2)).

appointed (l). The declaration is exempt from stamp duty (m). The under-sheriff on his appointment usually executes a bond (n), with sureties, in favour of the high sheriff for the due and faithful discharge of his duties, and indemnifying the high sheriff against any liability for breach of duty on his part or on the part of his servants in the execution of the office.

Tenure of office.

1375. Only one under-sheriff of a county may be appointed (o), and he may be removed at the pleasure of the high sheriff even though his appointment purported to be irrevocable (p). The office of the under-sheriff comes to an end on the expiration of that of the high sheriff (q), but he may be reappointed by the high sheriff's successor.

Sale or letting of office prohibited.

1376. The office of under-sheriff may not, directly or indirectly, be bought, sold, let, or taken to ferm, nor may any valuable consideration be given or received for the office; but this prohibition does not prevent the high sheriff from giving a salary or remuneration for the execution of the office (r).

SUB-SECT. 2.—Nature of Office and Duties.

Duties and powers.

1377. The under-sheriff usually performs all the judicial and other duties of the office of sheriff, with a few exceptions where the personal presence of the high sheriff is necessary (s). As under-sheriff he has all the powers incident to the sheriff's office which are not personal to the high sheriff, and a covenant or condition in restraint of such powers is void (t). He has authority virtute officii to execute a deed in the name and under the seal of the high sheriff in the course of the execution of the office (u), and it is his duty in all cases to act in the name of the high sheriff (a). Any action in respect of the non-performance of the duties of the office must be brought against the high sheriff, who is alone liable (b).

SECT. 1.

Under-Sheriffs.

Duty to act as high sheriff in certain cases.

1378. Where the high sheriff dies before the expiration of his year of office or before his successor has entered on the office, the under-sheriff nevertheless continues in office, and it is his duty to exercise the office of high sheriff in the name of the deceased until another high sheriff for the county has been appointed and made the declaration of office, and he is answerable for the execution of such office as the deceased would have been if living (c), the security given to the deceased sheriff operating as a security to the Crown and all other persons for the under-sheriff's due execution of the offices of high sheriff and under-sheriff (d). It is also the duty of the under-sheriff to execute the office of high sheriff while the high sheriff, being a Militia officer or officer of the Territorial Force, is discharged from personally performing his office during embodiment (e). An under-sheriff is not, however, personally responsible for any sum received by a deceased high sheriff (f).

SECT. 2.—Secondary of the City of London.

1379. In the City of London, the Secondary, who is elected by the Court of Common Council, occupies a similar position to that of the under-sheriff of a county, and performs, in the name of the sheriffs, all the duties ordinarily incident to the office of an under-sheriff (g). There were formerly two secondaries, but since 1871 there has been only one (h).

Appointment and duties.

The office of Secondary is held of the Corporation of the City of London, which is liable to the Crown for any breach of duty on his part (i). The Secondary gives a bond to the Corporation efficiently to discharge all duties as representative of the sheriffs, he himself being bound in an unlimited amount, with two sureties jointly and severally bound in the sum of £2,500 (i).

The duties of the under-sheriffs of the City of London are entirely ceremonial. They take the annual allowance of £750 made by the Corporation to the sheriffs, and, in addition, get an allowance from the sheriffs. The Secondary performs all the legal duties of the sheriffs. The present Secondary is also high bailiff of the borough of Southwark; see note (g), p. 799, ante.

SECT. 3.

Deputies.

London
deputy and his duties.

1380. Every sheriff (k) must appoint a sufficient deputy, who must reside or have an office within a mile from the Inner Temple Hall, for the receipt of writs, the granting of warrants thereon, the making of returns thereto, and the acceptance of all rules and orders to be made on or touching the execution of any process or writ directed to the sheriff (l). The delivery of a writ to the London deputy operates as a delivery to the sheriff (m).

Franchise
deputy.

1381. In the case of a franchise, the sheriff of the county in which the franchise is situated must, within a month after request by the lord of the franchise, appoint a sufficient deputy at such cost, to be paid by the lord of the franchise, and to reside at such convenient place in or near the franchise, as may be appointed from time to time by the Lord Chancellor and the Lord Chief Justice or one of them (n). Every such deputy must reside at the place appointed and, in the sheriff's name, receive all writs, the execution or return of which belongs to the bailiff of the franchise, and must without delay issue to the bailiff of the franchise under the seal of the sheriff the warrants required for due execution of the writs (o).

Deputies in other cases.

1382. A sheriff may by writing appoint a deputy to take the inquisition under a writ of inquiry (p) or for ascertaining the amount of compensation on a compulsory acquisition of land (q), though the under-sheriff usually acts as deputy in taking such inquisitions, and in certain cases a deputy may be appointed by the sheriff to act as returning officer in a parliamentary election (r).

Declaration
of office.

When it becomes the duty of an under-sheriff to act as high sheriff owing to the death of the high sheriff before he has been superseded (s), the under-sheriff may by writing appoint a deputy (t): otherwise an under-sheriff has no power to appoint a deputy, though he may authorise another to do a particular act (a).

1383. Every deputy sheriff must, before impanelling or returning any inquest, jury or tales, or intermeddling with the execution of any writ, make a declaration, which is exempt from stamp duty, before a judge of the High Court or a justice of the peace for the county or borough in which he exercises authority, to the effect that he will not use or exercise his office corruptly, or take any fee or reward before the impanelling or returning of any inquest,

SECT. 3.
Deputies.

1384. The office of deputy sheriff may not, directly or indirectly, be bought, sold, let or taken to ferm, nor may any valuable consideration be given or received therefor; but this prohibition does not prevent the sheriff from giving a salary or remuneration for the execution of the office (c).

Prohibition of sale or letting of office.

SECT. 4.—Bailiffs and Officers.

1385. Bailiffs or sheriff's officers are appointed by sheriffs for the purpose of summoning juries, collecting fines, and executing writs and processes (d). They are generally paid by salary, and usually give a bond, with sureties, to the sheriff for the due execution of the office and the accounting to the sheriff for the fees and perquisites received in respect thereof, and indemnifying him against liability for any extortion or breach of duty on their part; hence they are sometimes called "bound bailiffs" (e).

Appointment.

Security.

In the City of London the bound bailiffs are called "serjeants-at-mace" and their assistants "yeomen." It is the duty of the Secondary to take securities on behalf of the sheriffs from the serjeants-at-mace.

In the City of London.

The office of bailiff or sheriff's officer being one of responsibility and trust, an infant ought not to be appointed (f). The office is a personal one, and cannot be executed by a deputy (g), nor is any partnership possible between two such officers so as to render the acts of one binding on the other (h).

Nature of office.

1386. A bailiff or other sheriff's officer must, before taking upon himself to impanel or return any inquest, jury, or tales, or to intermeddle with the execution of any writs issued by any court of record, make a similar declaration to that required from a deputy sheriff (i) before a judge of the High Court or justice of the peace for the county or borough in which he exercises authority (k).

Declaration of office.

Special
bailiff.

1388. The term "special bailiff" is sometimes used to signify a particular officer appointed to execute a writ at the instance of the person issuing the writ. Such an officer is, as between the person issuing the writ and the sheriff, regarded rather as the agent of the former than the latter, so as to exonerate the sheriff, as a general rule, from liability to the person issuing the writ for any misconduct or breach of duty on the part of the officer in the execution of the writ (n).

Part III.—Disqualifications of Sheriffs and Officers.

Sheriff : as justice of the peace ;
as member of Parliament.

1389. The high sheriff of a county is disqualified from acting as a justice of the peace for the county (o) ; and, being returning officer, is not eligible as a member of Parliament for the county, or for any riding or division thereof, but he is eligible for any other county, or for a borough even within the county of which he is sheriff (p).

Sale of Service on jury.

1390. All sheriff's officers are disqualified from holding licences to retail intoxicating liquor (q) ; they are also exempt from service upon any jury or inquest (r), and no sheriff or officer of a sheriff may return in any panel, for an inquest or jury, any officer or servant of the sheriff or of such officer (s).

Part IV.—Powers, Duties, and Liabilities.

SECT. 1.—At Assizes.

SECT. 1.

At Assizes.

1391. It is the duty of the sheriff of the county (t) to make arrangements for the proper reception of the judges of assize on arrival at the assize town, to provide a proper equipage and escort for conveying the judges on arrival to their lodgings, and for conveying them during the holding of the assizes daily to and from the court, to make provision for the judges' lodgings, to arrange for any church services which may be desired by the judge or judges, and attend such services with their under-sheriffs, to make arrangements for the opening of the commission, and generally to attend on the judges, and see that they are properly lodged and cared for and treated with all respect, and to arrange for their departure on the termination of the assizes (a).

Reception of and attendance on judges of assize.

The necessary arrangements are usually made by the under-sheriff as deputy of the high sheriff, but it is the duty of the high sheriff in person to meet the judge or judges on arrival (b), and to give his attendance throughout the assizes (c). Either the high sheriff or under-sheriff should attend the court throughout each day for the purpose of looking after the jurors who are under the sheriff's control, and observing any directions of the judge, the clerk of assize, or clerk of arraigns.

Attendance in person.

1392. It is usual to have men-servants in livery in attendance for the purpose of providing an escort, and keeping order in and within the precincts of the court, and of protecting the judges (d). A court of quarter sessions in the county may direct that in lieu of such men-servants a sufficient number of police constables shall be employed, but, if no such direction is given, it is the duty of the sheriff to have a sufficient number of men-servants in livery

Men-servants in livery and police constables in attendance.

(t) The sheriff of a city or town which is a county of itself (see p. 796, ante; title MAGISTRATES, Vol. XIX., p. 540, note (f)) must also attend where there are cases to be tried concerning the city or town. The sheriffs of the City of London are required to attend every session of the Central Criminal Court, and they provide a daily luncheon for the judges and privileged persons and pay the expenses of jurors locked up for the night (Parliamentary Reports, City and County of London Amalgamation, 1894, Vol. I. [C 7493], p. 77, Vol. II., Appendix iii., 21). The Secondary also attends during the trial of City prisoners, and attends the sittings for the trial of City of London actions at the High Court (ibid., Appendix iii., 54).

(a) It is also the duty of the bailiff of any franchise (see p. 798, ante) who has in times past been accustomed to attend to continue to do so, and to execute any writs directed to him for the administration of justice in the franchise (Sheriffs Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 55), s. 35). As to the assizes, see title COURTS, Vol. IX., p. 73.

(b) In practice the high sheriff is always accompanied by his under-sheriff.

(d) 1 Bl. Com. 346. Stat. (1662) 14 Car. 2, c. 21, provided that no sheriff should have more than forty men-servants in livery, nor less than twenty in England or twelve in Wales, attending him. This provision was repealed by the County and Borough Police Act, 1859 (22 & 23 Vict. c. 32), s. 18.

SECT. 1.

for the purposes mentioned (e). The power of directing constables to be employed may, in the case of a county of a city or county of a town, be exercised by the city or town council instead of quarter sessions (f).

summon juries.

1393. It is the duty of the under-sheriff, as deputy of the sheriff, to summon the juries pursuant to a precept from the presiding judge, which directs him to summon a sufficient number of duly qualified jurors for the trial of all issues, civil or criminal, which may come on for trial, including a sufficient number of special jurors to try special jury cases, and to deliver a return to the precept to the clerk of assize (g).

Proclamation of the assizes.

1394. On receipt of the precept directing him to summon jurors, it is the duty of the sheriff to give public notice of the holding of the assizes, which is generally done by means of advertisements in the leading county newspapers.

Calendar of prisoners.

1395. It was formerly the duty of the sheriff, as the custodian of prisoners, to deliver the calendar of prisoners to the presiding judge, but this duty has devolved upon the gaoler (h).

Execution of death sentence.

The duty of carrying the judgment of the court into execution (i) is now confined, in the case of criminal sentences, to the sentence of death (k).

SECT. 2.—At Quarter Sessions.

Duties at county
sessions.

1396. It is the duty of the sheriff at county quarter sessions to summon the necessary jurors on a precept from the clerk of the peace (l). This duty is generally performed by the under-sheriff, who attends the court in order to deliver a return to the precept to the clerk of the peace, and to look after the jurors (m). It is not usual for the high sheriff to attend.

Borough
sessions.

The sheriff has no duties to perform at borough quarter sessions, and is under no obligation to attend (n).

(e) Sheriffs Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 55), s. 9. This requirement of the maintenance of men-servants does not apply to the sheriffs of the city of London (ibid., s. 33 (4)).

(m) See title MAGISTRATES, Vol. XIX., p. 631. As to the duty of the bailiff of any franchise (see p. 798, ante) within the county to attend if he has been accustomed to do so, see Sheriffs Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 55), s. 35.

(n) In this case the duties of summoning juries etc. are performed by the clerk of the peace and registrar of the borough civil court (if any; see title COURTS, Vol. IX., pp. 129 et seq.) respectively (Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 50), s. 186); and see titles JURIES, Vol. XVIII., p. 238; MAGISTRATES, Vol. XIX., p. 625.

SECT. 3.—*Judicial Functions.*SECT. 3.
Judicial Functions.SUB-SECT. 1.—In General.

1397. In ancient times the sheriff had civil jurisdiction in small causes, and also a criminal jurisdiction, which were exercised, respectively, in the county court and sheriff's tourn (o). The civil jurisdiction of the sheriff has now been superseded by that of the modern county courts (p), and the criminal jurisdiction by that of the justices of the peace at petty sessions. The sheriff is now only bound to hold a county court where it is required for the purpose of an election (q), or for the due execution of some writ or some other specific purpose (r), in which case he must hold a court at the time fixed by law or by the writ, or, if no time is so fixed, as soon as reasonably practicable after he is informed of the necessity of holding the court, or receives the writ, and, if more than one court is necessary for any such purpose, the courts must be held at intervals of not more than a month (s).

It is now assimilated to the ordinary county courts (County Courts Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 43), s. 185); see title COUNTY COURTS, Vol. VIII., p. 412, note (o).

The court must be held at the place appointed or authorised by law, or at such other place as the sheriff may fix with the consent of the authority for the time being having power to divide the county into polling districts for the purpose of parliamentary elections (Sheriffs Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 55), s. 18 (2)).

(t) Sheriffs Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 55), s. 18 (4). But, notwithstanding the abolition of the sheriff's tourn and the repeal of any enactment by the Sheriffs Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 55), every court leet, court baron, law day, view of frankpledge, or other like court which was held at the passing of that Act (16th September, 1887), must continue to be held on the days and in the places accustomed, but has no larger powers, nor may any larger fees be taken, than before, and any indictment or presentment found at any such court may be dealt with in like manner as before (ibid., s. 40 (1)). Where any enactment repealed by the Sheriffs Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 55), applied to any coroner, escheator, or other officer, he continues to be governed thereby as if it were not repealed, except that where any provision as regards a sheriff or sheriff's officer is substituted by the Sheriffs Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 55), for the repealed enactment, it applies to such coroner, escheator, or officer in lieu of the repealed enactment (ibid., s. 40 (2)).

(a) Ibid., s. 18 (3).

SECT. 3.

Judicial Functions.SUB-SECT. 2.—*Writs of Inquiry.*Writs of inquiry.

1398. Writs of inquiry are in certain cases issued from the High Court to the sheriff for the assessment of damages with a common or special jury. The sheriff may appoint a special deputy to execute such a writ, but the under-sheriff usually acts as his deputy and presides at the inquiry. In the City of London such inquiries are taken by the Secondary as deputy for the sheriffs, the court being held at the Guildhall (b).

SUB-SECT. 3.—*Under the Lands' Clauses Acts (c).*Ascertainment of compensation on compulsory
of land.

1399. When the amount of disputed compensation exceeding £50 for land compulsorily taken or injuriously affected is to be determined by the verdict of a jury otherwise than on a trial in the High Court, it is the duty of the sheriff or his deputy, who is generally the under-sheriff, for the place where the land is situated, to summon the jury and preside at the inquiry (d). The person presiding at the inquiry must sign the verdict, and give and sign judgment for the amount of compensation assessed, which may be enforced by action (e).

Westminster and City of London.

If the land is within the city and liberty of Westminster, the high bailiff of the city and liberty or his deputy is substituted for the sheriff (f). In the City of London the Secondary summons the jury, which is generally a special jury who have viewed the premises, and presides at the hearing (g).

Where sheriff interested.

1400. Where the high sheriff has a direct pecuniary interest in the matter, his duties devolve on the coroner of the county and not on the under-sheriff (h), and, where the under-sheriff is interested, the high sheriff may proceed himself or appoint a disinterested deputy (i).

SUB-SECT. 4.—*Inquisitions on Writs of Elegit.*Writs of Judicial Functions.

SECT. 4.—As to Juries.

1402. The sheriff (k) is the proper summoning officer (l) of grand, special, and common juries for the High Court, assizes (m), and the Central Criminal Court (n). It is also the duty of the sheriff of every county, and of the high bailiffs of Westminster and Southwark respectively, to supply lists of persons qualified and liable to serve as jurors to the registrars of county courts, county court jurors being summoned from the lists so supplied (o). In the City of London the jury lists are prepared by the Secondary, who is also the summoning officer, and from these lists jurors are summoned for the Mayor's Court and the City of London Court (p).

In the City of London the Secondary superintends and conducts, under the sheriffs, the election of members for the City. On receipt of the writ he gives notice of the day of nomination and election, provides polling stations, presiding officers etc., makes the return to the Clerk of the Crown, and generally performs all the duties of returning officer. He also acts in a capacity similar to that of the town clerk of a municipal borough with regard to the registration (see title ELECTIONS, Vol. XII., pp. 241 et seq.) of parliamentary and county electors of the City, and superintends and conducts all elections of corporate officers in the City (Parliamentary Reports, City and County of London Amalgamation, Vol. II., 1894 [C 7493], Appendix iii., 54). Returning officers at parliamentary elections for boroughs.

1404. For every parliamentary borough which is not a county of itself or a municipal borough (b), the high sheriff of the county in which the borough is situated must in the month of March nominate a returning officer, who acts in that capacity until the nomination of his successor in the following year (c). Where any such borough is situated in more than one county, the sheriff of the county in which the largest part of the borough in extent is situated makes the appointment (d). The returning officer so nominated need not be resident in the borough, but must have an office therein for the purpose of his duties in connexion with elections (e).

Where, by reason of a temporary vacancy or other cause, there is no person qualified in any borough, city or town to perform the duties of returning officer, the writ for the election must be delivered to the sheriff of the county in which the borough, city or town is situated, and he must act as returning officer, but it is not lawful for the sheriff of the county to receive or execute the writ in such a case unless there is no person within the borough, city or town, who is legally qualified and competent to execute it (f).

No remuneration.

1405. No sheriff or other returning officer is entitled to any remuneration in respect of the performance of his duties as returning officer (g).

Election petitions.

1406. It is the duty of the sheriff or other returning officer, on receipt of a copy of a parliamentary election petition, forthwith to publish it in the county or borough as the case may be (h).

SECT. 6.—As Conservators of the Peace.

1407. As conservator of the King's peace, it is the duty of the sheriff (k) to suppress unlawful assemblies and riots, and apprehend offenders, and to defend his county against invasion by the King's enemies, for which purposes he may take with him the posse comitatus (l). Any person who, without physical impossibility, refuses to assist in the suppression of a riot, may if it was reasonably necessary to call on him for assistance, be indicted, and it is no ground of defence that, owing to the number of rioters, his assistance would have been ineffectual (m).

1408. In former times it was part of the duty of the sheriff to pursue and arrest felons within his county, and for that purpose to raise the hue and cry (n). Legally every person in a county is still bound to be ready at the command of the sheriff and at the cry of the country to arrest a felon, whether within a franchise or without, and in default is, on conviction, liable to a fine, and, if a bailiff, besides the fine, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding one year (o) ; but this power of raising the posse comitatus for the arrest of felons is not now used in practice owing to the establishment of the county police (p).

1410. The writ is an absolute justification to the sheriff for what is done in pursuance of it, even though the judgment on which it is founded may be afterwards set aside (t). But he is liable if any act is done in excess of the authority given by the writ (a), and it is not necessary, in an action against him for trespass, to prove actual damage (b). B. 370; see title TROVER AND DETINUE). The high bailiff of a county court is not liable as a trespasser, nor without proof of special damage, by reason of a mere irregularity or informality in the execution of a warrant, and is only liable for costs in such a case if the damages exceed 40s. (County Courts Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 43), s. 52; see title COUNTY COURTS, Vol. VIII., p. 426); but trespass lies against him if premises are wrongfully entered and a substantial grievance is suffered (De Coppett v. Barnett (1901), 17 T. L. R. 273, C. A.), or if he seizes the goods of a third person (White v. Morris (1852), 11 C. 1411. No writ or process may be executed on Sunday except in cases of treason, felony, and breach of the peace (d). A writ of attachment for contempt of court of a quasi-criminal or public nature may, however, be executed on Sunday, such a contempt of court being regarded as a breach of the peace (e).

Sunday.

1412. A sheriff is justified in breaking open the outer door of a dwelling-house or other building in order to execute any process, by arresting a debtor or otherwise, at the suit of the Crown (f), or in order to execute a writ of attachment for contempt of a quasi-criminal nature (g), or to execute a writ of possession or capias utlagatum, though at the suit of a subject (h), if he cannot otherwise enter; but he ought in the first instance to require the door to be opened, and is only justified in breaking it open on a refusal of admission (i).

open doors.

In other cases of civil process between subject and subject the sheriff is not warranted in breaking open the outer door of a dwelling-house (k), but he may enter if the door is open (l), or may open it by any of the usual means, such as by turning the key, lifting the latch, or drawing back the bolt (m). He may also make an entry through an open window (n), or by further opening a window which is already partly open (o), but not by opening a window which is shut, even though it may not be fastened (p).

SECT. 7.

Execution of Process.

Breaking open after arrest, seizure of goods, or entry.

Extent of privilege of not having outer door broken.

Effect of illegal breaking open.

If a person is lawfully arrested, an outer door may be broken open in order to complete the execution and take him into custody (q), and if, after arrest, the prisoner escapes, the sheriff may justify a breaking open, on a fresh pursuit, to retake him (a). An outer door may be broken open in order to carry away goods lawfully seized if there is nobody there to open the door or after refusal to open it (b); and if, after an entry has been made, the officer is forcibly expelled, he may break open the outer door to re-enter without any previous demand for re-entry (c).

1413. The privilege of not having an outer door broken open only extends to the occupier of the house, and does not operate to protect a person who flies or puts his goods there to prevent the execution of process (d). But in order to justify the entering and searching of the house of a stranger to arrest or seize the goods of the person against whom the process is issued, the sheriff must prove that the person to be arrested was, or the goods to be seized were, in fact in the house (e). He cannot justify by proving that there was reasonable ground of suspicion (e). A sheriff may, however, justify entering the house of the administrator on a writ of fi. fa. against an intestate, to search for the goods, though they may not be found there, because the administrator may naturally be expected to be in custody of them (f).

The privilege is confined to dwelling-houses. The outer door of premises occupied by the debtor, but not being his dwelling-house, nor within the curtilage of his dwelling-house, may lawfully be broken open (g).

1414. The fact that an outer door is illegally broken open does not, in the case of an execution against property, affect the validity of the subsequent seizure and sale of the property, though it gives a right of action to the person aggrieved (h). It is otherwise in the case of an arrest of the person, a person arrested by illegal means being entitled to be discharged before he can be lawfully arrested (h).

SUB-SECT. 2.—Return to Writ.

1416. Although, theoretically, it is the duty of the sheriff to make a return to every writ of execution, in practice a return is never made, except in the case of the writ of elegit, unless it is required by the execution creditor (l). No proceedings lie in respect of the non-return of a writ until the sheriff has been required to make a return (m), and an order for a return is in the discretion of the court (n).

Duty to return writ.

Where, in the case of the non-return of a writ, the sheriff returns that he has delivered the writ for execution to the bailiff of a franchise, the sheriff may be ordered to execute the writ, notwithstanding the franchise, and to cause the bailiff of the franchise to attend before the High Court and answer why he did not execute the writ (o).

Non-return by bailiff of franchise.

An action does not lie for a false return without proof of special damage (p).

SUB-SECT. 3.—Arrest on Civil Process.

supervision (t), but, provided the arrest is effected by his authority and direction, it is not necessary that it should actually take place in his presence or sight (a).

The proper mode of effecting an arrest is to touch the person to be arrested and intimate that he is a prisoner (b). Mere words, without touching, are not sufficient to constitute an arrest, unless the person to be arrested acquiesces by going with the officer or otherwise (c), or unless he is actually placed under restraint (d). The warrant ought to be produced by the officer on making an arrest (e).

1419. A person may not be arrested on civil process in the King's presence or within the verge of a royal palace which is also a royal residence, or in any place where the King's justices are actually sitting (f).

Custody of 1420. The sheriff is not bound to bring before the court a person arrested on civil process unless he is so directed. He is justified in detaining him until ordered to return the process (g).

A person in custody by virtue of any writ, or attachment for debt (h), may not be conveyed without his free and voluntary consent (i) to any house licensed for the sale of intoxicating liquor, or to the private house of the officer, or of any tenant or relation of the officer, having him in custody; nor may the officer charge him any sum for, or procure him to call for, any liquor, food or other thing except what he freely asks for; nor take him to any prison within twenty-four hours of arrest, unless he refuses to be carried to a safe and convenient dwelling-house of his own nomination, not being his own private dwelling-house, within the borough or town where he is arrested, or if not arrested in a borough or town, within three miles of the place and in the county or franchise in which he is arrested (k); but the officer must permit him to send for food or

Every court of county quarter sessions must from time to time make an order allowing sums which may be taken from prisoners arrested in the county, to be applied in respect of one or more nights' lodging or for a day's diet or other expenses, and may from time to time vary any such order (m).

1421. The following persons are privileged from arrest on civil process (n):—

Members of the Royal Family, servants of the King and other members of the royal household (o), including chaplains (p).

A person accused of a criminal offence is privileged during a remand on bail (p), but not while returning from the court after being acquitted (q).

A solicitor who attends merely for the purpose of advising bail is not privileged (r), nor is a solicitor entitled to any privilege if he is about to leave the country (s). The privilege of a solicitor does not extend to a solicitor's clerk attending the court on his master's business (t).

Barristers are privileged while on circuit or attending court to conduct a cause or hear judgment (a).

Lunatics are not, as such, privileged from arrest (b); nor is a voter attending an election (c).

 Execution of Process. A person wrongfully arrested must be discharged before he can be lawfully arrested (g).

Escape. 1423. Where a prisoner in the custody of a sheriff or his officers on civil process escapes, the sheriff is liable for any damages sustained by the person at whose suit the prisoner was taken into custody (h), but the sheriff is not liable for the escape of any prisoner confined in a prison subject to the Prison Act, 1877 (i). Only the actual damage suffered can be recovered in an action for an escape (k), the measure of damages being the value of the custody of the prisoner at the time of the escape (l). The sheriff has no power to retake a prisoner after a voluntary release (m), but, if a prisoner allowed to go at large returns to custody, and is in custody at the return of the writ, the sheriff is not liable as for an escape (n).

SUB-SECT. 4.—Receipt of Crown Debts.

Receipt of Crown debts. 1424. In ancient times the sheriff was the collector and receiver of all sums due to the Crown in his county. At the present day he has no authority to receive debts due to the Crown except under process of a court. The ordinary process for enforcing payment of Crown debts is the writ of extent, which is usually preceded by a scire facias, though the writ of extent may issue at once without any preliminary proceedings if the debt is in danger (o).

Duty to give receipt. Where a sheriff or his officer employed in collecting by process any debt due to the Crown receives any sum due to the Crown, he must give a receipt for it, and at the next account (p) after its receipt the sheriff must procure the effectual discharge of the person making the payment (q). If the sum is received by an officer of

In case of default in giving any such receipt or procuring the discharge of the debtor, the sheriff and his real and personal representatives are liable to pay any damage suffered by the debtor in consequence of the default (s).

1425. It is the duty of the sheriff to levy all fines, penalties, and forfeited recognisances payable to the Crown (t).

1426. Fines and forfeited recognisances imposed or forfeited by or before any justice or justices of the peace, otherwise than at quarter sessions, must be certified by the justice or justices to the clerk of the peace or town clerk, as the case may be, on or before the ensuing quarter sessions, and be copied by the clerk of the peace or the town clerk on a roll, together with all fines and forfeited recognisances imposed or forfeited at such quarter sessions (a), and the clerk of the peace or town clerk must, within twenty-one days after the adjournment of the court, send a copy of the roll with a writ of distringas and capias or of feri facias and capias (b) to the sheriff of the county, or the sheriff or other officer of the city, borough, or place having the execution of process therein (c), whose duty it is immediately to proceed to the levying and recovery of the fines and forfeited recognisances by execution on the goods and chattels of the person liable, and, in case the goods and chattels are insufficient, then by taking him into custody and lodging him in gaol to abide the judgment of the following court of quarter sessions (d).

(a) It is not necessary to certify fines imposed or recognisances forfeited at quarter sessions, it being the duty of the clerk of the peace or town clerk to take notice thereof without being certified (R. v. Isle of Ely Justices (1855), 5 E. & B. 489). The clerk of the peace or town clerk must take an oath that the roll is carefully made up and contains all the fines and forfeited recognisances, distinguishing those which have been paid, either in court or otherwise (Levy of Fines Act, 1822 (3 Geo. 4, c. 46), s. 3). It is the duty of the sheriff to discharge out of custody any person arrested who gives security for his appearance at the following quarter sessions and for payment of the amount of the fine or forfeited recognizance (ibid., s. 5); and the court of quarter sessions before which any person committed to gaol or giving security appears may order the discharge of the whole or any part of the fine or forfeited recognizance, such an order operating as a discharge to the sheriff on passing his accounts (ibid., s. 6). As to sheriffs' accounts, see pp. 841, 842,

SECT. 7.

Execution of Process.

Return to writs and continuation of process.

At the opening of the court of the ensuing quarter sessions, the sheriff or other officer to whom the writs were delivered must return them and state on the back of the roll what has been done in the execution of the process (e), and at that and subsequent courts of quarter sessions it is the duty of the clerk of the peace or town clerk to insert in the roll for the particular sessions all fines and forfeited recognisances not duly levied or recovered and not discharged, and to continue the process from sessions to sessions until it is ascertained that there are no goods or chattels on which the sum can be levied, and that the person liable cannot be found, the original writs and rolls continuing in force and being sufficient authority to the sheriff or other officer, without the necessity for issuing further writs (f).

Copy of roll to be sent to Treasury.

It is the duty of the clerk of the peace or town clerk within twenty days from the opening of the court of quarter sessions to send to the Treasury a copy or extract of the roll delivered by the sheriff or other officer at the opening of the court and the answer given by the sheriff or officer where any fine or forfeited recognisance has not been recovered (g).

Fines imposed and recognisances forfeited at assizes.

1427. It is the duty of the clerk of assize to copy on a roll all fines imposed and recognisances forfeited at assizes, distinguishing such as have been paid, and to send a copy of the roll with a writ of execution to the sheriff or officer of the county or place in which the parties liable are stated to be resident, whose duty it is to take the same steps for the purpose of levying and recovering the fines and forfeited recognisances as in the cases of fines imposed and recognisances forfeited at quarter sessions (h), any person arrested in execution to be kept in gaol until payment or discharge by the Treasury or otherwise according to law (i). Accounts of all such fines and forfeited recognisances must be sent by the clerk of assize to the Treasury (j).

Return to writs.

The sheriff or other officer must return all such writs to the Treasury, and state on the back of the roll what has been done in execution of the process (k); and, until all the fines and forfeited recognisances have been paid or recovered or discharged, or it is ascertained that the persons in default have no goods or chattels in the county or place of the sheriff or officer, or in any other county, borough, city or other place in England in which a levy can be made, and that they cannot be found, the original writs remain in force and must be retained by the sheriff or other officer, together

Execution

1428. Where the party subject to a fine or forfeited recognisance resides or removes out of the jurisdiction of the sheriff or officer to whom the writ is delivered, such sheriff or officer must issue his warrant with a copy of the writ to the sheriff or officer acting for the county or other place where the party is, or where his goods or chattels are to be found, and the sheriff or officer to whom the warrant is issued must act on it as if the original writ had been delivered to him by order of the court of assize or of quarter sessions, as the case may be, for the county or place for which he acts as sheriff, and he must within thirty days return to the sheriff or officer from whom he received the warrant what he has done in the execution thereof, and must pay over to such sheriff or officer all sums received in connexion therewith (m).

The general property in the goods until sale remains in the execution debtor, if they belong to him (q), but the sheriff has a special property in them, and may maintain trespass or trover against a person taking them out of his custody (r). county or part of a county, the sheriff of the county is charged with the execution of the judgment, and may carry it out in any prison which is the common gaol of his county, or in which the convict was confined for the purpose of safe custody prior to his removal to the place where the court was held, and for the purpose of the execution has the same jurisdiction and powers over and in the prison in which the judgment is to be carried into execution, whether it is situated within his county or not, and over the officers of such prison, as he had at common law over and in the common gaol of his county and the officers thereof, and is subject to the same responsibility and duties as he was subject to at common law (t).

Sentence passed at Central Criminal Court.

1432. A judgment of death passed at the Central Criminal Court may be carried into execution in any prison in the Central Criminal Court district, or in the county where the offence was committed, which the court may order, and, if no such order is made, then in the prison in which the convict is for the time being confined, and such sheriff as may be ordered by the court, or, if no such order is made, the sheriff of the county where the offence was committed, or, if it was committed on the high seas, or if the county in which it was committed does not clearly appear, the sheriff of Middlesex, is charged with the execution, and has the same jurisdiction, powers and duties in the prison in which the judgment is to be carried into execution, though it may not be in his county, as he had at common law with respect to the common gaol of his county (a).

Execution for murder to be within prison walls.

1433. Every sentence of death on an indictment or inquisition for murder must be carried into effect within the walls of the prison in which the convict is confined at the time of the execution (b). The

(t) Sheriffs Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 55), s. 13 (1). At common law the custody of county gaols was vested in the sheriff ex officio, the gaolers being his servants and being appointed by him. The Prison Acts, 1865 and 1877 (28 & 29 Vict. c. 126; 40 & 41 Vict. c. 21), reserved the authority of the sheriff in regard to prisoners sentenced to death, so far as was necessary to carry the judgment into execution, and this reservation is continued by the Sheriffs Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 55), s. 13 (1). The Prison Act, 1877 (40 & 41 Vict. c. 21), s. 30, gives power to the Secretary of State by rule to direct that any prison locally situated in a county is to be considered the prison of any county, riding, county of a city or town, borough, liberty or other place having separate prison jurisdiction, and provides that, subject to any such rule, the transfer under the Act of prisons to which it applies shall not affect the jurisdiction of any sheriff having jurisdiction in respect of such prison. The Chester Courts Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 36), s. 4, provides for the execution by the sheriff of the county of Chester of all persons on whom sentence of death is passed at any court of assizes or gaol delivery for Chester. Previously the sheriff for the city of Chester was charged with such executions. As to counties of cities and counties of towns, see also Counties of Cities Act, 1811 (51 Geo. 3, c. 100), and Criminal Justice Administration Act, 1851 (14 & 15 Vict. c. 55), s. 23.

(b) Capital Punishment Amendment Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 24), s. 2. Prior to this Act executions took place in public. The Act is confined to executions for murder, and in the case of treason and other capital offences public executions are still legal.

sheriff charged with the execution (c), and the gaoler (d), chaplain (e), and surgeon (f) of the prison, and such other officers of the prison as the sheriff requires, must be present at the execution (g). It is the duty of the sheriff to provide the executioner, for whom he is responsible.

SECT. 8.
Execution of Sentence of Death.

1434. As soon as may be after the execution the surgeon or other chief medical officer of the prison must examine the body and ascertain the fact of death, and sign a certificate thereof, and deliver the same to the sheriff; and the sheriff, gaoler, chaplain, and such justices or other persons present as the sheriff requires or allows, must also sign a declaration to the effect that judgment of death has been executed on the offender (h). The certificate and declaration and a duplicate of the coroner's inquisition (i) must be sent by the sheriff with all convenient speed to the Secretary of State, and printed copies thereof must be exhibited for twenty-four hours on or near the principal entrance of the prison (j).

Certificate of death and declaration.

1435. The body must be buried within the walls of the prison in which the execution took place, unless the Secretary of State, on being satisfied by the visiting justices (k) that there is not convenient space for the burial within the prison, by writing under his hand has appointed some other fit place for the purpose (l).

Burial.

1436. Executions should take place in the week following the third Sunday after the sentence on any week-day, except Monday, at 8 a.m.; public notice under the hands of the sheriff and governor of the prison of the date and hour appointed should be posted on the prison gate not less than twelve hours before the execution, and should remain until the inquest on the body has been held; the bell of the prison or of the parish or a neighbouring church should be tolled for fifteen minutes after the execution; and persons engaged to carry out the execution should report themselves at the prison not later than four o'clock in the afternoon preceding the clamations.

1438. Copies of all royal proclamations except those for further proroguing Parliament are sent to the sheriffs of all counties, cities, and towns, who are required to make them known in the accustomed manner (o).

SECT. 11.—Liability of Sheriff for Acts of Officers.

Civilly but not criminally liable for all wrongs of officers in course of employment.

1439. A sheriff is civilly liable for any fraud or wrongful act or omission on the part of his under-sheriff, bailiff or officer in the course of his employment (p), though there may be no proof of any recognition by the sheriff of the act or default complained of (q); but the sheriff is not criminally liable for any act committed without his actual authority (r).

Child* (1866), L. R. 1 Exch. 358 (sheriff held liable to execution debtor for the negligence of his officer in the conduct of a sale, in consequence of which the goods were sold at an undervalue). The sheriff is liable in trespass if his bailiff on the execution of a writ of fi. fa. takes the goods of a person other than the execution debtor (Saunderson v. Baker (1772), 3 Wils. 309; Ackworth v. Kempe (1778), 1 Doug. (K. B.) 40; Smith v. Milles (1786), 1 Term Rep. 475, 480, or wrongfully seizes goods after payment (Gregory v. Cotterell (1855), 5 E. & B. 571, Ex. Ch.), or wrongfully breaks and enters the premises of a third person (Smith v. Pritchard (1849), 8 C. B. 565, a case of a county court bailiff), or for a false imprisonment by his officers (Saunderson v. Baker, supra, at p. 317). In any action against or by a sheriff in respect of matters connected with the execution of his office, the court may order that the affidavit in answer to interrogatories or an order for discovery shall be made by the officer actually concerned (R. S. C., Ord. 31, r. 28).

(r) Saunderson v. Baker, supra; Woodgate v. Knatchbull, supra; and

The civil liability of the sheriff extends not merely to acts done by his bailiff or officer in pursuance of his warrant, but also to anything done by him by colour of the warrant, the reason for the extended liability being that the sheriff is supposed to be executing his duty in person. The impossibility of so doing authorises him to delegate his duty, but he puts the delegate in his place, and is liable not only for what is done virtute mandati, but also for what is done colore mandati (s). Thus, if a bailiff to whom a warrant is delivered to execute a writ of feri facias improperly authorises an assistant to execute it in his absence, the sheriff is civilly liable for the acts and misconduct of the assistant, and for money received by him in reference to the execution, though it may not have been paid over (t).

The sheriff is liable even though the act done may have been contrary to the express terms of the writ, as if the person of the debtor is taken on a writ of feri facias (u), or in disobedience to his express instructions (a), provided only that it is done in the purported exercise of the officer's authority.

1440. A sheriff is not liable for the acts of a bailiff or officer which are quite outside the scope of his duties, and are not done for the purpose of executing the authority entrusted to him, or under colour of such authority (b), or for money received by the bailiff or officer otherwise than in the course of exercising or purporting to exercise his authority (c).

1441. A sheriff is not liable at the suit of an execution creditor or debtor for an act of misconduct on the part of his officer which Held, that the sheriff was not liable to the assignees for the balance, the authority of the bailiff to realise more than sufficient to satisfy the levy being derived from them and not from the sheriff); Woods v. Finnis (1852), 7 Exch. 363 (bailiff, on the execution of a writ of ca. sa., received the debt and costs and failed to pay over the amount. was done at the request or with the knowledge and assent of the party complaining (d). The mere fact, however, that the debtor or creditor induces the officer to commit a breach of his duty does not absolve the sheriff from his general responsibility for the misconduct of the officer, but only exonerates him from liability for the particular act or omission assented to by the plaintiff (e).

Special bailiff.

1442. Where a special bailiff (f) is employed to execute a writ at the instance of the execution creditor, who gives him his instructions, the sheriff is not liable to the execution creditor for the negligence or misconduct of the bailiff (g); nor is the sheriff in such a case bound to return the writ, and if he does so he is not liable for a false return (h). The employment of a special bailiff does not, however, relieve the sheriff from his own general responsibility and duty, or from liability to the execution creditor for his own negligence or that of his under-sheriff: it only absolves him from liability to the execution creditor for the acts and defaults of the bailiff (i).

Acts constituting a special bailiff.

A mere request by an execution creditor or his solicitor that a particular officer may be employed to execute the writ does not necessarily constitute the officer a special bailiff (k), even if it is coupled with information given direct to the officer to assist him in the execution of the writ (l); but if the execution creditor or his

Held, that the bailiff was not a special bailiff of the creditor so as to absolve the sheriff from liability for his negligence in the execution of the writ).

solicitor requests that the warrant shall be directed to a particular officer, and instructs him as to the manner in which the writ is to be executed, the officer is thereby constituted a special bailiff of the execution creditor (m).

SECT. 11.
Liability of Sheriff for Acts of Officers.

1443. In order to maintain an action against a sheriff for the wrongful act or default of a bailiff or officer it is necessary to show that the officer whose conduct is complained of was authorised by the sheriff in the particular transaction (n). It is not sufficient to prove merely that the officer is the bound bailiff of the sheriff in the particular writ (n). As a general rule, either the original warrant directed by the sheriff to the bailiff ought to be produced and proved (n), or the non-production of the original be accounted for in such a manner as to warrant the admission of secondary evidence (o). The production of a warrant proved to have been issued by the under-sheriff or the sheriff's London deputy to the particular officer under the sheriff's seal of office is sufficient, without proof of the writ of execution (p); and proof of the warrant may be dispensed with where there is other satisfactory evidence that the officer was duly authorised by the sheriff in the particular transaction (q). If the sheriff has by his conduct recognised or shown an intention to adopt the acts of the officer, that is sufficient

It is not necessary after a venditioni exponas on a writ of fi. fa. to prove a new warrant in order to connect the officer who is still in possession under the original warrant with the sheriff (Jacobs v. Humphrey (1834), 2 Cr. & M. 413).

1445. Any statement made by an under-sheriff or sheriff's officer tending to show that he has been guilty of a breach of duty, or made in the ordinary course of executing his office, is admissible in evidence in an action against the sheriff (a). But notice to a man left in possession by the bailiff executing a writ of a bankruptcy petition against the debtor, does not operate as notice to the sheriff, because the duties of the man in possession are confined to retaining possession, selling, and handing over the proceeds (Ex parte Warren (1885), 1 T. L. R. 430, C. A.); and see Gibbon v. Coggon (1809), 2 Camp. 188.

for the execution of any writ before he has actually received the writ, or is guilty of any offence against or breach of the provisions of the Sheriffs Act, 1887 (d), or of any wrongful act, or neglect, or default in the execution of his office, or of any contempt of a superior court, he, as well as any person procuring the commission of the offence, is liable to be punished as for a contempt of court (e), and to forfeit £200 and pay all damages suffered by any person aggrieved, the forfeiture and damages being recoverable by such person as a debt by action in the High Court (f).

The penalty of £200 is inflicted for an act in the nature of a criminal offence, and to support an action for its recovery there must be evidence of mens rea on the part of the defendant (g). A person who makes an unintentional overcharge is not liable to the penalty (h), and in any case the only persons liable are those actually committing the offence or procuring its commission (i). It is not, however, a necessary ingredient in the offence of extortion that the officer should make the wrongful demand or taking of money a condition precedent to doing his duty (k).

1448. An application for punishment as for a contempt of court may be made either to the High Court, or to any court of assize, oyer and terminer, or gaol delivery, or to any judge of any of such courts, or, where the alleged offence has been committed in relation to any writ issued out of any other of record, then to that court (l). The application may be made by complaint, which may be heard in a summary manner, and evidence be given either by examination of witnesses or by affidavit or interrogatories (l), or the offence may be dealt with by any such court, being a superior court, in like manner as for any contempt of such court (m). Where the proceeding is in a summary manner it must be taken before the 1449. If any person, not being an under-sheriff, bailiff or officer of a sheriff, assumes or pretends to act as such, or demands or takes any fee or reward under colour or pretext of any such office, he is liable to punishment as if he were an under-sheriff guilty of a contempt of the High Court (o).

1450. No person, in pursuance of the foregoing provisions, is liable to be punished more than once in respect of the same offence, but where any proceeding is taken for an offence the court or judge may postpone or stay the proceeding and direct any other available proceeding to be taken for punishing the offence (p).

1451. A sheriff who refuses or neglects to perform any duty in connexion with the levying of any fine or forfeited recognisance imposed or forfeited at assizes or quarter sessions is liable to a penalty of £50, recoverable by any person who sues for it (q).

1452. In the case of a franchise, the bailiff of the franchise and not the sheriff is liable for the non-execution, mis-execution or insufficient return of any writ, or for any misconduct in the performance of his office, and any fine imposed on the bailiff of the franchise or his bailiff or officer is, notwithstanding any grant, payable to the Crown (r).

1453. Offences by sheriffs in connexion with their duties in respect of juries (s), returns to writs of execution (t), arrest of felons and custody of prisoners (u), and elections (v), are dealt with elsewhere.

SECT. 1.
In General.

If a sheriff's bailiff or officer takes too much in respect of fees or poundage, an action as on an implied contract lies against the sheriff for the excess without any proof that the money has come to his hands (b), and the action survives against his executors or administrators (c).

Extortion.

A sheriff may not take a bond for his fees, because under colour thereof he might recover more than the fees (d), and a sheriff or under-sheriff is not entitled to refuse to execute process until his fees have been paid (e).

Security for fees.

An express promise to pay extra remuneration for the execution of process is void (f).

accounts of 1s. 6d. in the pound for every sum not exceeding £100, and 1s. for every pound exceeding the first £100 (g).

Where there are two or more writs of extent issued in different counties for the same debt, and the money is completely levied under one of the writs, the sheriff who completed the levy is entitled to the whole of the poundage (h). But if, in such a case, the debt is paid directly to the officers of the Crown, and not to either of the sheriffs, the poundage is apportioned between the sheriffs, even though the debt was paid under compulsion of a levy under only one of the writs (i).

Where a sheriff seizes any personal estate for a sum due to the Crown and dies or is superseded before he has sold it, and his successor sells it, the poundage due in respect of the seizure and sale is apportionable between the sheriffs in such manner as a judge of the High Court determines, having regard to the expense and trouble of each of the sheriffs (k).

1456. A sheriff has no right to levy poundage or incidental expenses under a writ of extent on a simple contract debt, nor has he a right to receive any poundage or expenses under a compromise in consideration of a stay of the proceedings made under the duress of a seizure (l). In such a case the Crown alone is liable for payment of the sheriff's poundage, and, if it is paid by the debtor, the sheriff will be ordered to repay it (m).

(g) Sheriffs Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 55), s. 20 (1). In R. v. Villers (1820), 8 Price, 587, it was held that a sheriff was not entitled under the Estreats Act, 1716 (3 Geo. 1, c. 15), s. 16 (now repealed), to poundage on money seized in the debtor's possession, nor in respect of money paid by the sureties of a Crown debtor arrested on Crown process, in order to obtain his release, nor in respect of debts due to the Crown debtor received by him, because he had no authority under the writ of extent to collect such debts; but the language of the Sheriffs Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 55), is different, and probably gives the sheriff the right to poundage in such cases.

(h) R. v. Caldwell (1793), 1 Anst. 279; R. v. Barber (1796), 3 Anst. 717. Where there were two writs of extent against A., and a writ of extent in aid against B. in another county, and B. paid the whole debt, giving notice to the sheriff to retain the money until the legality of the extent in aid had been tried, and subsequently A. by arrangement paid part of the amount to B., it was held that the sheriffs who took the inquisitions against A. were not entitled to any share of the poundage (R. v. Bowles (1810), 1 Wight. 116).

(i) R. v. Fry (1793), 3 Anst. 718, n.

(k) Sheriffs Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 55), s. 20 (4).

(m) R. v. Freme (1815), 2 Price, 58 (writ of extent against acceptors of bills of exchange in favour of the Crown, the drawers of which, after the execution of the process, took up and paid them; the sheriff, having retained poundage, was ordered to repay it to the assignees of the bankrupt acceptor's estate). The rule that the sheriff is not entitled to levy poundage in such cases seems to be founded on the principle that the Crown does not, generally speaking, receive or pay costs. In cases—as for instance in suits on bonds or specialties (see stat. (1541—42) 33 Hen. 8, c. 39, s. 36)—where the Crown has a statutory right to recover costs, poundage for which the Crown is liable to the sheriff may be levied as an item of such costs (R. v. Collingridge (1816), 3 Price, 280).

SECT. 3.—*Proceedings other than Crown Process.*SUB-SECT. 1.—In General.

1457. A sheriff or sheriff's officer concerned in the execution of process directed to the sheriff, other than process for the recovery of sums due to the Crown, may demand and take such fees and poundage as may from time to time be fixed by order of the Lord Chancellor with the consent of the judges of the Court of Appeal and High Court, or any three of them, and with the concurrence of the Treasury (n), and, until they may be altered by any such order, any fees and poundage authorised by or in pursuance of any enactment repealed by the Sheriffs Act, 1887 (o).

1458. The amount of the poundage, fees, and expenses of the execution may in all cases be levied over and above the sum recovered (p). This rule applies although the judgment creditor may not be entitled to the costs of the action in which the judgment was obtained (q). The amount of the authorised fees may be levied though they are not indorsed on the writ, and it is not necessary that the sheriff should particularise the respective items in his return to the writ (r). But if, after seizure, the judgment creditor becomes disentitled to recover the amount of the debt, the sheriff is not entitled, at all events without the creditor's instructions, to sell any portion of the goods seized for the purpose of paying his fees and expenses (s).

SUB-SECT. 2.—Poundage.

1459. In respect of process otherwise than at the instance of the Crown, poundage (a) at the rate of 1s. in the pound, where the sum does not exceed £100, and where it exceeds that sum, 1s. in the pound for the first £100, and 6*d.* in the pound on the amount in excess of £100, may be demanded and taken in respect of any sum levied by SUB-SECT. 3.—Writ of Fieri Facias.

Fees on execution of feri facias.

1461. The fees, other than poundage (f), to which a sheriff is entitled in respect of the execution of a writ of feri facias, are fixed by a statutory order and table dated the 3rd August, 1888 (g).

(b) Stat. (1587) 29 Eliz. c. 4, s. 1; Estreats Act, 1716 (3 Geo. 1, c. 15), s. 3. The right to poundage under these statutes is not affected by stat. (1837) 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 55, s. 2 (now repealed), or the table of fees (as to which see note (n), p. 837, post) made under it (Davies v. Griffiths (1838), 4 M. & W. 377; Pilkington v. Cooke (1847), 16 M. & W. 615; Wrightup v. Greenacre (1847), 10 Q. B. 1), or by the order made under the Sheriffs Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 55), as to fees for the execution of writs of fi. fa. (see note (g), infra). The right to poundage under the statute of Elizabeth extends to the sheriff of a county of a city or county of a town (see p. 796, ante) executing the process of a superior court, but not to such a sheriff executing the process of an inferior court (Lyster v. Bromley (1632), Cro. Car. 286).

1. For expenses incurred by the sheriff's officer in making inquiries as to the goods of an execution debtor, and as to claims for rent and other claims on the goods, the actual expenses not exceeding under any circumstances	1	1	0
2. For seizure by the sheriff's officer; for each building or place separately rated at which a seizure is made	1	1	0
3. For mileage: to include the mileage of the bailiff or the man in possession, per mile from the sheriff's officer's residence	0	1	0
4. For man in possession, per day	0	5	0
To provide his own board in every case.
5. For removal of goods or animals to a place of safe keeping, when necessary, the actual cost.
6. When goods or animals are removed, for warehousing and taking charge of the same (including feeding of animals) 2½ per cent. of the value of the goods or animals removed, or the sum indorsed on the writ of execution, whichever is the less. No fees for keeping possession of the goods or animals to be charged after the goods or animals have been removed.
7. For the inventory and valuation, cataloguing, lotting, and preparing for sale, when no sale takes place by reason of the execution being withdrawn, satisfied, or stopped, 2½ per cent. on the value of the goods.
8. For advertising and giving publicity to the sale by auction, the sum actually and necessarily paid.

1462. The fees numbered 1, 2 and 3 in the table are payable by the execution creditor, and are not recoverable by him although the execution proves abortive (h). The fees numbered 2—6 and 8—11 are to be levied in every case in which the execution is completed by sale as fees payable to sheriffs were levied before the making of the order. Where the execution is withdrawn, satisfied or stopped, the fees are payable by the person issuing the execution, or the person at whose instance the sale is stopped, as the case may be, and the amount of any costs and charges payable under the scale are to be taxed by a master of the Supreme Court or district registrar of the High Court, in case the sheriff and the party liable to pay such costs and charges differ as to the amount thereof (h). There is no appeal from a master or district registrar as to the amount of costs and charges so payable (i), unless the question involved is one of principle, and not merely of amount (k).

1463. Fees in respect of execution on civil process, writs of trial and inquiry, inquisitions on writs of elegit and on compulsory acquisition of land, and jury process, except so far as they are superseded by the order as to writs of fiery facias already referred to (m), depend upon various statutory rules made from time to time (n).

10. For any sale by private contract, half the percentage allowed on a sale by auction.
11. Poundage and the fee for delivery of the writ to the under-sheriff to be the same as before the making of this order.

(h) These provisions are contained in the order fixing the table of fees. The execution creditor is liable to the sheriff for the fees where the sheriff withdraws pursuant to an order of the court; see Montague v. Davies, Benachi & Co., [1911] 2 K. B. 595. Part VI.—Expiration of Office.

PART VI. Expiration of Office.

1465. It is the duty of every sheriff, at the expiration of his term of office, to deliver to the incoming sheriff a correct list and account under his hand of all prisoners in his custody and of all rolls and writs in his hands not wholly executed by him, with all such particulars as are necessary to explain to the incoming sheriff the several matters intended to be transferred to him, and to turn over and transfer to the incoming sheriff all such prisoners, rolls and writs, and all records, books and matters appertaining to the office of sheriff (q).

Duty to deliver writs and account to incoming sheriff.

The incoming sheriff must thereupon sign and give to the outgoing sheriff a duplicate of the list and account, which operates as a sufficient discharge of and from all the prisoners therein mentioned and the execution of the writs and other matters therein contained, and the incoming sheriff then stands charged with the prisoners and with the execution and care of the rolls, writs and other matters contained in the list and account (r).

Discharge of outgoing sheriff.

Audit.

1467. All accounts so transmitted must be examined and audited in such manner as the Treasury by warrant directs, and the Treasury may by warrant make such provisions as to the transmission, examination, verification, and audit of such accounts, and for ascertaining the balances due from and the discharge of the persons accounting as it thinks proper (d).

Oath verifying account.

If under any such warrant it is necessary for a sheriff or under-sheriff to take any oath to any account or matter relating thereto, the oath, unless the Treasury requires his personal examination before the auditor, may be sworn before any judge of the High Court or master of the Supreme Court or any commissioner for oaths or justice of the peace (e).

Default in rendering accounts.
